11. It is not that the members of the said Indian Tea Association or the Association or the applicants did not know of the said suit or the proceedings therein. The Indian Tea Association and/or the applicants had knowledge of the said suit filed by the Central Bank of India as long ago as 18th June, 1970. They stood by; they did not take any step in the matter. The Assam Bengal Cereals Ltd. by furnishing the said Bank guarantee mentioned above has taken away the said goods. The aforesaid facts, to say the least, show want of diligence on the part of Indian Tea Association. A summary procedure in the form of an application in pro interesse suo be resorted to or allowed to be resorted to only by a party who shows the utmost diligence. See Sreedhar Chaudhury v. Nilmoni Chaudhury, 41 Cal LJ 197 at p. 201 - (AIR 1925 Cal 681). An examination pro interesse suo is never ordered unless the applicant shows diligence.

12. Now there is no goods in the possession of the Joint Receivers in regard to which there may be an examination in pro interesse suo of the Indian Tea Association. Therefore, in my opinion, no application can be made now for examination in pro interesse suo by any person. If the Indian Tea Association is directed to be added it shall be deemed to have made the application in pro interesse suo only when the order for its addition is made.

13. The Indian Tea Association cannot in my view be added as a party petitioner at this stage.

14. For the reasons stated above I pass the following order:—

Leave is given to the petitioner Assam Bengal Cereals Ltd. to amend the petition as shown in red ink in paragraph 3-A of the draft petition being Annexure 'D' thereto. Leave is given to re-verify the petition after such amendments are effected. Amendments be effected on the signed copy of the minutes upon the applicant's Solicitor's undertaking to Court to have this order drawn up and filed. The applicant must pay the cost of this application. Leave is given to the respondents to file an affidavit-in-opposition to the amended petition within three days of the service upon them of an amendment copy of the petition. All parties to act on a signed copy of the minutes.

ANIL KUMAR SEN, J.

Mahboobur Rahman, Petitioner v. Public Service Commission, West Bengal and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Case No. 45 (W) of 1970, D/- 15-11-1971.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Writ petition — Public Service Commission exercising its discretion regarding matter within its independent jurisdiction — Commission whether answerable to High Court. (Para 5)

It is undoubtedly true that the commission has got its independent jurisdiction and in exercising its discretion or deciding matters left to its individual judgment the commission is not answerable to anyone including the High Court. But it is not proper for the commission to take the view that it is not answerable at all to High Court and that it has been invested with powers to act arbitrarily or that it is above the law in any manner. If the commission fails to act bona fide or if it acts arbitrarily the High Court possesses ample power to make the commission amend. (Para 5)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Petitioner called for interview by Public Service Commission on a short list which was not final — List revised and petitioner rightly excluded on ground of ineligibility — The fact that the petitioner had on one occasion been called for an interview without real eligibility, would not prevent commission from rectifying its own error at a subsequent stage nor would it confer any legal right on the petitioner. (Paras 7, 8)

Syed Ataunnabi, for Petitioner; P. K. Sengupta and Pabitra Kumar Basu, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This Rule was issued on a Writ petition. This Rule could not have been issued but for the unreasonable conduct on the part of the Public Service Commission, West Bengal.

2. Petitioner is a member of the West Bengal Junior Educational Service and is the lecturer of Arabic at the Calcutta Madrasa. He is an examiner of Arabic in the M. A. Examinations of the University of Calcutta. On October 25, 1968, the respondent Commission, invited applications from eligible candidates for the post of the Principal, Calcutta Madrasa, a cadre post in the West Bengal General Educational Service. In the advertisement it was set out that one of the essential qualifications is a first class master's degree or a doctorate degree with first class honours or second class master's degree of an Indian University in Arabic or equivalent. The petitioner does not possess any master's degree from any Indian University but he claims that he obtained the higher diploma of the faculty of Theology from the Ajahar University, Cairo which is equivalent to the requisite First Class M. A. degree of an Indian University. The petitioner applied to the respondent in answer to the aforesaid advertisement inviting candidates. His application was filed on November 18, 1968 with necessary requisites. By a memo dated March 17, 1969 the petitioner was called to appear for an interview before the respondent on April 7, 1969. But by a further memo dated April 2, 1969 such interview was postponed until further communication in the matter. Unfortunately petitioner got no further communication but he came to know that fresh interview letters for the said post were being issued in favour of other candidates. Thereupon on August 6, 1969 the petitioner made a representation to the respondent requesting the respondent to allow him to appear at the postponed interview which was fixed on August 11, 1969. The respondent gave no reply to this representation but the interview for the other candidates were held on August 11, 1969.

3. On these facts on October 7, 1969, the petitioner moved this court with the present Writ petition on an allegation that though eligible and once called for an interview the respondent had wrongfully and arbitrarily excluded the petitioner from the interview and as such from an opportunity for being considered for such appointment. This court did not issue any rule on the writ petition when it was entertained but directed a notice of the application to be served on the commission which was duly served. Thereafter the application was adjourned from day to day but the respondent refused to appear or answer the allegations made in the writ petition. No step was taken to enlighten this court under what circumstances the petitioner who was once selected and called for an interview was subsequently excluded therefrom. Accordingly, on January 2, 1970 this court had no other alternative but to issue a rule on the uncontroverted statements made in the writ petition.

4. Mr. P. K. Sengupta who along with Mr. Pabitra Kumar Basu is now appearing on behalf of the respondent informs this court that it is after a long persuasion that he could impress upon the commission that an affidavit-in-opposition to the rule should be filed disclosing the circumstances in which the petitioner was excluded from the interview. According to Mr. Sengupta such persuasion was necessary as the respondent thought it unnecessary to file any answer to the petition itself on the ground that the commission is not answerable for its conduct.

5. In my view the stand taken by the commission cannot but be regretfully disapproved and it is really unfortunate that a responsible authority should have behaved in this manner. It is undoubtedly true that the commission has got its independent jurisdiction and in exercising its discretion or deciding matters left to its individual judgment the commission is not answerable to anyone including this court. This court was quite aware of this position and consequent limitation of its own jurisdiction even when the writ petition was entertained. But the commission should not have thought that it had been invested with powers to act arbitrarily or that it was above the law in any manner. Under the existing Constitution, our country is ruled by rule of law which affords no sanction for exercise of arbitrary powers by authorities set up thereunder. If the commission fails to act bona fide or if it acts arbitrarily — as was the ex parte allegation on the Writ Petition — this court possess ample power to make the commission amend. As it appears from the facts set out hereinafter the commission has now pleaded reasons for excluding the petitioner but unfortunately the commission failed to appreciate that the reasons should have been disclosed to the applicant at the proper time before he came to this court or when the notice of the writ petition was given to the respondent. Had that been done there may not have been any occasion to issue a rule. This court finds absolute lack of propriety on the part of the respondent commission in taking the view that it is not answerable at all to this court.

6. An affidavit has since been filed by the commission wherein all the allegations referred to hereinbefore made by the petitioner are admitted by the commission except the fact that the higher diploma of the Cairo University has not been considered by the commission to be equivalent to a First Class M. A. degree of an Indian University. According to this affidavit the petitioner was no doubt called for an interview on the earlier occasion on a short list prepared which was not final and which was later revised. On such revision the petitioner was found not to be possessing the minimum academic qualification and as such he was excluded from the interview.

7. The learned Advocate for the petitioner comments that it is strange that the commission could have called for interview candidates even before finally scrutinising the applications for the eligibility of the candidates, so that even after once being called for interview a candidate can later be excluded from such interview. In my view the learned Advocate is justified in making this comment on the facts of this case. But even if the petitioner had on one occasion been called for an interview without real eligibility, that would not confer any legal right on him. So if this court finds that he was rightly excluded on the ground of ineligibility, this court would be unable to render any assistance to the petitioner.

8. The learned Advocate appearing in support of this rule has contended that the higher diploma of the Cairo University should have been accepted by the commission to be equivalent to a First Class M. A. degree of an Indian University. Much reliance has been placed by him on the fact that the petitioner is being appointed an examiner in Arabic for the M. A. Examination by the Calcutta University. But the commission does not consider such a diploma to be equivalent to a M. A. degree far less a First Class M. A. degree. In the absence of any official equation of the diploma with a M. A. degree of the Indian University, the matter must lie within the judgment of the commission itself to adjudge whether the higher diploma of the Cairo University is equivalent to M. A. degree or not. The petitioner may have been appointed an examiner of Arabic by the University of Calcutta for the M. A. Examination but the commission is not bound to act on the wisdom of the University of Calcutta nor is the learned Advocate right in his contention that this court has any jurisdiction to adjudge the same by itself or sit in judgment over the decision of the commission. Therefore as it now appears from the affidavit-in-opposition filed at last that though the petitioner was called for interview at one stage he was later excluded on just grounds. The commission might not have acted properly in once inviting the petitioner to an interview without proper verification of the application but that would not prevent the commission from rectifying its own error at a subsequent stage. All that the commission should have done — as this court expects the commission to do — the commission should have informed the petitioner at least in answer to his representation, the reason for his exclusion. Had the commis-gion done, so, it would have saved the trouble of this court and the unnecessary expenses both by the petitioner and by the commission itself.

9. On the reasons as aforesaid this application must be held to have no merits and the rule is accordingly discharged. But in view of the facts set out hereinbefore I hold the commission liable for the costs incurred by the petitioner and I direct the commission to pay the costs, hearing fee being assessed at ten gold mohurs.

10. Let a copy of this order be forwarded to the Chairman, of the Public Service Commission, West Bengal.

Application dismissed.

ORDER:— In this application under Article 226 of the Constitution the petitioner challenges the notice dated 2nd December, 1968, issued by the Estate Officer under the provisions of Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958. The petitioner was for a long time a tenant in respect of a building known and numbered as premises Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 12 of the Old Court House Street, Calcutta. The petitioner was paying rent at a particular rate. The Government of India purchased the said property on or about the 31st January, 1963. By a notice dated 22nd July, 1963, the Deputy Director of Estates and Under Secretary of the Government of India on behalf of the President of India terminated the tenancy in respect of the said premises on the expiry of the month of August, 1963. On the 21st September, 1963, the Estate Officer, Government of India, informed the petitioner that the petitioner was in unauthorised occupation of the said premises and called upon the petitioner to show cause on or before the 10th October, 1963, as to why an order of eviction should not be made against the petitioner. The petitioner duly showed cause and after negotiations there was an agreement and the petitioner was allowed to remain in occupation till the end of October, 1965. The petitioner vacated the said premises on the 29th October, 1965. On the 27th September, 1965, the said Officer demanded damages from the petitioner at the rate of Rs. 2,626/- for the period between the 1st September, 1963 to the 30th June, 1965 and called upon the petitioner to show cause why an order requiring the petitioner to pay the said amount should not be made. By another notice dated the 5th October, 1966, the Estate Officer again demanded from the petitioner damages at the said rate for the period from the 1st July, 1965, to the 29th October, 1965. The petitioner duly showed cause. Then the Estate Officer made an order under Section 7 (2) of the Act. There was an appeal preferred and the appeal was heard by the Chief Judge, City Civil Court, Calcutta and by an order dated the 6th March, 1968, the learned Chief Judge, City Civil Court, Calcutta, set aside the order of assessment of damages under Section 7 (2) of the Act and remanded the case back to the Estate Officer for passing a fresh order after taking evidence of both sides. By a notice dated 2nd December, 1968, the Estate Officer issued another notice under Section 7 (2) of the Act and the respondents considered that the damages amounting to Rs. 53,925 were due for the period between the 1st September, 1963 to the 29th October, 1965 and the petitioner-Company was asked to show cause on or before the 18th December, 1968. It is the propriety of the last mentioned order that is under challenge in this application under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

2. In the case of Standard Literature Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, 71 Cal WN 719 = (AIR 1968 Cal 1) the Special Bench of this Court upheld the said Act. In the said case however the controversy was not raised in the present form. In the case of Rejendra Prasad Singh v. Union of India, 72 Cal WN 787 = (AIR 1968 Cal 560) the Special Bench of this Court following the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Northern India Caterers Pvt. Ltd. v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1581, held that Section 5 of the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958, was violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution and, therefore, void. Sections 5 and 7 of the Act provide inter alia as follows:

"5. Eviction of unauthorised occupants.

(1) If, after considering the cause, if any, shown by any person in pursuance of a notice under Sec. 4 and any evidence he may produce in support of the same and after giving him a reasonable opportunity of being heard, the estate officer is satisfied that the public premises are in unauthorised occupation, the estate officer may, on a date to be fixed for the purpose, make an order of eviction, for reasons to be recorded therein, directing that the public premises shall be vacated by all persons who may be in occupation thereof or any part thereof, and cause a copy of the order to be affixed on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the public premises.

(2) If any person refuses or fails to comply with the order of eviction within forty-five days of the date of its publication under sub-section (1), the estate officer of any other officer duly authorised by the estate officer in this behalf may evict that person from, and take possession of, the public premises and may, for that purpose, use such force as may be necessary:

Provided that in the case of any such person who is not a Government employee and who has been in continuous occupation of the public premises for a period exceeding three years immediately preceding the date of the publication of the order of eviction, the estate officer shall not, if any application is made to him in this behalf, evict such person from the public premises within ninety days of such publication.

7. Power to recover rent or damages in respect of public premises as arrears of land-revenue.

(1) Where any person is in arrears of rent payable in respect of any public premises, the estate officer may, by order, require that person to pay the same within such time and in such instalments as may be specified in the order.

(2) Where any person is, or has at any time been, in unauthorised occupation of any public premises, the estate officer may, having regard to such principles of assessment of damages as may be prescribed, assess the damages on account of the use and occupation of such premises and may, by order, require that person to pay the damages within such time and in such instalments as may be specified in the order:

Provided that no such order shall be made until after issue of a notice in writing to the person calling upon him to show cause within such time as may be specified in the notice why such order should not be made, and until his objections, if any, and any evidence he may produce in support of the same, have been considered by the estate officer.

(3) If any person refuses or fails to pay the arrears of rent or any instalment thereof payable under sub-section (1) or the damages or any instalment thereof payable under sub-section (2) within the time specified in the order relating thereto, the estate officer may issue a certificate for the amount due to the Collector who shall proceed to recover the same as an arrear of land revenue."

The Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Amendment Act, 1968 was passed by the Parliament on 16th August, 1968 and the relevant amendment with which we are concerned provides as follows:

"4. Insertion of new Section 10-E — After Section 10-D of the principal Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

"10-E. Bar of Jurisdiction — No Civil Court shall have jurisdiction to entertain any suit or proceeding in respect of the eviction of any person who is in unauthorised occupation of any public premises or the recovery of the arrears of rent payable under sub-section (1) of Section 7 or the damages payable under sub-section (2) of that section or costs awarded to the Central Government under sub-section (4-A) of Section 9 or any portion of such rent, damages or costs."

3. The main question that was canvassed in this application is, whether the proposed action under Section 7 (2) of the aforesaid Act mentioned in the petition is permissible in law. It was urged that Section 7 could not stand independently of Section 5 of the said Act. Unless it was determined that a person was in unauthorised occupation, there could not be any scope of determination of damages by a person in unauthorised occupation, it was submitted. Therefore, it was submitted that Section 7 could not have any independent existence apart from

Section 5. It was also urged that Section 7 also suffered from the same infirmity as mentioned in Section 5 of the Act inasmuch as wide discretion had been given to the Estate Officer without laying down any guiding principle to determine whether to go to Civil Court or to take steps under provisions of the Act. Therefore, it was urged that on the parity of reasoning given in the Supreme Court in the case of AIR 1967 SC 1581 Section 7 (2) of the Act was also void. It was submitted that Section 7 (2) of the Act was void because it violated the provisions of Article 14 of the Constitution and it could not be amended by the provisions of the Amendment Act, 1968; the only way was to repeal the Act and enact a new legislation removing the infirmity. This point has been exhaustively considered by the Full Bench of the Delhi High Court in the case of P. L. Mehra v. D. R. Khanna, AIR 1971 Delhi 1 (FB). The majority of the learned Judges of the Delhi High Court consisting of Hardayal Hardy and Parkash Narain, JJ. came to the conclusion that the statute which was void within the meaning of Article 13 (2) of the Constitution was non-existent for all purposes including repeal, amendment or enforceability. They further came to the conclusion that the whole of the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958, was void as it enabled the Government to discriminate between the occupants of Public Premises arbitrarily by adopting the summary procedure against some while giving to the others the benefit of the regular civil suits. As the Act was merely amended in 1968 by the insertion of an additional section, namely, Section 10-E, the amendment was ineffective and the Act remained void. In my opinion Section 7 of the said Act suffers from the same infirmity as Section 5. Section 7 (2) is, therefore, liable to be struck down. The fact that Section 7 (2) was not struck down prior to the passing of the amendment by the Amendment Act, 1968, makes no difference because if an Act is void it is void irrespective of the fact whether it has been so declared by the Court. In that view of the matter on the same reasons mentioned by the Supreme Court in the case of AIR 1967 SC 1581, I am of the opinion that Section 7 (2) before the Amendment Act, 1968, was void. I am of the opinion that the Parliament was incompetent to enact the said Section 7 (2) of the Act in violation of Article 14 of the Constitution because of Article 13 (2) of the Constitution. Section 7 (2) of the Act was a nullity ab initio. The doctrine of eclipse has no application to post-Constitution laws infringing the Fundamental Rights as they would be void ab initio to the extent of their contravention of the Fundamental Rights. For this reliance may be placed on the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Deepchand v. State of U. P., AIR 1959 SC 648. Therefore the said void section cannot be made valid by amendment. Therefore Section 4 of the Amendment Act of 1968 cannot make Section 7 (2) of the principal Act valid. In so far as the majority of the learned Judges of the Delhi High Court expressed the aforesaid opinion in the aforesaid decision, I am in respectful agreement with the decision of the majority of the learned Judges of that High Court. It is not necessary for me to decide whether the whole Act was void or not. In the aforesaid view of the matter I, therefore, hold that the Section 7 (2) of the Act was void and could not be amended in the manner purported to be done by the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Amendment Act, 1968. Therefore, the action proposed to be taken under Section 7 (2) of the Act by the order of 2nd December, 1968, is not permissible. In the aforesaid view of the matter it is not necessary for me to decide other points urged in this application.

4. In the premises, this application must succeed. The respondents are directed not to give effect to the said notice dated the 2nd December 1968, mentioned in the petition and not to proceed further in pursuance thereof. Let a Writ in the nature of Mandamus issue accordingly. The Rule is made absolute to the extent indicated above. There will be no order as to costs. There will be a stay of operation of this order for 12 weeks. During the period of stay interim order will also continue.

Application allowed.

Contempt of Courts Act (1952), Section 1 — Contempt — What amounts to.

A defamatory attack on a Judge unless it is also calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or proper administration of law by such court

S. N. Banerjee, for Petitioner; K. B. Roy, and Amaresh Ch. Bhattacharjee, for Opposite Party.

AJAY K. BASU, J.:— This is a Rule issued by our learned brothers R. N. Dutt and K. K. Mitra, JJ. under Contempt of Court's Act against the opposite party B. Mazumdar alias Baimalendu Majumdar, M. A., B. L., Court Inspector, Barrackpore, for contempt of Shri Sailendra Nath Chakraborty, Magistrate, 1st Class, Barrackpore, as reported to this Hon'ble Court.

2. Pursuant to the direction of this court the alleged contemnor B. Majumdar appeared in person before us and showed cause through his Advocate Sri K. B. Roy.

3. The short facts leading to the Rule are as follows:

The said Magistrate Sailendra Nath Chakraborty insisted that Court Inspectors must use cartridge or conquest papers in their petitions intended to be filed before the said court. But as the police fund did not permit such expenditure the Court Inspectors could not use such papers in their petitions before the said court and for that the Court Inspector alleged to have incurred the displeasure of the said Magistrate. This will be evident from Annexures C and D. The learned Magistrate has taken strong exceptions to the two communications one dt. 1-4-1970. (Annexure A) and another dated 6-7-1970 (Annexure B) sent by the alleged contemnor both to the District Magistrate, 24-Parganas, with copies to the S. D. M., the S. P. and the A. S. P.

4. Now in this first letter dated 1-4-1970 the real point for consideration is whether the following sentences constitute contempt of court. The relevant sentences run as follows:

"Shri Chakraborty, Magistrate, 1st Class, Barrackpore is not of judicious temperament and at the same time very much whimsical. That his behaviour is rude and rough and this will be supported by each and every member of the Barrackpore Bar and also by each and every employee in S. D. M.'s office who frequently come in contact with him ... That Shri Chakraborty has recently passed an order that all petitions and hajiras of witnesses as filed in this court in connection with the police case must be filed in cartridge or conquest papers ... and making a note "No notice is taken of the petition as it is not in a cartridge or conquest paper ... It is surprising that Shri Chakraborty has been accepting petitions in excise cases from the excise prosecutors in quarter size Foolscape papers which are neither cartridge nor conquest papers ... he is unfavourably disposed towards the police who are being unreasonably discriminated against by the learned Magistrate ... this attitude of Shri Chakraborty towards the Police cases is really unhappy and something may kindly be done immediately to remedy the existing state of affairs."

Thereafter on the 6th of July, 1970 an incident happened in court between the said Magistrate and the Court Inspector and the Court Inspector wrote a letter to the District Magistrate on the said date recording the entire incident and sent copies to S. D. M. and S. P. (Exhibit B). In that letter he inter alia wrote:

"... Whereupon I said 'well Sir how will it be possible for O. C. to submit his explanation unless he gets a copy? Your honour should not act in a vindictive manner'. As soon as I said this Shri Chakraborty became exceedingly excited and flared up and asked his Bench Clerk to go to the door (there is only one door for entrance and exit for the room) and shut the same. Seeing that Shri Chakraborty had lost his temper and was out to humiliate me in the presence of the Lawyers and litigant I left the Court room."

... .. The learned Magistrate had been acting with a bias against the prosecution. It will be very difficult for my Court Inspectors to conduct cases in his court if the learned Magistrate behaves or rather misbehaves with the police officers in the way described above. The learned Magistrate is ill-tempered, suffers from an extraordinary sense of 'Superiority Complex' and hardly loses an opportunity of insulting the police and putting them in trouble."

The incident happened on the 6th July, 1970, and was duly recorded by the Court Inspector contemporaneously by his letter of the same date, but on the 13th July, 1970 the said Magistrate writes in the order sheet:—

"I had occasion to go through the copy sent to S. D. O. Barrackpore by the Court Inspector, Barrackpore of the communication addressed by him to the District Magistrate 24-Parganas, through the additional S. P. Barrackpore and the S. P., 24-Parganas. The communication is highly disparaging and it contains contemptuous remarks and comments on my work as a Judge, and also on my temperament. Each and every allegation made regarding my judicial conduct and temperament is false. The communication also contains a false and distorted version of certain incidents taking place in my court on 6-7-1970. I think it would be just and proper to place the matter before the Hon'ble High Court for favour of considering if appropriate proceedings under the Contempt of Courts Act should be drawn up against the author of the communication; and it appears that the conduct of the O. C., Titagarh may incidentally come up for review by their Lordships: and in this circumstance I do not want to proceed any further against the O. C. for repeated non-compliance with my orders.

I would like to note here that the Court Inspector actually uttered words for more contemptuous than he professes to have done in the communication. I may quote them verbatim. 'You are acting vindictively. Why should a Court be so mean?'

For the ends of justice and for the vindication of the dignity of the court, I told the Court Inspector immediately after he had used the invectives against me, that I would proceed against him under Section 480, Criminal P. C. and I at once asked him not to leave the Court room, but he hurriedly left. I did not like to proceed with the matter any further after recording the events in the order sheet, nor did I think it expedient to file a formal complaint before some other Magistrate which would entail a complicated and protracted proceeding." (Annexure H).

5. On 4th September, 1970 the said Magistrate Shri S. N. Chakraborty wrote a letter to the Registrar of this Court praying for drawing up contempt proceeding against Shri B. Mazumdar, Court Inspector, Barrackpore. At first the court directed the Sessions Judge, 24 Parganas to look into the same and settle the matter amicably if possible and report to this Court. But as the officer was on leave and then transferred nothing was done and thereafter the rule was issued.

6. Mr. K. B. Roy, the learned Advocate appearing for the alleged contemner, submitted that his client did not commit any Contempt of Court but in case this court holds that he had committed any contempt of court his client will tender his unqualified apology and drew Court's attention to paragraph 3 of his affidavit which says,

"At the outset I beg to state that I have the highest regard for this Hon'ble court and also judiciary as a whole and that I have no desire or intention knowingly or otherwise to violate and/or flout the dignity of the judiciary in any way. I tender my unqualified apology for any expression used, conduct expressed, actions done by me in connection with the matters referred to by Shri S. N. Chakraborty, Magistrate 1st Class, Barrackpore and I crave pardon and put myself at the mercy of the court."

It may be that the Court Inspector was exasperated and so wrote those two impugned letters. None of those two letters no doubt leaves a bad taste in the mouth and seem to be improper and indecent specially the two phrases 'bias against prosecution' and 'vindictive manner' used against the learned Magistrate are really very unfortunate. But the question is considering all the facts and circumstances of the case can the two communications be regarded as 'Contempt of Court'.

7. The contempt of court has been judicially determined by various judgments of the Supreme Court and the High Courts. The main criterion of contempt is interference or likelihood of interference with the course of justice. Fair and reasonable criticism of the conduct are character of the Judges in relation to the judicial duties does not amount to a contempt. Bona fide complaints against judicial officers addressed to authorities to seek redress for some grievances and not intended to exert pressure upon them in the exercise of judicial functions or to diminish their authority as Judges by vilifying them cannot be treated as Contempts (Rex v. C. B. S. Nayyar. AIR 1950

All 549). It has also been held by the Supreme Court that a defamatory attack on a Judge unless it is also calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or proper administration of law by such court will not be treated as contempt of court. (Brahma Prakash Sharma v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 10). Criticism of Judges in relation to something done by them which has absolutely no relevance to their position as Judges or criticism of the executive acts of a judicial officer where he possesses both executive and judicial functions does not amount to contempt. (AIR 1950 All 549).

8. Now these comments of the Court Inspector in his communications to the District Magistrate do not, in our view, in any way appear really or substantially to interfere with the course of justice. True the word 'vindictive' used against the Magistrate in open Court is certainly not proper but had it been used to scandalise the judge in his judicial works this might amount to contempt of court. But in the present case those words which were used because of the learned Magistrate's order for not sending a copy, is more an executive order rather than a judicial order.

9. This Court should not exercise its jurisdiction of contempt upon a mere question of propriety as it has been held in several decisions that in order to justify the exercise of the jurisdiction in contempt the interference with the due course must be a substantial interference (Rajendra Kumar Garg v. Shafiq Ahmed Azad, AIR 1957 All 37 at p. 46). In Rizwan-ul-Hasan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1953 SC 185 at page 187 it was held:

"the jurisdiction in contempt is not to be invoked unless there is real prejudice which can be regarded as a substantial interference with the due course of justice and that purpose of the court's action is a practical purpose and it is reasonably clear on the authorities that the Court will not exercise its jurisdiction upon a mere question of propriety."

Utterance in the open court of offensive words against the Magistrate as we have stated earlier may amount to contempt in different context but a court will not exercise its extraordinary power of contempt in light occasions where the ends of justice do not require its use.

10. Mr. Roy appearing for the alleged contemner drew our attention to a recent Supreme Court judgment reported in Perspective Publications Pvt. Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 221 where it is said:

"It is open to any one to express fair, reasonable and legitimate criticism of any act or conduct of a Judge in his judicial capacity or even to make a proper and fair comment on any decision given by him because justice is not a cloistered virtue and she must be allowed to suffer the scrutiny and respectful, even though out-spoken, comments of ordinary men."

The test in each case would be whether the impugned publication is a mere defamatory attack on the judge or whether it is calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or the proper administration of law by his court. It is only in the latter case that it will be punishable as contempt. It is one thing to use improper words and another to commit contempt of court.

11. We have given this matter our anxious consideration. Considering the entire case, Annexure A to I, and the circumstances and from the arguments advanced by the learned Advocates we are convinced that Sri Majumder is not guilty of contempt of court as we cannot hold that the two communications by the Court Inspector are calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or the proper administration of law by the Court which would amount to contempt of court or tend directly to interfere with the course of justice (Re: S. C. Roy Choudhury, 56 Cal WN 51 = (AIR 1952 Cal 258) (SB).

12. Mr. Banerjee, the learned D. L. R., appearing for the State has left this matter entirely to us.

13. Before we part with this we should observe that it would have been better if the Court Inspector had couched the communications in more temperate language.

14. We, therefore, discharge the Rule.

BOROOAH, J.:— 15. I agree.
Rule discharged.

Noni Coomar Chakraborty, Ganendra Narayan Roy and Samaresh Chandra Nandi, for Appellants; A. K. Jana with Moni Bhusan Sarkar, for Respondents.

S. K. CHAKRAVARTI, J.:—This appeal is at the instance of the petitioners in an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution against an order passed by our learned brother A. K. Sen, J. by which he had dismissed the application on the ground that the “petitioners have no locus standi to maintain this application disputing the validity or otherwise of the purported acquisition of the aforesaid R. S. Plot No. 212.”

2. The facts giving rise to this appeal are as follows: Certain plots including R. S. Plot No. 212 were notified for acquisition for reclamation of the Salt Lake Area and the notification was published on the 14th of February, 1956. The declaration under Section 6 was made on the 22nd of May, 1968. The present appellants challenged the proceedings on the ground that they were entitled to get notice thereof, and that the same was mala fide and was not for any public purpose etc. That was registered as C.R. 7132(w) of 1968. In that proceeding the R.S. Plot No. 212 was left out. That rule was made absolute on the 15th July, 1969. On the 15th of October 1969 on the self same grounds the petitioners challenged the proceeding in respect of R. S. Plot No. 212 alleging inter alia that through inadvertence it was not included in the earlier application. They claimed that this plot was actually a fishery and formed a part and parcel of their fisheries known as Nalban fisheries, there being no demarcating line between this plot and other plots, and that they had been in occupation of this plot as a fishery since more than 100 years. They had also made out an alternative case to the effect that they had taken settlement of the fishery right on this plot in the benam of Sambhu Nath Chakraborty who had also taken settlement in the benam of some persons known as Pradhans. The State of West Bengal contested this application and raised a preliminary objection to the effect,—we quote the exact words of the learned Trial Judge—that this R.S. Plot No. 212

“is not the property belonging to the petitioners and as the petitioners cannot claim any right, title or interest therein they have no locus standi to maintain this application. According to the respondents the said land belonged to some other person who has not only submitted to the acquisition but also taken a compensation therefor. Thus a dispute as to title having been raised an opportunity was given to the petitioner to substantiate his locus standi to maintain this application by showing that he has got any right, title or interest in the aforesaid plot. Mr. Chakraborty for the petitioner took time to file an additional affidavit to substantiate his points and a supplementary affidavit has since been filed.”

3. The learned Judge discussed the questions involved and came to the opinion that it was “really difficult to decide such a disputed issue as to title on such materials alone and in a proceeding like the present one wherein even the alleged benamdars are not parties.” He also came to the conclusion that the petitioners have no locus standi and dismissed the case. Hence this appeal.

4. Mr. Nani Coomar Chakraborty learned counsel appearing for the appellants has very strenuously contended that the learned Judge was in error in the view he had taken and that there are no complicated questions of title involved in this proceeding and that he could easily decide the same. Mr. Chakraborty has relied on two decisions of the Supreme Court in this connection. Gunwant Kaur v. Bhatinda Municipality, AIR 1970 SC 802 and the other is an unreported decision in Om Prakash v. State of Haryana, (Civil Appeal No. 2542 of 1969, D/- 16-3-1970 (SC)).

5. In both the cases referred to above the applications were dismissed in limine without any notice having been issued even on the other side. In this particular case notice had been issued on the other side. They had filed an affidavit and the learned Judge had even granted an opportunity to the petitioners to file supplementary affidavit. This fact alone would distinguish the instant proceeding from the decisions referred to and relied on by Mr. Chakraborty.

6. What is more, even if we apply the principles enunciated in these two decisions to the facts of the instant proceeding, we do not think that the case would improve, so far as the appellants are concerned. In Gunwant's case, AIR 1970 SC

602 the Supreme Court observed as follows:

"The High Court observed that they will not determine disputed question of fact in a writ petition. But what facts were in dispute and what were admitted could only be determined after an affidavit-in-reply was filed by the State. The High Court, however, proceeded to dismiss the petition in limine. The High Court is not deprived of its jurisdiction to entertain a petition under Art. 226 merely because in considering the petitioner's right to relief questions of fact may fall to be determined. In a petition under Art. 226 the High Court has jurisdiction to try issues both of fact and law. Exercise of jurisdiction is, it is true, discretionary, but the discretion must be exercised on sound judicial principles. When the petition raises questions of fact of a complex nature, which may for their determination require oral evidence to be taken, and on that account the High Court is of the view that the dispute may not appropriately be tried in a writ petition, the High Court may decline to try a petition. Rejection of a petition in limine will normally be justified, where the High Court is of the view that the petition is frivolous or because of the nature of the claim made, dispute sought to be agitated, or that the petition against the party against whom relief is claimed is not maintainable or that the dispute raised thereby is such that it would be inappropriate to try it in the writ jurisdiction, or for analogous reasons."

7. In Omi Prakash's case, (Civil Appeal No. 2542 of 1969, D/- 16-3-1970 (SC)) the Court observed as follows:

"The two judgments referred to by the High Court proceeded on the ground that the High Court would not in deciding a petition for a writ under Art. 226 of the Constitution enter upon disputed questions of fact. But whether in the present case there are disputed questions of fact of such complexity as would render it inappropriate to try in hearing a writ petition is a matter which has never been decided. There is no rule that the High Court will not try issues of fact in a writ petition. In each case the Court has to consider whether the party seeking relief has an alternative remedy which is equally efficacious by a suit, whether refusal to grant relief in a writ petition may amount to denying relief, whether the claim is based substantially upon consideration of evidence oral and documentary of a complicated nature and whether the case is otherwise fit for trial in exercise of the jurisdiction to issue high prerogative writs."

8. In the instant proceeding the learned Judge had referred to a number of facts for the purpose of finding out that the disputed questions of fact were of such complexities as it would not be convenient to try in a writ petition. This conclusion he arrived at after considering the affidavits which had been filed by both the parties. In Sarajuddin and Co. v. Michael Golodetz, AIR 1960 Cal 46 this Court has observed with regard to the discretion used by the Judge.

"That it should not be lightly interfered with is well established on the authorities, but we do not think that law does, in any way, fetter the power of the appellate Court to interfere in a proper case. Where the discretion has been exercised on a consideration of all relevant materials and circumstances and in accordance with sound judicial principles and no injustice has been done, or is likely to result from the trial Court's order, no question of interference arises even if the appellate Court does not agree with the trial Court's actual exercise of discretion or conclusion on the point and might have decided differently if the original discretion had lain with it. In other words, in such circumstances, the appellate Court would not have been entitled to substitute for the trial Court's exercise of discretion in the matter its own exercise of the same. Where, however, the trial Court has not considered all the relevant materials or has proceeded on assumptions, not borne out or justified by the records, or has applied wrong legal principles, leading to an unjust order, it is not only the right—and in the powers of the appellate Court,—but clearly also its duty to interfere with the same and set matters right by undoing the mischief and injustice, occasioned by the trial Court's order."

9. Here, we have been led through the affidavits in question and also the order passed by the learned Judge and we are of opinion that the discretion which he has used is the proper one. There can be no doubt of the fact that the appellants must prove that they have got an interest in the sub-soil of the R. S. Plot No. 212 or at least in the watery portion thereof. So far as the sub-soil is concerned, their case is that they have been in possession of the same for more than 100 years. The record of rights, however, is against them and shows some Mallicks are in possession of it and the right to catch fish was also recorded in the name of one Jew Pradhan from the year 1357 B.S. to 1366 B.S. The Mallicks also claimed compensation as the owners of the lands and that compensation had also been paid to them on the 11th of July, 1969, long before the instant application had been filed. The Mallicks are not parties also in this proceeding. In the circumstances, the complicated questions of title in the plot itself cannot be properly decided in this proceeding. So far as the watery portion is concerned, the petitioners contended that it formed a part and parcel of their Nalban fishery. The State has sworn affidavit to show that it is not correct and that there was always a boundary between the petitioners' Nalban fishery and the watery portion of this land. In the original application or even in affidavit-in-reply the petitioners did not disclose as to how they had acquired the right in the waters. It is only by a supplementary affidavit that they filled up this blank. They alleged that after the lease in favour of Jew Pradhan had expired, Jew's sons had taken lease of the fisheries from the Mullicks on the 2nd December, 1959 and had also executed a deed of nadabi in favour of Dr. Chakraborty who is alleged therein to have taken bandobast of the jalkar in the name of Jew's sons, and that Dr. Chakraborty was also the benamdar of the petitioners, and in affidavit had admitted that. The very fact that Jew's name was recorded as having the right of fishing over this plot from 1357 to 1366 B.S. would negative the petitioners' contention that they had been in possession of this fishery for more than 100 years. There is no affidavit from Jew to show that he had given up the possession on the expiry of the period of his lease. Moreover, the petitioners' case depends on a double benami which is, on the very face of it, very improbable. It cannot be understood as to why this double benami had to be gone into. Merely because a person says that he is the benamdar of another, would not show that it is benami. The question of benami is always a mixed question of law and fact and should not be decided in the circumstances of this case in a writ petition. It should also be noted in this connection that in the supplementary affidavit in paragraph 3 (d) the petitioners have definitely made out a case that "the said Jew Proadhan became a direct lessee under the State of West Bengal in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 (2) proviso of the Estates Acquisition Act. I submit that the said Giri Mohan Mallick and/or his successor-in-interest, namely, the said Sambhu Nath Mallick and others not having possessed the said Plot No. 212 on the date of vesting; but the said Jew Proadhan having possessed the said "Tank Fishery" on the date of vesting under a Jalkar lease for a period from 1357 to 1366 B.S. the said Giri Mohan Mallick and his successors namely Sabhu Nath Mallick and others were only entitled to compensation for their superior interest in the said Jalkar under the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act." It is clear that the case made out in this paragraph is inconsistent with the main case made out by the petitioners. If the interest of the Mallicks had vested during the continuance of the lease of Jew, then the Mullicks could not have leased the same again to the sons of Jew through whom the petitioners claim. It is obvious therefore that the petition raises questions of fact of a complex nature, which require oral evidence to be taken and also to be decided in the presence of the Mullicks, Jiut, his son and Dr. Chakraborty, and cannot appropriately be decided in a writ petition.

10. In the circumstances, we agree with the learned Judge in the view that he had taken and dismiss the appeal. The interim injunction is vacated.

11. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.:— 12.

I agree that the appeal should be dismissed as proposed and I would like to say my reasons in support.

13. This is an appeal by the petitioners against the order passed by A. K. Sen, J. on March 5, 1970, dismissing the application of the appellants under Article 226 (1) of the Constitution. The preliminary ground on which application was dismissed was that the petitioners had no locus standi to move the application.

14. The facts as borne out by the petition and supplementary affidavits as also by documents produced at the hearing are as follows:

(a) The petitioners and their co-sharers had been the owners in possession over a century of two fisheries known as Nalban Fishery and Bherry No. 4 in village Dhapa Manpur comprising one common sheet of water over various plots including plot No. 212. The petitioners in or about August, 1968, came to know from newspapers about the land acquisition proceedings for acquisition of the lands of the said fisheries and they challenged the acquisition proceedings on various grounds, by filing petition under Article 226 (1) of the Constitution giving rise to Civil Rule No. 7132 (W) of 1968. Similar rules on petitions filed by other persons in respect of their fisheries were issued by this Court and by its judgment made in all the rules it was held that the acquisition proceedings were not in accordance with the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 and accordingly a writ of mandamus was issued restraining the State of West Bengal from proceeding with the said acquisition.

(b) The petitioners contended that R. S. Plot No. 212 formed part of their Nalban Fishery within its common sheet of water and had always been in their ownership and possession but through inadvertence, the said plot was not mentioned in the petition of Civil Rule No. 7132(W) of 1968. Taking advantage of the omission, the State Government had been taking steps to fill up the portion of Nalban Fishery appertaining to the said plot with sand and silt of Ganges. On the ground as were urged in the above rules the petitioners by filing another application under Article 226 (1) of the Constitution challenged the acquisition proceedings as being void as it was not in accordance with law and prayed inter alia for a writ of mandamus commanding the State Government and its officers to forbear from proceeding further with the said acquisition proceedings.

(b) Upon the issue of rule nisi on the said application the State Government filed its affidavit-in-opposition as return to the said rule, contending that the petitioners had no locus standi to file the application, as the R.S. Plot No. 212, which was demarcated by a bundh, did not belong to the petitioners. It was stated that the plot belonged to Giri Mohan Mallick and on his death his heirs Sambhunath Mallick and others inherited the same. The name of Giri Mohan Mallick appeared in the present settlement record and the said heirs duly filed their claim under Section 9 of the Land Acquisition Act. An award was made in their favour for the acquisition of their interest by the State and the compensation was duly received by them, as it appears, on July 11, 1969, while possession thereof was taken by the State Government in due course. Other allegations about the alleged illegality of the land acquisition proceeding were denied. The petition accordingly, it was submitted, was not maintainable in law.

(c) The petitioners filed an affidavit-in-reply wherein they stated that in the revisional record of right, the name of one Jeut Prodhan was recorded as holding the Jalkar lease under Giri Mohan Mallick and under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, the interest of Sambhunath Mallick and others vested in the State of West Bengal on April 15, 1955. Jeut Prodhan, who held the lease from 1357 B.S. to 1366 B.S., became, on the vesting of his landlords' interest, a direct tenant under the Government. The Mallicks thus had no subsisting interest in the land for which they could be entitled to compensation and possession of the plot could not be taken from them as stated in the affidavit on behalf of the State. The petitioners reiterated their and their co-sharers' title and possession of the said fisheries including the disputed plot for over a century.

15. It appears that supplementary affidavits were affirmed on behalf of the petitioners, with leave of Court, to explain their locus standi to move the application on which a preliminary objection was taken by the State. While again asserting their and their co-sharers right and possession over a century to the said fisheries, it was stated that Jeut Prodhan as the lessee of the jalkar right from 1357 to 1366 B.S. (middle of April, 1959) was the benamidar of the petitioners. After the expiry of the lease, the petitioners got a lease executed on December 2, 1959, by Shambhu Nath Mallick and others, heirs of late Giri Mohan Mallick in the name of Kedar Nath Prodhan and Ram Ugra Prodhan sons of Jeut Prodhan for ten years from December 2, 1959 to December 1, 1969. This lease was duly registered and was obtained by the petitioners in the names of the said sons of Jeut Prodhan through their friend one Sambhu Nath Chakraborty. It is further alleged that at the instance of the petitioners, a nadabi patra was executed and registered by the said lessees in favour of Sambhu Nath Chakraborty on April 27, 1963, in respect of the Jalkar interest. The petitioners contended that the lease was obtained by them by way of abundant caution, though they as owners had been in actual possession throughout. Though the nadabi was executed in the name of Sambhu Nath Chakraborty, he never had any interest in or possession of plot No. 212 nor any right to receive compensation for the acquisition. To complete the case of the petitioners, there is another supplementary affidavit by Sambhu Nath Chakraborty who stated that he was a family friend of the petitioners and as the petitioners did not want to prejudice their claim of title and possession of the Nalban Fishery including plot No. 212, they could not themselves take any lease of the plot from Sambhu Nath Mallick and others. Accordingly they had to take the lease in benami and at their instance, Sambhu Nath Chakraborty took the lease as their benamidar in the benami of the sons of Jeut Prodhan, though he had no interest and the lease in fact was taken by the petitioners in the above process. On the basis of their original title and possession as also of the transactions evidenced by the documents referred to above, the petitioners claimed that they had title and possession in the disputed plot which gave them the locus standi to move the application.

16. The rule came up for hearing before A. K. Sen, J. who was of opinion, on the preliminary objection taken by the State, that the petition was bound to fail. The State raised a dispute regarding the title of the petitioners to the land and in support of their claim the petitioners filed the supplementary affidavits. The Court was of opinion that ex facie the settlement record did not support the petitioners on their title or even on possession. Further even on the supplementary affidavits it was not possible to hold that the petitioners had any locus standi to dispute the acquisition or to challenge the same by the present petition. On the above findings the rule was discharged. The present appeal is against the said decision.

17. Mr. Noni Coomarr Chakravarti, the learned counsel appearing for the appellants, contended that merely because a fact is disputed or complicated questions of title are involved in a petition, it will not be proper exercise of jurisdiction to dismiss an application under Article 226 (1) of the Constitution on either ground. It is often possible to decide questions of fact on affidavits as here and even if that was not possible the Court should give opportunity to the parties to establish their case by filing affidavits or by issue of commission or even by setting down the application for trial on evidence. In support reliance was also placed on decisions of the Supreme Court in AIR 1970 SC 802 where it was laid down that it would not be proper to dismiss a petition under Article 226 merely because questions of fact may befall to be determined in considering the petitioner's right to relief and in such petition, the High Court has jurisdiction to try issues both of fact and law. In Century Spg. and Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Ulhasnagar Municipal Council, 1970-1 SCC 582 = (AIR 1971 SC 1021), it was held that merely because a question of fact has been raised the High Court will not be justified in requiring the party to seek relief by somewhat lengthy, dilatory and expensive process by a Civil Suit against a public body. On the above authorities, Mr. Chakravarti contended that if the learned Judge felt any difficulty to decide the question of title, the petitioners should have been given further opportunity to produce oral and other evidence in support of their claim in a trial on evidence to prove their locus standi and dispute the acquisition. The finding of the learned Judge that the petitioners had no locus standi to dispute the acquisition was also assailed as being contrary to the materials on record. On the above grounds, Mr. Chakravarti wants this Court to set aside the judgment under appeal and refer back the matter for trial in accordance with law and established principles of procedure.

18. Mr. Arun Kumar Janah, the learned counsel appearing for the State of West Bengal, has contended that on the materials on record the learned Judge made no error on facts or in law in holding that the petitioners had no locus standi to dispute the acquisition, as having no title or possession of the disputed plot. Further the learned Judge has properly exercised his discretion on consideration of all relevant materials and circumstances and in accordance with sound judicial principles and such discretion should not be interfered with by the appellate Court even if the appellate Court may not agree with the trial Court's discretion or conclusion, as was held in AIR 1960 Cal 46 at p. 51. Further the question of investigation of title as claimed by the petitioners would be inappropriate in proceedings under Article 226 (1) of the Constitution.

19. On a consideration of the respective contentions of the parties, it appears to me that the judgment under appeal must be sustained. The petitioners, in support of their case, have claimed title on alternative basis which are inconsistent with and even destructive of each other. Their principal claim to the lands of the fishery including the disputed land is on the basis of their ownership and possession for over a century, while the records of rights do not record their title or possession. Excepting that bare statement in the petition and affidavits, there is no evidence in rebuttal of the presumption arising from the records of rights and it is not possible to find their title and possession from mere assertion of the claim. As to the other alternative claim that on vesting, Jeut Prodhan, whose name was recorded in the records of rights as the lessee of the jalkar, became the direct tenant under the State, and that Jeut Prodhan was the benamdar of the petitioners, there is no document of release or otherwise from Jeut Prodhan nor any evidence in support excepting again the bare assertion of the petitioners. Again if Jeut Prodhan became the direct tenant under the State and the interests of Mallicks vested in State, the lease taken by the sons of Jeut Prodhan from Mallicks has no legal consequence and conferred no interest on them and there is again no evidence of any surrender by Jeut Prodhan or of extinguishment of his interest. Further on the materials on record, it is also extremely difficult to appreciate the reasons for creating benami in the names of the sons of Jeut Prodhan and again in the name of Sambhu Nath Chakravarty for the same property, while the nadabi document by Prodhan makes no mention of the petitioners at all. On the materials on record, it is clear that the petitioners have failed to establish that they had any interest or legal right or possession in the disputed plot and I agree with the findings of the learned Judge that the petitioners have failed to discharge the onus that they have the locus standi to dispute the land acquisition proceedings regarding the disputed plot.

20. It may be mentioned here that the learned Judge, while stating in the judgment that it is really difficult to decide such a disputed issue as to title on such materials alone, really proceeded to consider the evidence adduced and on consideration of the materials arrived at the finding that the petitioners had no locus standi in the matter. The decisions cited by Mr. Chakravarti have therefore no application and in fact in both the cases, as pointed out by Mr. Janah, the applications were dismissed in limine and it also appears that the questions of the fact involved therein were elementary. In the present case the applications were considered apart from the usual affidavits of the parties, also on supplementary affidavits on behalf of the petitioners in support of their case and the questions of fact involved was anything but elementary. There could thus be no grievance on the ground that the Court rejected the application merely it involved disputed question of title.

21. As to the other contention of the petitioners that the application should have been set down for trial on evidence in a case like this, as contended by Mr. Chakravarti, undoubtedly similar contention found support in the decision in Kavalappara Kottarathil Kochunni v. State of Madras, AIR 1959 SC 725 where in respect of applications under Article 32 of the Constitution, the Court took the view that in appropriate cases, the Court to determine a disputed question of fact may direct issue of commission or set down the application for trial on evidence. In the present case, the petitioners were given an opportunity to file further affidavits to support their claim of title and possession to the land in dispute and the petitioners availed of the opportunity. The Court found the affidavits insufficient to establish the petitioner's claim and rightly so, in my opinion. The petitioners thereby failed to discharge the onus that lay on them. There was no prayer, at any point of time, for production of further evidence or for trial on evidence and there could be thus no question of granting any further opportunity to the petitioners to adduce evidence. In fact no grievance is made on that ground by the petitioners even in the memorandum of appeal before us.

22. Mr. Chakravarti however contended that the learned Judge should have taken further evidence in a trial on evidence in the circumstances of the case if he found any difficulty, as he did find, in coming to a finding about the petitioners' claim on the materials on record, on the authority of the decision in AIR 1970 SC 802 (supra). It was observed in that case as follows:

"The High Court is not deprived of its jurisdiction to entertain a petition under Article 226 merely because in considering the petitioner's right to relief questions of fact may fall to be determined. In a petition under Article 226 the High Court has jurisdiction to try issues both of fact and law. Exercise of the jurisdiction is, it is true, discretionary but the discretion must be exercised on sound judicial principles. When the petition raises questions of fact of a complex nature, which may for their determination require oral evidence to be taken, and on the view that the dispute may not be appropriately be tried in a writ petition, the High Court may decline to try a petition."

There is no doubt that the present petition raises complicated questions of fact and law and involves rights of persons who are not before us. Even if the learned Judge should have normally embarked upon the enquiry as to title as contended, the present case, in view of the complex questions of fact and law involved was not one, in my opinion, in which such enquiry should have been made. Even on the authority of decision referred to above, it would not be proper for the Court to determine complicated questions of title and possession involving protracted hearing involving title of persons who are not even parties in the proceedings. Such question should appropriately be tried in regular suit and I feel unable to concede to the prayer of the petitioners for a trial on evidence in such state of affairs.

23. In the circumstances the appeal fails and is dismissed in the manner proposed by my learned brother.

F. M. A. No. 78 of 1965 with C. R. Nos. 3566 (M) of 1964 and 998 of 1965, D/- 24-4-1972.

Industries (Development and Regulation) Act (1951), S. 18C — Proceeding instituted by Authorised Controller of company — Order of liquidation of company — Proceeding abates.

A proceeding under Section 18-C is one which the person or body of persons authorised under Section 18-A of the Act alone can institute. When a person or body of persons becomes functus officio the proceeding already launched must abate. (Para 27)

An authorised controller is not the agent of the company like the directors who are the agents of its share-holders. He is the agent of the Central Government except that his powers are similar to those of the directors. Thus the proceeding commenced by the authorised controller cannot be continued by the Liquidator on behalf of the company who takes over the possession from the controller on an order of liquidation. SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, J.— This is an appeal against an Order of the Seventh Court of the Subordinate Judge at Alipore made on July 28, 1964 restraining the respondent by an injunction from proceeding with a Suit for specific performance of a contract instituted in a Court at Delhi. Briefly, the facts are that on February 16, 1959 the Board of Directors of the India Electric Works Limited passed a resolution agreeing to sell a piece of land in Delhi to a partnership firm called Pradip Lamp Works. Some of the Directors of the Limited Company were the partners of the firm. On February 17, 1959, the limited Company informed the firm in writing that the resolution aforesaid had been passed. On November 17, 1960, the Central Government in the exercise of its powers under the Industries (Development & Regulation) Act, 1951 appointed an authorised Controller of the India Electric Works Limited. We shall set out the relevant provisions of this Act at a subsequent stage. Let us now proceed with the bare facts. On February 1, 1962, Pradip Lamp Works filed a Suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Delhi for specific performance of an agreement between India Electric Works Limited and Pradip Lamp Works in respect of the land in Delhi. We incidentally mention that it has been urged before us that there was no concluded agreement between the parties but we do not propose to express any opinion on this contention in this appeal. On the same day namely February 1, 1972, Pradip Lamp Works made an application to the Delhi Court for an interim injunction restraining the limited company from dealing with or disposing of the Suit Land during the pendency of the Suit. The Delhi Court passed an order of interim injunction. The Written Statement in the Delhi Suit was filed on April 6, 1962. The Delhi Court made this order of injunction absolute on May 7, 1962. On April 30, the issues were settled. On June 5, 1962 an additional issue being Issue No. 1-A was framed.

2. In May, 1963 the India Electric Works Limited filed a petition for amendment of the Written Statement. The amendments were allowed and the amended Written Statement was filed on May 20, 1963.

3. On June 25, 1963 the authorised Controller filed a petition under Section 18-C of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Alipore. Section 18-C runs thus: "Without prejudice to the provisions contained in Section 18-B, the person or body of persons authorized under Section 18-A to take over the management of an industrial undertaking may, with the previous approval of the Central Government, make an application to any Court having jurisdiction in this behalf for the purpose of cancelling or varying any contract or agreement entered into, at any time before the issue of the notified order under Section 18-A, between the industrial undertaking and any other person and the Court may, if satisfied after due inquiry that such contract or agreement had been entered in bad faith and is detrimental to the interests of the industrial undertaking make an order cancelling or varying (either unconditionally or subject to such conditions as it may think fit to impose) that contract or agreement, and the contract or agreement shall have effect accordingly."

4. The authorised Controller's case, inter alia, was that the agreement, if any, between India Electric Works Limited and the Pradip Lamp Works for sale of the Delhi land had been entered in bad faith and was detrimental to the interests of the India Electric Works Limited.

5. On June 25, 1963 the authorised Controller filed a petition in connection with his application under Section 18-C praying for temporary injunction restraining the Pradip Lamp Works from proceeding with the Delhi Suit till the disposal of the 18-C "Suit" or proceeding at Alipore. When this application was ready for hearing the Alipore Court passed an order of injunction as prayed for on the 28th July, 1964. The propriety of this order is the subject-matter of the present appeal. It was admitted on the 28th September, 1964 when a Rule was issued.

6. On October 1, 1964 Pradip Lamp Works filed an application in the Alipore Court under Sections 10 and 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure praying for stay of the Alipore 'Suit' (that is to say the proceeding under Section 18-C) till the disposal of the Delhi Suit.

7. On February 8, 1965 the Seventh Subordinate Judge at Alipore rejected the application of Pradip Lamp Works. The partnership firm moved this Court against the said order on the 29th March, 1965 under Section 115 of the Code and a Rule was issued.

8. Thereafter an interesting event took place. On November 6, 1967 there was a petition to the Company Court on the Original Side for winding up of the India Electric Works Limited. The winding up order was made on August 27, 1968 but its operation was stayed from time to time till December 9, 1968. The Official Liquidator ultimately took possession of the India Electric Works Limited on the 9th December, 1968. There was an appeal also against the winding up order but the appeal was dismissed.

9. On these facts counsel for the petitioner has made before us the following points:

(1) The Alipore Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the proceedings under Section 18-C of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 in view of the provisions of Section 16 (d) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Learned counsel contends that the proceedings under Section 18-C in the instant case involved determination of a right to or interest in immoveable property and should have been instituted only in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property was situate. In other words, it could be filed in the Delhi Court but not in the Alipore Court.

(2) Assuming that the proceedings under Section 18-C have been properly instituted in the Alipore Court that Court is bound to stay these proceedings in view of Section 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The matters in issue in the 18-C proceedings are directly and substantially the same as those in the previously instituted Suit in the Delhi Court. The parties were litigating substantially on the same title and the same relief was available in the Delhi Court.

(3) Assuming that the order for stay could not be granted under Section 10 the order of injunction restraining the plaintiff in the Delhi Court from proceeding with the Delhi Suit which the Alipore Court made under Section 151 of the Code was made without jurisdiction.

(4) Assuming that an order under Section 151 could be made the Alipore Court should not have exercised its powers under that section as the order for injunction was not necessary for the ends of justice. In other words, the Court's discretion under Section 151 has been improperly exercised and

(5) The proceedings under Section 18C have now abated by reason of the order for winding up and the liquidator's taking over of the assets of the India Electric Works Limited.

10. In our opinion, the last point urged by the petitioner's counsel is enough for disposal of this appeal. And we do not intend to express any opinion on the four other points we have set out above.

11. Mr. S. C. Mitter appearing for the respondent has urged that the proceedings under Section 18-C by the authorised Controller were proceedings launched on behalf of the Company. In support of this proposition, Mr. Mitter has drawn our attention to Section 18-C and Section 18-B, particularly to clause (e) of Section 18-B (1). This clause provides as follows:—

“(1) On the issue of a notified order under Section 18-A authorizing the taking over of the management of an industrial undertaking—

(e) the persons, if any, authorized under Section 18-A to take over the management of an industrial undertaking which is a company shall be for all purposes the directors of the industrial undertaking duly constituted under the Indian Companies Act, 1913 and shall alone be entitled to exercise all the powers of the directors of the industrial undertaking, whether such powers are derived from the said Act or from the memorandum or articles of association of the industrial undertaking or from any other source.”

12. Mr. Mitter's argument is that that the acts of the authorized Controller were for all purposes acts of Directors, done on behalf of the Company. In other words, the authorized controller was, in fact, a Director of the Company, an agent of the Company, having a fiduciary capacity. He read out to us the following passages from Gower's "The Principles of Modern Company Law" Third Edition, at pages 526-527:

“By the middle of the last century it had been clearly established that the trustee-like position of directors vitiated any contract which the board entered into on behalf of the company with one of their numbers. This principle receives its clearest expression in Aberdeen Ry. v. Blaikie, (1853-54) 149 RR 32, in which a contract between the company and a partnership of which one of the directors was a partner was avoided at the instance of the company notwithstanding that its terms were perfectly fair.

xx xx xx

Later cases have added little to the general principle thus enunciated. It applies not only to contracts directly with the directors but also to those in which they are in any way interested, whether because they benefit personally however indirectly, or because they are subject to a conflicting duty in general the contract will be voidable at the instance of the company, and any profits made by the directors personally will be recoverable by the company.

....The same applies to a contract with any agent of the company other than a director. But the directors themselves cannot escape so easily. Disclosure to themselves is ineffective even if the interested directors refrain from attending and voting leaving an independent quorum to decide, for the company has a right to the unbiased voice and advice of every director. Hence, in the absence of express provision in the company's articles, the only effective step is to make full disclosure to the members of the company and to have the contract entered into or ratified by the company in general meeting.”

13. Mr. Mitter's point is that on the facts in this case the contract, if any, between Messrs. India Electric Works Ltd. and Pradip Lamp Works is voidable at the instance of the Company. The Company by an appropriate action can enforce the remedy available to it. When, therefore, the authorized Controller institutes an action he does so, according to Mr. Mitter, on behalf of the Company. The only fetter imposed on him by Section 18-C is that he has to obtain the previous approval of the Central Government. A Director of a Company could have instituted a suit or a proceeding to have a contract declared void. When the Director's functions are being discharged by the authorized Controller his action is virtually the action of the Director. The only difference is, says Mr. Mitter, that he has to obtain the Central Government's approval.

14. Mr. Mitter has also relied on another passage in Gower's "The Principles of Modern Company Law", Third Edition at page 583. It says—

"Normally, therefore, the Company itself is the proper plaintiff, and the only proper plaintiff, in an action arising out of a dispute within the company. And the appropriate agency to start an action on the company's behalf is the board of directors, to whom this power is delegated as an incident of managing the company."

15. Mr. Mitter's contention is that 'normally' the Company is the proper plaintiff. But when the Central Government has appointed an authorized controller under the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, it is not the Company but the authorized controller who is the proper plaintiff in an action for and on behalf of the company. There is no difference, submits Mr. Mitter, between this action and an action launched on behalf of the Company by an authorised Director or by its Board of Directors.

16. Counsel for the respondent then proceeded to discuss what would happen when, in a case of this nature, an order for winding up is made. His argument is that when a contract is entered into between a Company and a Director or his firm it is a contract voidable at the option of the company. If any suit or proceeding is to be commenced with a view to cancellation of this contract, the suit or proceeding has to be commenced in the name of the company by its Directors who are its agents. An order for liquidation does not mean that the Company is declared dead. The Company survives this order, says Mr. Mitter, with this difference that the Directors are no longer its agents but the liquidator acts as its agent. An action commenced by the Company before liquidation can, therefore, be continued by the liquidator. The same principle, urges Mr. Mitter, applies to a proceeding under Section 18-C which is commenced by the authorized controller on behalf of the company as its agent. On the facts of this case, according to Mr. Mitter, the proceedings under Section 18-C have not abated by reason of the order of liquidation and the liquidator is entitled to continue such proceedings on the Company's behalf. The sum and substance of Mr. Mitter's contention is that a proceeding under Section 18-C is a suit by the Company to have a voidable contract set aside. And such a suit can be instituted either by the Board of Directors or by a single authorised Director or by the authorised controller as agents or an agent of the Company. On the company being wound up the liquidator can continue the proceedings. We are unable to uphold this contention.

17. Firstly, Section 18-C confers the right to sue not on the Company but on the authorized controller. The Legislature has given this right to a nominated person or body of persons.

18. In the Third Edition of Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 6, Art. 862 at page 445 it is stated:

"As regards litigation by an incorporated company, the directors are, as a rule, the persons who have authority to act for the company; but, in the absence of any contract to the contrary in the articles of association, the majority of the members of the company are entitled to decide, even to the extent of overruling the directors, whether an action in the name of the company should be commenced or allowed to proceed. The secretary of a company cannot institute proceedings in the name of the company in the absence of express authority to do so, but proceedings started without proper authority may subsequently be ratified"

If the Legislature's intention was that the rights under Section 18-C were to be enjoyed not by the person or body of persons authorized under Section 18-A but by the company as such more explicit expressions should have been used. It is true that the authorized controller is in a sense a Director of the Company (vide Sec. 18-B (1) (e)) and, as such, is its agent. This agent created by the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 has been given a number of powers by the Act and one of such powers is to institute and continue a proceeding under Section 18-C.

19. We may, incidentally, refer to a decision of the Bombay High Court in D. P. Kelkar v. Ambadas Keshav Bajaj, AIR 1971 Bom 124, where some of the provisions of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 have been considered. In paragraph 45 of the judgment at page 139, the Bombay High Court analyses the provisions of Section 18-A, Section 18-B and Section 18-E. The Bombay High Court comes to the conclusion that under these provisions—

"The directors cease to function, the share-holders cannot pass effective resolutions unless approved by the Central Government; the share-holders cannot appoint directors under any circumstances; the authorized controller is given the control and management in place of the directors, and no proceeding for winding up can lie even though resolutions are passed to that effect without the consent of the Central Government. What remains of the powers of the Directors of the company after these provisions come into operation, it is difficult to envisage. The authorized controller is not fettered by limitations. On the other hand, he enjoys all the powers under the Companies Act subject to the overriding powers of the Central Government to give powers or to create exceptions, restrictions or limitations upon those powers under the Companies Act. Three conclusions may be drawn from these provisions. Firstly, that after the notifications and the operation of these sections come into force, what is left of the company is the mere outward shell of incorporation and every vestige of power to manage and control is taken away from the directors and share-holders. Secondly, the authorized controller becomes all powerful and enjoys all the authority under the Companies Act except to the extent that he is controlled by the Central Government. Thirdly, the plenary and overriding power of the Central Government to give directions and to make exceptions, restrictions and limitations to the Indian Companies Act and thereby further to control the authorized controller and the company is absolute and unrestricted. We have no manner of doubt that under this dispensation the establishments of which the management and control were taken away in the cases before us, were carried on under the authority of a department of the Central Government."

Again at p. 137 in paragraph 38 of the judgment, the Bombay High Court has construed the provisions of Section 18-B. Referring to clause (e) of Section 18-B (1), which we have quoted above, the Bombay High Court says—

"....., not only is the power of the Manager and Director put an end to, not only are all the contracts which the manager and director entered into put an end to but by the automatic operation of clause (e) the persons put in management alone are entitled to exercise all the powers of the directors and no exception is made because of the words—

"Whether such powers are derived from the said Act or from the memorandum or articles of association of the Industrial undertaking or from any other source."

20. The Bombay High Court proceeds to add:

"....., in whatever form or shape the power of the directors is derived and from whatever source, that power is put an end to..... Clause (a) taken away the substance of the power conferred by the memorandum and articles of association because it puts an end to the powers of the manager and directors and all contracts entered into with them and instead in terms says that the persons authorised to be in management shall be the directors....."

21. From these observations of the Bombay High Court, it follows that the authorized controller is not the agent of the company in the sense, Mr. Mitter, for the respondent, was describing him as the agent. In fact, he is the agent of the Central Government. In other words, the directors of a company are the agents of its share-holders but the authorized controller is the agent of the Central Government except that his powers are similar to those of the directors. From this point of view, the suit or proceeding under Section 18-C cannot be said to be a proceeding on behalf of the company as the controller does not represent the company in the same manner as the directors do.

22. Secondly, a close examination of the provisions of Section 18-C reveals that it is in no sense a suit. Indeed, it is a summary proceeding which can be decided even on affidavits. It is a new provision altogether. And the mode of enforcing this new right conferred on the authorized controller is a new mode prescribed by the section itself.

23. Thirdly, this is a right which can be exercised in spite of the fact that a suit which the company could have instituted either through its share-holders or Board of Directors or an authorized director is barred by limitation. The section itself says that a proceeding under this section can be instituted "at any time".

24. Fourthly, Section 18-C gives power to the authorized controller not only to ask for cancellation of the contract but also to ask for variation of the contract either conditionally or unconditionally.

25. Fifthly, the nature of the right which the authorized controller enjoys under this section is greater than what the company can enjoy. A contract between a company and a director or his firm or a company in which he is interested as a director or share-holder even though only a trustee of the shares, is voidable at the option of the company, unless sanctioned by the articles expressly or by necessary implication and made in conformity therewith. (Vide Halsbury's Laws of England, Third Edition, Volume 6, page 302, Article 609). Under Section 18-C whether or not a contract of this nature is sanctioned by the articles expressly or impliedly the authorized controller can launch a proceeding if he is "satisfied after due enquiry that such contract or agreement had been entered into in bad faith and is detrimental to the interests of the industrial undertaking." This is again a new right which the company did not possess.

26. Sixthly and, lastly, in the absence of any contract to the contrary in the articles of association, the majority of the members of the Company are entitled to decide, even to the extent of overruling the directors, whether an action in the name of the Company should be commenced or allowed to proceed: (Vide Halsbury's Laws of England, Third Edition, Volume 6, page 445, art. 862). In the case of an action under Section 18-C the majority of the members of the company cannot overrule the authorized controller and direct him to launch the proceeding.

27. For all the reasons aforesaid, we are of opinion that a proceeding under Section 18-C of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 is a proceeding which the person or body of persons authorized under Section 18-A of the Act alone can institute. And when the said person or body of persons becomes or become functus officio the proceedings already launched must abate. That is one of the reasons why in Section 18-E (1) (c) it has been expressly provided that when the management of an industrial undertaking is taken over by the Central Government no proceeding for the winding up of the undertaking or for the appointment of a Receiver in respect thereof shall lie in any Court except with the consent of the Central Government. In other words, when the Central Government gives its consent to an application for winding up the Central Government is expected to take into consideration the fate, inter alia, of a proceeding under Section 18-C, if eventually an order for winding up is made and the authorised controller has to make over possession to the liquidator appointed by the Court.

28. As we have come to the conclusion that the proceeding under S. 18-C has abated, we cannot sustain the order of the Seventh Subordinate Judge at Alipore made on the 28th July, 1964.

29. We incidentally observe, however, that our attention has been drawn to the pleadings in the Delhi Court as they now stand. And we find that the issues which could have been raised in the proceeding under S. 18-C can also be raised in the Delhi suit. We also note that under the provision of sub-section (3) of Section 446 of the Companies Act, 1956 the winding up Court has the power to have the Delhi suit transferred to it for disposal by it. Whether or not the company court will use such power is for that Court to decide, and we have no jurisdiction to express any opinion thereon. We are merely mentioning that such a power exists.

30. In the result, this appeal is allowed; the order made on the 28th July, 1964 by Shri M. M. Haldar, Subordinate Judge, Seventh Court, Alipore, is set aside.

31. There will be no order as to costs.

32. The Rule in connection with this appeal is also disposed of on the above terms. There will be no order as to costs of the Rule.

33. The application under Sec. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not pressed and C. R. 998 of 1965 is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

34. In view of the judgment we have delivered in the appeal today, we do not pass any order on the alternative application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

JANAH, J. — 35. I agree.

Order accordingly.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 31 (2), 19 (1) (f) and (g) and 14 — Provisions of West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act for requisition of fisheries and payment of compensation for same do not violate Arts. 31 (2), 19 (1) (f) and (g) and 14 — They are not colourable piece of legislation. (X-Ref:— W. B. Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (20 of 1965), Ss. 2 (5) and 8).

The provisions of the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act for requisition of fisheries and for payment of compensation for the same are not colourable piece of legislation. They do not violate Arts. 31 (2) and 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution because (i) the Act does not confer arbitrary power on the executive for determining public purpose (ii) the method of determining compensation is not inappropriate (iii) the authorisation to the Collector and the Commissioner to determine compensation is not unreasonable as they act subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court and the Supreme Court (iv) the Act has been enacted to develop fisheries for supplying fish to the public and therefore, is in the interests of general public; nor do the aforesaid provisions violate Art. 14. (B) West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (20 of 1965), S. 2 (5) (iii) — Words "any other object" — Meaning of.

EP/FP/D135/72/GNB/HGP

The words "any other object" in S. 2 (5) (iii) mean only those objects which are akin or similar to and also incidental and ancillary to the objects in S. 2 (5) (i) and (ii) and hence arbitrary powers have not been conferred on the executive for determining public purpose. (Para 15)

(C) West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (20 of 1965), S. 8 (4), Explan. (c) — Words "average income" — Meaning of.

The words "average income" in S. 8 (4), Explan. (c) mean the total or gross receipts from a fishery received or receivable during the period of five years preceding the date of requisition and do not mean net income after deducting all expenses incurred or liable to be incurred.

AIR 1952 SC 252 = 1952 SCR 889, State of Orissa v. Kameshwar Singh	8

P. N. Mitter and B. C. Roy, for Petitioners; P. K. Sengupta, Suprokas Banerjee and S. N. Mukherjee, for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioners in these Rules have challenged the validity of the requisition orders made under the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1965, on the ground that the said Act is a colourable piece of legislation and also in violation of Article 19 (1) (f) and (g) and Article 31 of the Constitution of India.

2. The West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1965 was enacted "to provide for the requisition and speedy acquisition of fisheries for the purpose of improvement or development of such fisheries and supplying fish to the public therefrom. Under Section 2 (3) of the Act fishery means any land whereon water is confined naturally or artificially whether periodically or throughout the year for pisciculture or for fishing and includes a 'tank fishery' as defined in the explanation to clause (c) of sub-section (1) of Section 6 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act as also fish in such fishery or 'tank fishery' does not include a tank not exceeding one acre in area adjoining a homestead and used for purposes of irrigation or domestic purpose".

3. Mr. P. N. Mitra learned advocate for the petitioners has submitted that the Act purports to requisition also the fish in the fisheries and tank fisheries although such fish is by its very nature incapable of requisition. The property in the fish is such that its requisition would really mean appropriation of the fish itself i.e. acquisition. Mr. Mitra has also submitted that the provisions in the Act for payments of compensation for requisitioned property is illusory. For these reasons, Mr. Mitra has asked me to pronounce the Act as a colourable piece of legislation.

4. Mr. Mitra learned advocate for the petitioner has placed before me the judgment of Mukherjee, J. as he then was, in K. C. Gajapati Narayan Deo v. The State of Orissa, AIR 1953 SC 375 and the later Supreme Court decisions in G. Nageswar Rao v. Andhra Pradesh State Road Transport Corporation, AIR 1959 SC 308 and in Vajravelu v. Special Deputy Collector, AIR 1965 SC 1017 (Para 16). Mukherjee, J., as he then was in AIR 1953 SC 375 (supra) at p. 379 of All India Reporter pointed out that "the doctrine of colourable legislation does not involve any question of bona fides or mala fides on the part of the legislature. The whole doctrine resolves itself into the question of competency of a particular legislature to enact a particular law.

The idea conveyed by colourable legislation is that although apparently a legislature in passing a statute purported to act within the limits of its powers, yet in substance and in reality it transgressed these powers, the transgression being veiled by what appears on proper examination to be a mere pretence or disguise". The aforesaid two other decisions give similar meaning to the expression "colourable legislation".

5. I am unable to hold that provision for requisition of the fish along with the fishery comes within the mischief of the aforesaid dicta. After Constitution (Seventh Amendment) Act, 'Acquisition and requisitioning of property' have been included in the entry No. 42 of Schedule III of the Constitution. Therefore the West Bengal State Legislature has legislative competence to make laws relating to acquisition and requisitioning of the fisheries. The fish in the fisheries as defined in Section 2 (3) of the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act in question also was a property capable of being owned and possessed. Further, the Act was passed with the object of improvement or development of fisheries and for supplying fish to public therefrom. Therefore, the West Bengal Legislature thought it fit to define the term 'fishery' in a wide fashion. Unless both the land wherein water is confined and the tank fishery together with the fish reared therein be taken possession of, the aforesaid objects of the Act cannot be fulfilled. Further it may not be also quite feasible to acquire or requisition a land wherein water is confined for pisciculture or for fishing or a tank fishery minus the fish contained therein. If only the land and the water be requisitioned the fish therein be excluded, then it may cause serious hardship and loss to the persons interested in the fisheries which might be requisitioned or acquired under the Act. Such persons interested in the fisheries in question may not succeed in catching all the fish reared in the said fisheries before the Government would take possession of the fisheries or the tank fisheries as the case might be. In that event persons interested in the fisheries in question would be deprived of the fish remaining in such fisheries and they would not also get any compensation for such fish.

6. Further for the purposes of acquisition or requisition there is hardly any similarity between the fish contained in a fishery and money. Such fish is a kind of property and may be owned, possessed and exchanged. Its money value is capable of being estimated. Deprivation of rights of ownership and possession over the fish can be assessed in monetary terms. The fish once caught and removed from the water is no doubt liable to be quickly perished, and also might be consumed. But thereby one cannot hold that the fish is at all not capable of being requisitioned; when State takes possession thereof the ownership continues to remain with the owner of the fishery. In a particular instance the State may not catch any fish from a requisitioned fishery and after developing and improving the fishery might release from requisition the fishery together with the fish therein.

7. I am unable to accept the contention that under the Act the fish of the requisitioned fishery is bound to be appropriated and that the nature of the fish totally excludes the possibility of its requisition. Further in the event the fish in the requisitioned fishery be depleted and any other damage be caused other than what may have been sustained by natural cause, under Section 8 (3) (b) of the Act compensation would be payable to the persons interested.

8. Three of the learned judges in State of Orissa v. Kameshwar Singh, AIR 1952 SC 252 were of the view that the provision for the State taking over all outstanding arrears and to refund fifty per cent thereof was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court in its later decision in State of Madhya Pradesh v. Ranojirao Shinde, AIR 1968 SC 1053 at 1055-58 considered this question again and held that chos in action and money could not be acquired under Article 31 (2). Hegde J., gave two reasons. In the first place public purpose under Article 31 (2) does not include enrichment of the coffers of the State. In the next place if for every rupee acquired, fifty paise or less is made payable, the violation of Article 31 (2) would be patent and the exercise of the powers by the legislature would be a fraud on its powers and the law would be struck down as a colourable piece of legislation. But these observations have no relevance so far as requisition of the fish in a fishery is concerned.

9. I propose to separately examine the provisions relating to payment of compensation in the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act. But the fish in a fishery is neither a chose in action nor money in specie. The requisition and acquisition of fishery is also not for enrichment of the State coffers but for development and improvement of fisheries etc.

10. A law providing for requisition of fishery including the fish therein was not beyond the powers of West Bengal Legislature and thereby the legislature did not seek to do anything indirectly which it could not do directly.

11. For the reasons given herein after I am also unable to accept the submission that the provisions in the Act regarding payment of compensation for requisition of fisheries is in contravention of Article 31 (2) and Article 19 (1) (f) and (g) of the Constitution. Therefore I hold that the West Bengal Fisheries (Acquisition and Requisition) Act is not a colourable piece of legislation.

12. Mr. Mitra learned advocate for the petitioners has further submitted in view of the decision in R. C. Cooper v. Union of India, AIR 1970 SC 564 a law relating to acquisition and requisitioning of property must be in compliance both with Article 31 (2) and Article 19 (1) (f) and (g) of the Constitution. Mr. Mitra has placed strong reliance upon paragraphs 56-63 of the majority judgment in case which was delivered by Shah, J., as he then was. In paragraph 62, the learned judge observed,

"We are therefore unable to hold that the challenge to the validity of the provision for acquisition is liable to be tested only on the ground of non-compliance with Article 31 (2). Article 31 (2) requires that property must be acquired for a public purpose and that it must be acquired under a law with the characteristics set out in that Article. Formal compliance with the conditions under Art. 31 (2) is not sufficient to negative the protection of the guarantee of the right to property. Acquisition must be under the authority of a law and the expression "law" means a law which is within the competence of the Legislature and does not impair the guarantee of the rights in Part III. We are unable, therefore, to agree that Article 19 (1) (f) and Art. 31 (2) are mutually exclusive."

13. The learned advocate for the petitioners has submitted that the Act allows the State to requisition for any purpose which the State chooses to declare as public purpose. According to the petitioners the Act provides for requisition for purposes which need not be public purpose. Further conferment of arbitrary power upon the State to declare any object as a public purpose was capricious and unreasonable.

14. In my view the above submission proceeds upon a misconception of the definition of 'public purpose' given in Section 2 (5) of the Act. The said sub-section lays down:—

"The expression "public purpose" means a purpose having or being connected with, any of the following objects, namely:—

(i) the improvement or development of a fishery,

(ii) supplying fish to the public from such fishery, or

(iii) any other object which the State may by notification in the official Gazette, declare as ancillary or incidental to the aforesaid objects."

15. The petitioners do not dispute that clauses (i) and (ii) of Section 2 (5) would be public purposes within Article 31 (2) of the Constitution and that requisition of property with the two aforesaid objects or any one of them cannot be questioned on the ground of absence of public purpose. The general words 'any other object' in clause (iii) follow the specific and particular words in the two preceding clauses (i) and (ii). Further "any other object must be ancillary or incidental" to the objects of improvement or development of a fishery or supplying fish to the public. Therefore, the meaning of this expression "any other object" must be interpreted and its meaning limited according to Ejusdem Generis rule, 'any other object' accordingly must mean only those objects which are similar and akin to the objects in clauses (i) and (ii) and any other object must be also incidental and ancillary to objects enumerated in clauses (i) and (ii). There is thus sufficient guiding principles in the statute, and no arbitrary or uncontrolled powers have been conferred on the executive.

16. In view of the preponderance of decided authorities the opinion of the State Government about a particular object being a public purpose would not be conclusive and the Courts would have powers to examine the matter. The Section 2 (5) does not make the executive determination of the public purpose final and non-justiciable. As the existence of public purpose within the meaning of the Act would be justiciable, in a particular case when a requisition is purported to be made other than for a public purpose the Court may strike down the individual order, but the statute itself cannot be held to be invalid.

17. The petitioners have also urged that the provisions for compensation in the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act are illusory and these provisions lay down irrelevant principles for determination of compensation. The petitioners have further contended that the Act confers power upon the executive to assess the compensation and the persons interested have no right to move the Civil Court against such award of compensation. Thereby the executive has been made the judge of its own cause. These provisions amount to unreasonable restrictions upon the freedom of the petitioners to own property and to carry on their fishery business.

18. Section 8 (1) lays down "whenever fishery or lands are requisitioned under S. 4 of the Act or acquired under Section 5, there shall be paid in the manner prescribed to every person interested, compensation, the amount of which shall be determined by the Collector in the prescribed manner in accordance with the principles hereinafter set out." Sub-section (2) of Section 8 deals with acquisition and the sub-section (3) of Section 8 states that compensation for requisitioned fishery or land shall be paid for

(a) the requisition of fishery or land

(b) damages done during the period of requisition except those sustained by natural cause.

When the Collector and the person interested agree as to the compensation, the Collector under Section 8 (4) (i) will award the payment of such agreed compensation. When there is no agreement, the Collector under Section 8 (4) (ii) shall award compensation which shall be determined at the rate of the net average annual income from the requisitioned fishery or land and also for damage referred to in Section 8 (3) (b).

19. The explanation to Section 8 (4) states what 'net average annual income' means:

(a) in the case of agricultural land, one-third of the average value of the produce derived or derivable from such land during a period of five years immediately preceding the date of requisition;

(b) in the case of other land, the average income, less two per cent of such income, derived or derivable therefrom during a period of five years immediately preceding the date of requisition;

(c) in the case of a fishery one-third of the average income from the fishery during a period of five years immediately preceding the date of requisition.

20. Mr. P. K. Sengupta learned advocate for the respondents has rightly submitted that the expression "average income" in clause (c) of the explanation to sub-section (4) of the Section 8 means the total or gross receipts from a fishery received or receivable during a period of five years preceding the date of requisition. In the present context the said expression "average income" cannot mean net income i. e. after deducting all expenses incurred or liable to be incurred. According to the explanation to Section 8 (4) the net income would be determined by finding out the one-third of the average income during last five years. The remaining two-thirds of the total income would presumably represent the expenditure incurred for running the fishery.

21. After the enactment of the Constitution (Fourth Amendment) Act 1955, it was inter alia provided in Article 31 (2) that no law providing for acquisition or requisitioning of property 'shall be called in question in any Court on the ground that the compensation provided by that law is not adequate. Shah J. (as he then was) who delivered the majority judgment in AIR 1970 SC 564 (supra) in paragraphs 97 to 100 has referred to two lines of decisions given by the Supreme Court regarding the effect of the fourth amendment of the Constitution. Even after the aforesaid amendments in Article 31 (2) the Supreme Court pronounced that compensation continued to mean 'just equivalent'. Vajravelu Mudaliar v. Special Deputy Collector, AIR 1965 SC 1017; Union of India v. Metal Corporation, AIR 1967 SC 637; Lachhman Dass v. Municipal Committee, AIR 1969 SC 1125; Ranojirao Shinde v. State of M. P., AIR 1968 SC 1053.

22. But in the State of Gujarat v. Santilal Mangaldas, AIR 1969 SC 634. The Supreme Court held that the Article 31 (2) (after Constitution (Fourth Amendment) Act) guarantees a right to receive compensation for loss of property compulsorily acquired but compensation no longer meant an equivalent of the property acquired. If compensation provided by law is not illusory or is not determinable by the application of irrelevant principles the law is not open to challenge on the ground that the compensation is inadequate.

23. Shah J. (as he then was) in AIR 1970 SC 564 at pp. 608-609, held that the both these lines of cases converge in the ultimate result and support the view that the principle specified by law for determination of compensation is beyond the pale of challenge, if it is relevant to the determination of compensation and is a recognized principle applicable in the determination of compensation for the property acquired and the principle is appropriate in determining the value of the class of property sought to be acquired.

24. In my opinion the method of determining the compensation for requisition of a fishery by finding out the net average income is neither irrelevant nor inappropriate. The procedure laid down in the explanation to Section 8 (4) of the Act is also a recognized method for deducting expenses from the gross collection or receipts in order to arrive at the net average income. Therefore, the Majority decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1970 SC 564 (supra) does not assist the case of petitioners. The provisions of the West Bengal Fisheries (Acquisition and Requisition) Act are not ultra vires of the Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution.

25. I am also unable to accept the submission made on behalf of the petitioners that the Act imposes unreasonable restriction on the freedom of the petitioners to hold property and to carry on their trade and business. The Act which has been made for improvement and development of fisheries and for supplying fish to the public is certainly in the interests of general public. The Act has not left the determination of compensation for requisition of fisheries to the executive authorities. I have already referred to the provisions of Section 8 which lay down the principles for determination of compensation for requisition.

26. The sub-section (4) of Sec. 8 enjoins the Collector to pass award on the basis of agreement and in the absence of such agreement on the basis of net average income. Under S. 9 the Collector has been given power to apportion compensation. Under Section 10 an award made by the Collector would be notified in the manner prescribed. The Section 11 provides for appeal against an award of the Collector, the forum of which would depend upon the fact whether the particular award has been made by the Collector of the district or by any other officer. Under Section 17 of the Act, the Collector and the Commissioner for the purpose of carrying out their functions have been vested with the powers of Civil Courts in respect of the matters enumerated in clauses (a) to (d).

27. The Collector under the Act and the Appellate Authority hearing appeal from an award of a Collector are required to act quasi-judicially and in consonance with the principles of natural justice. The said authorities would be clearly statutory tribunals and subject to superintendence and control under Art. 227 and also amenable to jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution. Awards and appellate decisions would be also appealable to the Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution. Therefore, the ouster of jurisdiction of Courts under Section 15 can have no relevance so far as the exercise of powers under Articles 136 and 226 and 227 of the Constitution are concerned. The Collector and the Appellate Authority in exercising their powers under Sections 8 (4), 9 and 11 and 17 would be acting not in their executive capacities but they would function quasi-judicially and as tribunals.

28. Mr. P. K. Sengupta learned advocate for the respondents has drawn my attention to a large number of decisions in which the Courts upheld the validity of law albeit the fact that civil Courts' jurisdiction was ousted and authority was conferred upon special tribunals to adjudicate rights of persons affected. It cannot be said that thereby the executive has been made judge of their own cause in violation of the principles of natural justice. In order that the law for requisition or acquisition may be reasonable it is not necessary that adjudication of compensation must be by a civil Court. If the law lays down principles for determination of such compensation and confers power upon a special agency to determine compensation in an objective manner and after hearing the persons interested, there is no reason why such law should be declared to be in violation of Art. 19 (1) (f) and (g) of the Constitution. The present Act creates two tier tribunals for adjudication of the compensation according to the principles laid down in the Act. Such tribunals would act subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court and the Supreme Court. Therefore provisions of the Act constituting the Collector and Commissioner as the authorities for determination of compensation are not unreasonable.

29. The observations of the Supreme Court in Sachindra Mohan Nandi v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 SC 961 at p. 962 (para 7) do not assist the petitioners. No doubt the Supreme Court in considering whether the West Bengal Land Requisition and Acquisition Act, 1948 was in violation of Article 19 of the Constitution referred to adjudication of claim for compensation by the Court with a right of appeal to the High Court. But thereby the Supreme Court did not mean that adjudication of compensation for requisition or acquisition of properties by special tribunal would amount to unreasonable restriction on fundamental right to property.

30. In this context I may refer to the following well-known observations of Patanjali Sastri C. J. in State of Madras v. V. G. Row, AIR 1952 SC 196 at p. 200.

"It is important in this context to bear in mind that the test of reasonableness, wherever prescribed, should be applied to each individual statute impugned, and no abstract standard, or general pattern of reasonableness can be laid down as applicable to all cases. The nature of the right alleged to have been infringed, the underlying purpose of the restrictions imposed, the extent and urgency of the evil sought to be remedied thereby, the disproportion of the imposition, the prevailing conditions at the time, should all enter into the judicial verdict. In evaluating such elusive factors and forming their own conception of what is reasonable, in all the circumstances of a given case, it is inevitable that the social philosophy and the scale of values of the Judges participating in the decision should play an important part, and the limit to their interference with legislative judgment in such cases can only be dictated by their sense of responsibility and self-restraint and the sobering reflection that the Constitution is meant not only for people of their way of thinking but for all, and that the majority of the elected representatives of the people have in authorising the imposition of the restrictions, considered them to be reasonable."

31. In the instant case it is common knowledge that fish constitutes a very important item in the diet of majority of the inhabitants of West Bengal and that due to scarcity a high price of the fish now prevails. Therefore, the West Bengal Legislature in its wisdom has thought it fit to enact a law for its improvement etc. In this context the provisions for requisitioning of fisheries and land and for assessment of compensation are not in violation of Articles 19 (1) (f) and (g) and 31 (2) of the Constitution.

32. There is also no substance in the last contention made on behalf of the petitioners that the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act is violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. The Government has a choice whether fisheries and land should be requisitioned under this Act or under any other requisitioning law. In order to reject this argument it would be sufficient to refer to the recent observations of the Division Bench in Mihir Kumar Sarkar v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1972 Cal 8. Further my attention has not been drawn to any law providing for requisition of fisheries for their improvement and development and for increasing supply of the fish.

33. For the foregoing reasons the petitioners' challenge to the validity of the provisions for requisition contained in the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act fails.

34. I record that in the instant case I have confined my finding only with regard to the provisions for requisition and for payment of compensation for the same. In the facts of this case I had no occasion to examine the provisions in the Act relating to acquisition.

35. I, therefore, discharge these Rules. There will be no order as to costs.

36. Let the operation of this order remain stayed for three weeks from date.

AIR 1972 CALCUTTA 372 (V 59 C 73) HAZRA, J.

Shri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew, Plaintiff-Petitioner v. Fatik Chandra Seal and others, Defendants-Respondents.

Suit No. 32 of 1964, D/- 14-3-1972.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Written statement was amended to clarify and elucidate facts already in the pleadings and to formulate new questions of law from such facts for decision by Court. Amendment after 7 years held did not, in the circumstances, cause injustice to plaintiff. AIR 1970 Cal 8 and AIR 1969 SC 1267 and AIR 1950 Cal 379, Followed; AIR 1970 SC 42, Distinguished.

(Paras 11, 12 & 16)

(B) High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta High Court Original Side Rules, Ch. 4, R. 5 and Ch. 38, R. 44 — Summons returnable on 31-1-72 served on the respondent at 4-40 P. M. on 28-1-72, i. e., before close of Court hours, would leave 2 clear days and hence provisions are not violated. (Para 16)

(C) High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta H. C. Original Side Rules, Ch. 4, R. 5 and Ch. 38, Rr. 44 and 46 — Where circumstances demand the Court can abridge time (Ch. 38, R. 46) notwithstanding provisions in Ch. 4, R. 5 and Ch. 38, R. 44 relating to service of summons. (Para 16)

(D) High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta H. C. Original Side Rules, Ch. 4, R. 5 and Ch. 38, R. 44 — Just relief should not be refused for some infraction of rules of procedure, mistake, inadvertence or negligence. AIR 1969 SC 1267, Followed.

P. K. Sen, for Plaintiff-Petitioner; S. Das, for (Defendant Phatik Chandra Seal) and Gopal Law, for (Defendant Umesh Chandra Seal), for Respondents.

ORDER — This is an application for amendment of the written statement. This application has been made by Umesh Chandra Seal, the defendant No. 3. The summons has been taken out on January 28, 1972 for leave to amend the written statement. The grounds taken in the application have been stated in paragraph 3 of the petition. It is stated that through inadvertence and/or mistake the effect of surrender and/or relinquishment of sebaiship or trusteeship of Manindra Chandra Seal, the father of the plaintiff No. 2 Prem Chand Seal has not been specifically pleaded. According to the petitioner, the claim of the plaintiff No. 2 in this suit for sebaiship and trusteeship is barred by the law of limitation and/or ouster and the suit is not maintainable as there was no proper or any appointment of the next friend of the plaintiff deity. The proposed amendment has been annexed to the petition. In the affidavit-in-opposition filed by Prem Chand Seal the plaintiff No. 2, it is stated that the applicant has filed his written statement about 7 years ago and if he was serious, he would have made his application for the proposed amendment much earlier, as the suit appeared in the peremptory list from time to time since 1968. It is denied that the proposed amendment did not find any place in the original written statement due to inadvertence or mistake. It is stated that the applicant has come forward with a belated, frivolous application, mala fide with the intention of further delaying the hearing of the suit. It is submitted that the application is mala fide and is abuse of the process of the Court or that the applicant will suffer, if the proposed amendment is disallowed. On the contrary, if it is allowed the hearing of the suit will be unnecessarily delayed.

2. In the affidavit-in-reply Umesh Chandra Seal stated that during the conference held with his counsel on January 16, 1972 last, it transpired that certain amendment of the written statement filed by him was necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy. It is denied that the application is belated or frivolous or mala fide or is made with intention of further delaying the hearing of the suit. It is denied that the proposed amendment is quite new and/or foreign to the defence already taken.

3. In order to appreciate the nature of proposed amendments, it is necessary to enumerate certain facts, which appear from the pleadings. It is also necessary to state the nature of the defence as originally made, and the proposed amendments for the purpose of determining whether, I shall grant the amendments at this stage.

4. On October 1, 1916 one Durga Das Seal executed a deed of endowment, dedicating his vast properties to the plaintiff Deity Sri Sri Jagannath Deb Jew. The deed provided, inter alia, that Durga Das would be the first trustee and Sebait and after his death the trusteeship and sebaiship would devolve upon his legal heirs according to the Bengal School of Hindu Law by which he was governed. On September 19, 1925, Durga Das died leaving 7 sons to wit; Manindra, Girish, Umesh, Ashutosh, Ganesh, Subal and Jadav as his heirs and legal representatives. From 1925 to 1943 various litigations took place between the trustees and sebaits for the administration of the debutter estates. Ganesh, Subal and Jadav died intestate and unmarried. Manindra relinquished his office as sebaait and trustee. On May 3, 1943 Prem Chand who is the only son of Manindra and heir of Durga Das Seal instituted a suit in this Court, inter alia, for removal of the defendants from their office of trusteeship and sebaiship, for a declaration that the plaintiff be appointed as the sole trustee and sebaait, accounts, administration and other reliefs. In the said suit Sri Sri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew Deity was represented by the said Prem Chand as the first plaintiff. Umesh Chandra Seal, Ashutosh Seal, since deceased and also Girish Chandra Seal since deceased as also Ganesh and Jadav were the defendants in the said suit.

5. On September 7, 1948 by an order passed in the said suit No. 593 of 1943 Mr. H. K. Bose, Barrister-at-law (as he then was), was appointed Special Referee for framing a scheme in accordance with the deed of endowment. In or about September, 1950, the Special Referee framed a scheme for the administration of Debutter properties and for the due performance of the periodical and daily seba of the Deity and for carrying out of other religious and charitable trust. By the said scheme Girish, Ashutosh and Umesh were declared as the then sebaits and trustees of the plaintiff Deity. Mr. Kumud Behari Bose, Barrister-at-Law was appointed as the first Manager for five years. The scheme further provided that the subsequent Manager will be elected from amongst themselves. On July 21, 1949 final decree was passed in the said suit No. 593 of 1943 confirming the said scheme. In 1952 Ashutosh died leaving his widow Raj Kishen, the defendant No. 4 in this suit and only son Fatik, the defendant No. 1 as his heirs and legal representatives. Besides, he left 3 daughters Manika, the defendant No. 4a, Binapani, the defendant No. 4b and Mayarani, the defendant No. 4c.

6. In 1954 Fatik became a sebaait in place of Ashutosh and was appointed Manager by the sebaits. On March 6, 1963 Manindra died intestate leaving Prem Chand, plaintiff No. 2, the only son and Ranimoni, the defendant No. 5, and Rashmoni, the defendant No. 6 his two daughters as his heirs and legal representatives. On February 13, 1956, Girish, defendant No. 2, in this suit died intestate leaving Badamkumari, the defendant No. 2 as his widow and Mohan Chand defendant No. 2b as his only child who are his heirs and legal representatives. In 1970 Raj Kishen the defendant No. 4 died intestate leaving her only son Fatik, the defendant No. 1 and daughter Manika defendant No. 4a, Binapani defendant No. 4b and Mayarani, defendant No. 4c as heirs and legal representatives. In 1962 Prem Chand claimed his sebaiship and trusteeship under the endowment and his remuneration therein. Such claim was turned down by the defendants Fatik, Umesh and Girish since deceased. On January 2, 1964 this suit was instituted, inter alia, for declaration that plaintiff No. 2 is a sebaait of the plaintiff Deity and one of the trustees of the endowed estate, permanent injunction restraining the defendants, their servants and agents from interfering with the lawful exercise of the rights of the plaintiff No. 2 as such sebaait, remuneration of defendants other than defendants Nos. 2a, 2b, 4, 5 and 6, remuneration of present manager, appointment of the plaintiff No. 2 as the sole sebaait and trustee; declaration as to who are the present sebaits and trustees, administration, accounts, decree for such sum as the plaintiff No. 1 is entitled to upon taking all accounts, decree for such sum as the plaintiff No. 2 is entitled to as remuneration, cancellation of present scheme, framing of a scheme of amendment for administration of the estate, worship of the plaintiff Deity, performance of the ceremonies, discovery, inspection, receiver, injunction and other reliefs.

7. On March 23, 1964 the defendant No. 3 Umesh Chandra Seal filed his written statement. In paragraph 1 of the written statement Umesh Chandra Seal stated that paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 of the plaint are matters of record and the defendant relied on the same for ascertainment of the true scope and effect thereof. With regard to these paragraphs of the written statement Umesh Chandra Seal now wants to amend the written statement by stating that in view of the surrender and/or relinquishment of sebaiship and trusteeship by the said Manindra Chandra Seal in favour of his co-sebais and co-trustees as will appear from the deed of surrender and relinquishment dated May 9, 1931, the plaintiff No. 1 did not and could not have hereditary or any right of sebaiship and/or trusteeship in accordance with the provisions of the deed of endowment dated October 1, 1916 or at all in respect of the said endowed estate. Mr. Law appearing for Umesh Chandra Seal submitted before me that the proposed amendments were by way of elucidation of the statements which are already there in the pleading. This is not a new case but the defendant is indicating the point of law which arises. He wants that an issue should be framed on this point and argued. The plaintiff will not be prejudiced because the facts are already there in the pleading.

8. The further amendment proposed is with reference to paragraph 6 of the plaint. The defendant wants to raise the plea of res judicata. The defendant wants to amend the written statement by stating that the plaintiff No. 2 instituted a suit in this Court being suit No. 593 of 1943 (Sri Sri Ishwar Jagannath Deb Jew v. Girish Chandra Seal, wherein, inter alia, he alleged and claimed for appointment of himself as the sole trustee and sebaish of the plaintiff Deity and for remuneration of the other sebais and trustees including this defendant. On or about July 21, 1949 final decree was passed by this Court in the said suit No. 593 of 1943. This Court, however, was pleased not to entertain the said claim of the plaintiff No. 2 as to sebaiship and trusteeship of the plaintiff deity which claim was rejected and refused by this Court. In the premises, the said claim of the plaintiff No. 2 in this suit is barred by the principles of res judicata and/or principles analogous thereto. This amendment is purely a question of law on the facts which are already there in the previous suit. The defendant wants that this Court will also consider whether the present suit is barred by the principles of res judicata or other principles analogous thereto. The other amendment sought for is in paragraph 12 of the original written statement. In the original written statement, it was stated that the suit is not maintainable inasmuch as the plaintiff Prem Chand Seal has no right to the office of the trusteeship and sebaiship and has no locus standi to represent the plaintiff Deity. By way of amendment the defendant Umesh Chandra Seal now wants to add that inasmuch as the plaintiff No. 2 was not appointed by this Court to represent the plaintiff Deity as its next friend nor any leave was granted to him for the said purpose, this suit is not maintainable and should be dismissed with costs. Or, in other words, the defendant wants an additional plea should also be considered on the facts and circumstances which are already there. The last amendment that the defendant wants is that, the claim of the plaintiff No. 2 for sebaiship and trusteeship is barred by the law of Limitation and/or ouster.

9. Mr. Gopal Law for the defendant Umesh Chandra Seal relied on AIR 1970 Cal 8 (Seth Nanak Chand Shadiram v. Amin Chand Payarilal). In this case certain amendments of the plaint were sought for by way of elucidation of the allegation and further that by mistake or through inadvertence the petitioner failed to incorporate the elucidation and/or particulars in the original plaint. The proposed amendment was allowed by A. N. Ray, J. (as he then was) and S. K. Mukherjea, J. The next case relied on is AIR 1969 SC 1267 (Jai Jai Ram v. National Building Materials Supply, Gurgaon). In this case, it was held that the power to grant amendment of the pleading is intended to serve the needs of justice and is not governed by any narrow or technical limitation. The Court always grants leave to amend the pleading of a party unless it is satisfied that the party applying was acting mala fide or that by his acts he had caused injury to his opponent which may not be compensated by an order for costs. However negligent or careless may have been the first omission and however late the proposed amendment, the amendment may be allowed if it can be made without injustice to the other side.

10. The next case relied on by Mr. Law is AIR 1950 Cal 379 (Abdul Rahim Naskar v. Abdul Jabbar Naskar) where Harries, C. J. and Sarkar, J. (as he then was) held:

"If the amendment is necessary to decide the real issue between the parties the amendment should be granted, even though the Court may think that the plaintiff or the defendant who seeks the amendment will not be able to establish the facts necessary to support the amendment plea of defence."

11. Dr. S. Das who was appearing for the defendant Fatik Chandra Seal supported the petitioner and submitted before me that in the conference which was held with him these points also struck him as important questions which arise for consideration of the Court and accordingly he also advised that an application for amendment should be made. Prima facie, I am satisfied that the amendment should be allowed. The proposed amendments are questions of law which arise from the pleadings or from facts which are already there in the plaint or in the written statement of the parties. Only the defendant Umesh Chandra Seal has clarified and/or formulated the points of law which he wants that the Court should consider for determination of the real question of controversy between the parties.

12. As to whether amendment should be allowed or not; the ultimate test is:— (a) whether the amendment is necessary for the purpose of determining the real question of controversy, (b) whether the amendment can be allowed without injustice to the other side. It is not the case that these amendments are made mala fide. The whole question is whether by reason of delay for making this application any injustice is caused to the plaintiff. There is some delay no doubt but however much the delay may be, it is a question of law which the defendant wants to raise in the suit and the suit has not been heard.

13. Mr. P. K. Sen, the learned advocate for the petitioner urged before me that the amendments should not be allowed. He first of all argued that the petition has been made in violation of the rules of this Court and as such is liable to be thrown out. He referred to Chapter VI, Rule 5 of the Rules of the Original Side which provides as follows:

“Unless otherwise ordered, such summons, not being an originating summons shall be served 2 clear days before the return thereof. A summons may be made returnable in a shorter time by leave of the Registrar or Master which shall be endorsed on it.”

He also referred to Chapter 38, Rule 44 which provides as follows:

“Where any particular number of days, expressed to be clear days, is prescribed by the rules and practice of the Court the same shall be reckoned exclusive both of the first and the last days.” Relying on these rules, Mr. P. K. Sen argued that the Master's summons in this case was taken out by Messrs. A. K. Chatterjee and Co. Solicitors for the applicant on 28th January, 1972, and made returnable on 31st January, 1972. A copy of the summons with the grounds was served on Shri Pulak Chandra Das, Solicitors for the plaintiffs on January 28, 1972. From the endorsement in the original summons it appears that Ashit Kumar De, clerk to Shri Pulak Chandra Das, Solicitor received the summons at 4-40 P.M. He argued that the office hours of the Court are up to 4-30 P.M.

14. In view of Chapter 38, Rule 47, the summons should be deemed to have been served on January 29, 1972, and it was made returnable on January 31, 1972. He submitted that January 29, and January 31 should be excluded and therefore there are no 2 clear days for service before the return thereof as provided in Chapter VI, Rule 5 of the Rules of the Original Side. He submitted that the petitioner has not complied with the rules. He also contended that a summons may be made returnable in a shorter time by leave of the Registrar or Master, which shall be endorsed on it. There is no such leave endorsed on the summons, and no such leave was taken beforehand, for short service and therefore, this summons, according to him, should be thrown out.

15. After receipt of the summons the parties appeared before the Court on the returnable date, namely, January 31, 1972 and by consent the matter was adjourned and permission for filing affidavits was obtained. Thereafter, by consent the matter was adjourned from time to time and affidavits were filed by the respective parties. As a matter of fact the suit was called on for hearing before me and after it was opened by Mr. P. K. Sen, the learned counsel for the defendant Umesh Chandra Seal submitted that his client has been advised to make an application for amendment for the written statement and the matter was then adjourned for the same.

16. In Chapter 53, Rule 46 of the Rules of the Original Side, it is provided that “the Court or a Judge shall have power to enlarge or abridge the time appointed by these rules upon such terms (if any) as the justice of the case may require and any such enlargement may be ordered, although the application for the same is not made only after the expiration of the time appointed or allowed”. After all rules of procedure are intended to be a handmaid to the administration of justice. A party cannot be refused just relief merely because of some mistake, negligence or inadvertence or infraction of the rules of procedure. This is a salutary principle and this principle has been recognised by the Supreme Court in AIR 1969 SC 1267 at p. 1268. Mr. Sen did not say that his client suffered injustice because of shortness of time. As a matter of fact the clerk of Mr. Pulak Chandra Das, Solicitors for the plaintiff received the summons on January 28, 1972. I think the Court has ample power to abridge time to do justice to a litigant. This is not a case where due to shortness of time the plaintiff has suffered in any way. However, since then I enquired from the Registrar, Appellate Side as to the office hours of the Court and I ascertained that the office hours are between 10-15 A.M. to 4-45 P.M. In that event, the summons being received at 4-40 P.M. on January 28, 1972 by the clerk of Shri Pulak Chandra Das, was received in time on January 28, 1972, and the summons being returnable on January 31, 1972, there are two clear days before the returnable date. In the premises, there is no substance in the point raised by Mr. P. K. Sen. The next point submitted by Mr. P. K. Sen is that the delay in making this application has not been explained in the petition. Mr. Sen relied on AIR 1970 SC 42 (Raj Kumar Mohan Singh v. Raj Kumar Pasupatinath Saran Singh) and contended that this amendment should not be allowed. In Raj Kumar Mohan Singh's case litigation continued for 22 years and the defendant applied in the Supreme Court for amendment of the written statement to raise new contention. The Supreme Court was not satisfied, prima facie, in the contention raised and held that the amendment could not be allowed at such a late stage. In my view the Supreme Court did not allow the amendment under entirely different circumstances which has not much relevance to the facts of this case. In this case all the facts are there in the pleadings of the parties. Only certain points of law are sought to be raised by way of amendment which arise from the facts which are already stated. The defendant stated in his affidavit that there is no inconsistent averment. The proposed amendment has been asked for in elucidation and amplification of the averments already made in the written statement. I do not think that there will be any injustice caused to the plaintiff if I allow such amendment. Mr. P. K. Sen relied on (1966) 70 Cal WN 1055, (Bata Shoe Co. Ltd. v. National Properties Ltd.). In this case, the defendant asked for amendment of the written statement after 7 years. The plaintiff opposed the amendment on the ground that by the amendment the defendant is seeking to make a third party responsible for the injury and contended that what is sought to be pleaded by way of amendment were pleaded in the original written statement. He could have sued the third party which he cannot do now in view of lapse of time. I do not know how this case has any relevance under the facts of this case. In any event, in the case reported in (1966) 70 Cal WN 1055, S. K. Mukherjee, J. held: "the amendment of the defence should not be refused on the ground that the defendant is making a new case if the plaintiff does not suffer some injury by the amendment which cannot be compensated by costs". I think that this case is against the contention of Mr. P. K. Sen and this case does not support him. In this case leave to amend the written statement was granted by S. K. Mukherjee, J. even after 7 years. The other case cited by Mr. P. K. Sen, AIR 1970 SC 110, does not apply. In the premises, I will allow the prayers in the Master's summons. Orders in terms of prayers (a), (b) and (c) of the Master's summons are granted. With regard to costs, the petitioner must pay costs of this application and the costs thrown away by reason of the suit being taken out of the list when the suit was actually called on and opened by Mr. P. K. Sen. Mr. Sen submitted that his client will not be able to realise the cost from the petitioner unless it is made condition precedent. He stated that there is a decree in favour of his client for Rupees 28,000/- which is mentioned in his affidavit and the said decree could not be realised. There is no doubt that in the instant case there is delay for several years. Cost of the day was reserved. This prayer for amendment of the written statement has been made more than 7 years after the date of the filing of the original written statement. In view of the above fact, the petitioner do pay to the plaintiff's Solicitors the sum of 30 Gms. within 4 weeks from date for one set of costs of their application and the costs thrown away pursuant to the application made herein and the said 30 Gms. be held subject to taxation on usual undertaking of the parties to repay or refund whatever the amount may be on taxation. The amendment should be effected within 4 weeks from this date, on a signed copy of the minutes, on usual undertaking of the applicant's Solicitors to have the order drawn up and completed. Order to be drawn up expeditiously. All parties concerned including the department to act on a signed copy of the minute. Suit to appear in the peremptory list 8 weeks from this date. Certified for counsel.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, J. —

EP/FP/D133/72/SB/VBB

Hooghly, delivered on the 4th January, 1958. The dispute relates to about 6.89 acres of land under khatian No. 238 in Mouza Chowtara, P.S. Dhaniakhali in the district of Hooghly. One Bholanath Jana was a tenant in respect of this land under Satis Giri, the Mohunt of the Hrishikesh Asram of Tarakeswar. On the 22nd December, 1932 Bholanath sold some portions of this land to the defendants Nos. 7 and 8. The defendants Nos. 3 to 6 are the heirs of Bholanath and the defendant No. 1 is the present landlord.

2. In 1937, the landlord filed a rent suit against the defendants Nos. 3 to 8. This was Rent Suit No. 999 of 1937. The suit was decreed on February 2, 1938. Before this decree was put into execution, the plaintiff purchased the suit plots from the defendants Nos. 7 and 8 with notice to the landlord. The date of plaintiff's purchase is the 19th December, 1938.

3. Thereafter on the 12th March, 1941 in the Rent Execution Case No. 763 of 1940 the suit lands were put to sale by (Contd. on Column No. (2)).

Description of suit.

Period of limitation.

Time from which period begins to run.

To recover possession of land claimed by the plaintiff as a raiyat or an under-raiyat.

Two years.

The date of dispossession.

7. The plaintiff preferred an appeal which was marked as Title Appeal No. 187 of 1954. On the 4th February, 1958, the Additional Subordinate Judge of Hooghly dismissed the appeal. The Appellate Judge did not disturb the Munsif's finding on the question of title. He agreed with him on the question of limitation. He was also of the view that Art. 3 in Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 stood in the way of the plaintiff's obtaining a decree.

8. On the 29th April, 1958 the present appeal was filed. On May 5, 1965 P. N. Mookerjee, J. referred the appeal to a Division Bench as it raised important question of law.

9. The only point that arises for consideration is whether the plaintiff's suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession would be governed by Art. 3 in Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 or by the ordinary law of limitation, in other words, whether the period of limitation would be two years or twelve years. If the period of limitation is twelve years the suit was instituted within time.

10. Now, Art. 3 in Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 applies to a suit by a raiyat or an under-raiyat who is seeking to recover possession. Obviously the Article contemplates that the raiyat or the under-raiyat was in possession: he has been dispossessed; and he is trying to recover possession. There was a difference of opinion in our Court as to the nature of auction. In this sale the defendant No. 1 became the auction-purchaser.

4. Pursuant to this auction-purchase, delivery of possession of the suit lands was given to the defendant No. 1 on the 8th December, 1941. The defendant No. 1 obtained possession through Court, and thereafter settled the suit lands to the defendant No. 2.

5. The plaintiff, who is the appellant before us, on the 28th September, 1951, filed Title Suit No. 230 of 1951 in the Munsif's Court at Chinsurah. In the plaint, inter alia, declaration of title and recovery of possession were claimed.

6. On the 24th April, 1954 the Second Munsif of Chinsurah disposed of this title suit. He held that "the plaintiff's title to the suit lands acquired by Ext. 3 has remained unaffected by the sale in execution of the decree in Rent Suit No. 999 of 1937 of the 1st Court of Munsif, Hooghly". But he dismissed the suit on the ground of limitation. According to him, to a suit of this nature Art. 3 in Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 applies. This Article is as follows:

dispossession which Article 3 envisaged. One view was that the dispossession must be by the landlord himself. The other view was that any form of dispossession was enough to bring the suit within the scope of Art. 3. Fortunately for us, the controversy has now been settled by a Full Bench decision of our Court in the case Kubir Malla v. Manik Mallik, AIR 1961 Cal 75 (FB). Our Full Bench is of the view that since Schedule III, Art. 3 finds place in a statute which, according to its preamble, is intended "to amend and consolidate enactments relating to the law of landlord and tenant", the word 'dispossession' in the third column of this Article means dispossession by the landlord or by an authorised agent of the landlord acting within the scope of his authority; the mere fact that the landlord brought the holding to sale does not justify an inference of implied undertaking by him to recognise the third party auction-purchaser as his tenant in the absence of any evidence to that effect: further under the present law the recognition of the purchaser as a tenant does not depend upon any 'implied offer' by the landlord to recognise him as a tenant: the purchaser's right is now a statutory right as provided in Section 26-C which can be enforced even against the will of the landlord: hence in the execution of a decree for rent obtained against a tenant by the landlord a third party purchases the right, title and interest of the defaulting tenant or the holding itself and dispossesses the original tenant the dispossession is not to be deemed to be dispossession by or on behalf of the landlord so as to attract the special limitation provided in Schedule III, Art. 3.

11. A Full Bench of the Patna High Court in Gajadhar Rai v. Ram Charan Gope, 125 Ind Cas 565 = (AIR 1930 Pat 256) (FB) has also taken the same view. The Patna High Court's Full Bench has held that the special period of limitation prescribed by Art. 3 of Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act does not apply to a case of dispossession by the landlord as purchaser of the holding in execution of a decree for rent.

12. The Patna High Court's decision is more apposite to the facts of our case. The position is that unless the dispossession complained of is a dispossession by the landlord in his capacity as the landlord, Art. 3 of Schedule III to the Bengal Tenancy Act is not attracted. From this point of view the judgments of the Courts below with respect to limitation cannot be sustained. In the instant case there was a purchase by the defendant No. 1 who was the landlord in Rent Execution Case No. 763 of 1940 but the landlord did not purchase as a landlord but as any other auction-purchaser in a rent execution sale. On these facts, the special period of limitation cannot apply to the plaintiff's Title Suit No. 230 of 1951.

13. We, therefore, allow the appeal and set aside the findings of the Court below in regard to limitation as also the order of the Court below dismissing the suit. The plaintiff's suit is decreed as prayed. There will be no order as to costs of this appeal.

S. K. DATTA, J. :— 14. I agree.

Constitution of India, Article 309 —
No specific rule under Article — Resignation when takes effect.

The fact that resignation is to be effective from a future date does not mean that it was not accepted before and that the Government servant continued in service till that date. AIR 1954 SC 584, Relied on. (Para 2)

In the absence of any rules under the Article to that effect a communication of acceptance of resignation is not essential for its being effective. A Government servant cannot urge that he should be deemed to be in service till acceptance of his resignation was communicated to him and he could withdraw it before the date of such communication though it was accepted by Government before the date of its withdrawal by the him. Art. 311 does not apply to such a case. (X-Ref:— Art. 311). AIR 1969 SC 180, Followed. AIR 1963 SC 395, Referred; AIR 1956 All 511, Distinguished. (Para 4)

A. P. Chatterjee and Sm. Sabitri Devi (Sen), for Petitioner; Addl. Govt. Pleader, for Respondents.

ORDER :— The petitioner was appointed Law Officer in the Directorate of Mines and Minerals, Government of West Bengal by the order dated 19th April, 1965. The petitioner was appointed substantially to that post though on probation for two years with effect from the date he actually joined the said post as Law Officer. The petitioner actually joined on 27th April, 1965. On 16th May, 1966 the petitioner tendered his resignation to the Deputy Secretary, Commerce and Industries Department, Government of West Bengal through the Chief Mining Officer, Government of West Bengal. In the said letter, the petitioner stated that his resignation might be accepted at an early date with a request to relieve him of his present post as early as possible. It has been said on behalf of the respondents in the affidavit-in-opposition that the said resignation was accepted by the then Minister of State on the 30th May, 1966. After submission of the resignation, the petitioner changed his mind and wrote a letter on 3rd June, 1966 to the Deputy Secretary, Commerce and Industries Department withdrawing his resignation. On 8th June, 1966 the Deputy Secretary to the Government of West Bengal, Commerce and Industries, Mines Branch forwarded a Notification accepting the petitioner's resignation from the post of the Law Officer. The petitioner was informed by the said letter that his resignation had been accepted with effect from 10th June, 1966. On 9th June, 1966 the petitioner was informed that the petitioner's resignation had already been accepted with effect from 10th June, 1966 and the Government expressed its inability to consider the petitioner's letter dated 3rd June, 1966 withdrawing his resignation. Upon these facts, the petitioner moved this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution.

2. Counsel for the petitioner contended that inasmuch as the resignation letter was withdrawn before the order communicating acceptance of the resignation was received by the petitioner, the petitioner was entitled to withdraw the said resignation and the respondents were required to consider the said withdrawal. In not having done so, it was urged that the respondents acted illegally. It was further submitted that inasmuch as the resignation was accepted with effect from June 10, 1966 the petitioner continued to be in the Government service until that date and, therefore, the petitioner had the right to withdraw the said resignation until that date. It was urged that the Government decision was not a decision until it was communicated. In the premises, inasmuch as no decision was communicated to the petitioner accepting the resignation of the petitioner prior to 3rd or 4th June, 1966, the petitioner was entitled to withdraw the letter of resignation. It was submitted further that the Government had acted illegally in accepting the resignation.

Counsel for the petitioner drew my attention to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Jai Ram v. Union of India, AIR 1954 SC 584. There it has been observed that it might be conceded that it was open to a servant, who had expressed a desire to retire from service and to his superior officer to give him the requisite permission, to change his mind subsequently and ask for cancellation of the permission thus obtained; but the Government servant should be allowed to do so as long as he continued in service and not after it had terminated. But where the service of the servant had ceased, because of the retirement he could not be held to have continued in his service, though at the time he was on post-retirement leave granted to him under special circumstances. It was urged by counsel for the petitioner on the basis of the authority of this aforesaid decision that in the instant case, firstly, the resignation was accepted from 10th June, 1966, therefore, the Government servant was entitled until that date to be considered to be in service and as he was in service until June 10, 1966 the Government servant was entitled to withdraw the resignation. I am however of the opinion that it cannot be contended that the resignation was accepted on 10th June, 1966. The resignation was accepted long before that and in the affidavit-in-opposition it had been stated that it was so accepted on 30th May, 1966. The fact that the resignation was effective from a future date does not, in my opinion, mean that the resignation was not accepted until that future date. Therefore, it is not possible to hold that until 10th June, 1966, the petitioner continued to be in service. In the premises, I am unable to accept the first contention urged in support of this application.

3. Counsel for the petitioner also relied on the Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Bahori Lal Paliwal v. District Magistrate, Bulandshahr, AIR 1956 All 511 (FB). There, a bye-election was held on a casual vacancy supposed to have been created by the acceptance of resignation of the former Chairman of a Town Area Committee. The Chairman had, however before his resignation was accepted by the District Magistrate, withdrawn it. In reply to the writ petition filed by the Chairman, questioning the order of the District Magistrate to hold the bye-election, it was contended that the election having been held it could only be set aside in accordance with the provisions of the U. P. Town Areas Act or the rules framed thereunder, and hence the writ petition was not maintainable. It was held that as upon the validity of the acceptance of resignation depended the validity of the order to hold the bye-election and the bye-election itself, the petition was maintainable. The majority of the learned Judges of the Allahabad Full Bench observed that the Chairman of the Town Area Committee had, before the resignation was accepted, a right to withdraw it and he having done so, there was no resignation left which could be accepted by the District Magistrate. Hence, even after its withdrawal if the District Magistrate accepted the resignation, the purported acceptance of the resignation by the District Magistrate was a nullity and so was his communication to the Town Area Committee. The facts of that case, in my opinion, were entirely different. It is not necessary for me to refer in detail to the said judgment in considering this issue.

4. It was further contended that the decision was no decision until it was communicated to the party concerned and in the instant case the decision to accept the resignation was communicated to the petitioner on 8th June, 1966. Therefore, it was urged it could not be said that prior to 8th June, 1966 there was any decision to accept the resignation. Therefore, it was submitted that the petitioner was entitled to withdraw his resignation. Reliance was placed on the Supreme Court decision in the case of Bachhittar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 395. There, the Supreme Court observed that before something amounted to an order of the State Government two things were necessary. The order had to be expressed in the name of the Governor as required by clause (1) of Article 166 of the Constitution and then it had to be communicated. The Constitution requires that the action must be taken by the authority concerned in the name of the Governor. It was not till this formality was observed that the action could be regarded as that of the State. Constitutionally speaking, the Minister was no more than an adviser and that the head of the State, the Governor was to act with the aid and advice of his Council of Ministers. Therefore, until such advice was accepted by the Governor whatever the Minister or the Council of Ministers might say in regard to a particular matter would not become the action of the State until the advice of the Council of Ministers was accepted or deemed to be accepted by the Head of the State. Indeed, it was possible that after expressing one opinion about a particular matter at a particular stage a Minister or the Council of Ministers might express quite a different opinion, one which might be completely opposite to the earlier opinion. Therefore to make the opinion amount to a decision of the Government it should be communicated to the person concerned. The Supreme Court further observed that it was of the essence that the order had to be communicated to the person who would be affected by that order before the State and that person could be bound by that order. For, until it was communicated to the person affected by it, it was open to the Council of Ministers to consider the matter over and over again and, therefore till its communication the order could not be regarded as anything more than provision in character. Relying upon these observations, counsel for the petitioner contended that in the instant case also there was no decision and such communication was received only after 8th June, 1966 before which the petitioner had already written withdrawing his resignation. This point would have required very serious consideration but this point is no longer open to counsel for the petitioner in view of the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Raj Kumar v. Union of India, AIR 1969 SC 180. The petitioner in that case was a member of Indian Administrative Service and he had asked the Government to relieve him from service. The Government accepted it. But before communication of the order accepting his resignation reached him, he withdrew his offer of resignation. The petitioner in that case wrote to the Government on 21st August, 1964 and on 30th August, 1964 submitted his resignation. On 31st October, 1964 the Government of India accepted the resignation and requested the Chief Secretary to the Government of Rajasthan to intimate to the petitioner the date on which the petitioner might be relieved of his duties so that a formal notification could be issued in that behalf. After some time the petitioner changed his mind and by the letter dated 27th November, 1964 the petitioner requested the Chief Secretary to the Government of Rajasthan to recommend acceptance of the withdrawal of his resignation from the Indian Administrative service. He also addressed a separate letter to the Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Home Affairs, intimating that he was withdrawing his resignation from the Indian Administrative Service. On 29th March, 1965 an order accepting the resignation of the appellant from the Indian Administrative Service was issued and the petitioner was directed to hand over the charge to the Additional Collector, Kota. The petitioner then moved a petition in the High Court of Punjab at Delhi for the issue of a writ of certiorari quashing the order passed by the Government of India accepting the resignation of the petitioner and also for quashing the order issued by the State of Rajasthan. The High Court rejected the petition. On an appeal to the Supreme Court, it was held that in view of the facts and circumstances the petitioner had no locus paenitentiae to withdraw his offer of resignation after it was accepted. It was further held that the principle that an order terminating the employment was not effective until it was intimated to the employee could not apply to the facts of this case. The Supreme Court held that there was no rule framed under Article 309 of the Constitution dealing with the question as to when a resignation became effective. In the facts and circumstances of the case, the Supreme Court also held that there was no question of application of Article 311 of the Constitution.

In my opinion, the facts of the instant case are apposite to the facts of the aforesaid case. In view of the Supreme Court's judgment that an order of termination of service would not become effective until it was communicated would not apply to a case of acceptance of resignation, in the instant case also it must therefore be held that in order to be effective it was not necessary for an order of acceptance of the resignation to be communicated. According to counsel for the petitioner the Supreme Court was not concerned with that contention in the aforesaid case. I am unable to accept this position. It is not necessary for me to speculate whether a particular contention was considered or not but the Supreme Court has in unequivocal terms expressed the opinion that in case of an acceptance of resignation to be effective communication was not essential and a decision of the Government to accept the resignation would be effective without communication. After the said decision of the Supreme Court it cannot be contended that it was open for this Court to hold that the decision of a Government was not effective until it was communicated. It follows from the said decision that after decision was taken to accept the resignation of the petitioner he had no right to claim consideration of its withdrawal. In the instant case it is stated in the affidavit-in-opposition that the Minister of State concerned had accepted the resignation on 30th May, 1966. That was a date before the petitioner withdrew his resignation. Counsel for the petitioner then suggested that there was no proper decision by the Minister of State on 30th May, 1966. This point was not specifically taken either in the petition or in the affidavit-in-reply. Furthermore, in view of the statements made in the affidavit-in-opposition and in the context of the points urged in the petition it must be held that the decision was taken on 30th May, 1966. Counsel for the petitioner also drew my attention to Section 5 of the Contract Act and contended that in this case the withdrawal of the resignation was made at a time when the resignation had not become effective. However, in view of the judgment of the Supreme Court, I am of the opinion that it was not possible for counsel for the petitioner to urge that point any longer.

5. In the aforesaid view of the matter, this application must fail and is accordingly dismissed. The Rule nisi is discharged without any orders as to costs. Interim orders, if any, are vacated.

Application dismissed.

MURARI MOHAN DUTT, J.

Ram Kumar Kajaria, Petitioner v. M/s. Chandra Engineering (India) Ltd., Opposite Party.

Civil Rules Nos. 618 and 619 of 1969, D/- 7-9-1971.

(A) Limitation Act (1963), S. 137 — Scope — Article applies to application under special laws also. (Para 10)

(B) Limitation Act (1908), S. 181 — Scope — Article applied only to applications under Civil P. C. (Para 6)

(C) W. B. Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 8 (1) — Application for pre-emption — Limitation. (Para 10)

(A) (B) (C) It is true that Article 181 of Limitation Act (1908) applied only to application under Civil P. C. but under the Limitation Act (1963), the scope of Art. 137 which corresponds to Article 181 has been widened. Unlike Article 181, Article 137 is not restricted only to applications under Civil P. C., but it also applies to applications and petitions under other enactments. Therefore, Article 137 applies to applications for pre-emption under Section 8 (1), W. B. Land Reforms Act. Where the petitioner is not served with a notice under Section 5 (5) of W. B. Act, the period of limitation applicable would be under Article 137 Limitation Act and not under Section 8 (1) of W. B. Act and hence an application filed within 3 years of the transfer would not be barred by Limitation. (Case law discussed). (Paras 9, 10)

(D) W. B. Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 2 (10) — 'Raiyat' — Test to determine. (Para 12)

(E) W. B. Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 8 (1) — Application for pre-emption — Co-sharer raiyat — Condition precedent for enforcing right of pre-emption. (Para 13)

(D) (E) The only test whether a person is a raiyat or not is the purpose for which the land was settled. If the purpose for which the settlement is made is agricultural purpose, the person in whose favour such settlement is made is a raiyat. If the purpose is other than agricultural purpose, and the person in whose favour the settlement is made cannot be regarded as a raiyat even though the land is actually used for agricultural purpose. (Para 12)

Where the predecessor-in-interest of the petitioner under Section 8 (1) was a raiyat in respect of the disputed holding it cannot be said that he does not hold the land for purposes of agriculture. So long as the tenancy subsists, the raiyat is entitled to avail of the right of pre-emption under Section 8 (1), even though he does not cultivate land of his holding. Cultivation of the land or actual user of the same for agricultural purpose by a co-sharer raiyat is not a condition precedent to enforce the right of pre-emption under Section 8 (1). Manindra Nath Ghose and Janendra Coomar Dutt, for Petitioner; Nalini Ranjan Bhattacharji, Bireswar Bhattacharji, Bhupati Bhusan Dalal and L. K. Chatterjee, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— These two Rules arise out of two pre-emption proceedings under Section 8 (1) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955.

2. It appears that some of the co-sharers of the disputed holding sold portions of the same to the opposite party M/s. Chandra Engineering (India) Ltd. by two registered sale deeds dated April 2, 1966 and April 4, 1966. It is not disputed that the opposite party is a stranger in respect of the disputed holding. The petitioner alleged that he was a co-sharer raiyat of the holding and that the transfers were made without service of any notice upon the petitioner under Section 5 (5) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act. After the petitioner came to know of the said two transfers, the petitioner made the said two applications before the Senior Land Reforms Officer on August 17, 1966, praying for pre-emption under Section 8 (1) of the Act.

3. The opposite party opposed the said two applications of the petitioner. It was alleged by the opposite party that the petitioner was not a co-sharer raiyat of the disputed holding and that the applications not having been filed within the period of limitation prescribed by Section 8 (1) of the Act, the applications were barred.

4. The Senior Land Reforms Officer by two orders both dated March 27, 1967, passed in the two pre-emption cases arising out of the said two applications of the petitioner, came to the findings that the petitioner was a co-sharer raiyat of the holding and that no notice of the transfer was served upon the petitioner. Relying on the decision of the Special Bench of this Court in Asmatoli v. Mujaharali, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48) (SB), the Senior Land Reforms Officer held that the applications having been filed within three years of the respective dates of the transfers, the applications were not barred by limitation. Upon these findings, the Senior Land Reforms Officer allowed the applications of the petitioner for pre-emption under Section 8 (1) of the Act. The opposite party preferred two appeals to the Second Court of the Munsif at Arambagh. Both these appeals were heard analogously by the learned Munsif.

5. The learned Munsif took the view that Article 181 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, was not applicable to an application under Section 8 (1) of the Act. According to him, Article 181 would apply only to an application under the Code of Civil Procedure and that the applications under Section 8 (1) of the Act not being applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, the petitioner was not entitled to avail of the three years' rule of limitation as prescribed by Article 181. The learned Munsif held that the applications of the petitioner were barred by limitation. On the question whether the petitioner was a raiyat or not, the learned Munsif was of the view that as the petitioner who is the successor-in-interest of the raiyat in respect of the disputed holding, not being himself a cultivator was not a raiyat and as such the petitioner's applications under S. 8 (1) was not maintainable as the petitioner could not be said to be co-sharer raiyat. On the aforesaid findings, the learned Munsif by his order dated January 7, 1969, allowed the appeals and dismissed the applications of the petitioner under Section 8 (1). Hence, these two Rules by the petitioner.

6. It may be stated at the outset, that the learned Munsif was right in holding that Article 181 applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and that the applications of the petitioner under Section 8 (1) not being applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, the provision of Article 181 was not available to the petitioner. Whatever doubts there might have been previously as to the applicability of Article 181 to applications under other enactments, it has now been settled by the successive decisions of the Supreme Court that Article 181 will apply only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure (Sha Mulchand & Co. v. Jawahar Mills Ltd., 1953 SCR 351 at p 361 = (AIR 1953 SC 98); Bombay Gas Ltd. v. Gopal Biva, AIR 1964 SC 752; Protiva Bose v. Rupendra Deb Raikat, AIR 1965 SC 540).

7. It has been already stated that the two transfers were made on April 2, 1966 and April 4, 1966, that is, after the Limitation Act of 1963 had come into force. The learned Munsif did not, however, consider the applicability of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963, which corresponds to Article 181.

8. Article 181 was held to be applicable only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure in a long series of decisions, for the reason that since all other applications mentioned in the third division of the Schedule were applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, the applications referred to in Article 181 should be construed ejusdem generis, that is, it would apply to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure. The same view was maintained even after the amendment of Articles 158 and 178 of the Limitation Act, 1908, by the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940.

9. Under the Limitation Act, 1963, the scope of Article 137 has been widened. In clause (b) of Section 2 a new definition of the word 'application' has been inserted. Clause (b) provides that 'application' includes a petition. In view of the said new definition of the word 'application' the scope of the Limitation Act has been enlarged by making it applicable to applications as also petitions under special enactments.

10. The statement of objects and reasons of the Limitation Act, 1963, declares as follows:

"A new definition of application is being inserted so as to include a petition, original or otherwise. The object is to provide a period of limitation for original applications and petitions under special laws as there is no such provision now." It is, therefore, clear that the intention of the legislature was that the Limitation Act, 1963, would apply also to applications and petitions under the special laws. Unlike Article 181, Article 137 is not restricted only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, but it also applies to applications and petitions under other enactments. In my view, therefore, Article 137 applied to applications for pre-emption by the petitioner under Section 8 (1) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act. The petitioner not having been served with a notice under Section 5 (5) of the Act, or in other words, the petitioner being a non-notified co-sharer, the period of limitation prescribed by Section 8 (1) was not applicable, but the period of limitation as prescribed by Article 137 was applicable. The petitioner having made the applications within three years of the transfers, the applications were not barred by limitation.

11. As to the other question, namely, whether the petitioner was a co-sharer raiyat or not, it has been already stated that the learned Munsif has taken the view that the petitioner who is the successor-in-interest of the raiyat in respect of the disputed holding, not being himself a cultivator cannot be held to be a co-sharer raiyat. In support of the said view the learned Munsif has relied upon the decision of the Privy Council in Turner Morrison & Co. Ltd. v. Monmohan Chowdhury, 36 Cal WN 29 = (AIR 1931 PC 314). In my opinion, the learned Munsif has misread and misunderstood the said decision of the Privy Council. In that decision the Privy Council has held that the proviso to Section 37 of the Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), the term 'raiya' is limited to cultivator and does not include the successor-in-interest of a raiya who is not a cultivator himself. That decision of the Privy Council does not apply to the case of a raiya under the West Bengal Land Reforms Act.

12. Section 2 (10) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act defines the term 'Raiya' as 'Raiya' means a person who holds land for purposes of agriculture. It is clear from the definition of the term 'Raiya' that the only test whether a person is a raiya or not is the purpose for which the land was settled. If the purpose for which the settlement was made is agricultural purpose, the person in whose favour such settlement was made, is a raiya. On the other hand, if the purpose is other than agricultural purpose for which the land was settled, in that case, the settlement cannot be said to be a raiyati settlement and the person in whose favour the settlement was made cannot be regarded as a raiya within the meaning of Section 2 (10), even though the land is actually used for agricultural purpose.

13. There is no dispute that the predecessor-in-interest of the petitioner was a raiya in respect of the disputed holding. It may be that the land has not been used by the petitioner for agricultural purpose, but it cannot be said that he does not hold the land for purposes of agriculture. So long as the tenancy subsists, the raiya is entitled to avail of the right of pre-emption under Section 8 (1), even though he does not cultivate the land of his holding. Cultivation of the land or actual user of the same for agricultural purpose by a co-sharer raiya is not a condition precedent to enforcing the right of pre-emption under Section 8 (1).

14. In the instant case, there being no dispute that the purpose of the tenancy is agriculture, the petitioner must be held to be a raiya of the holding. The finding of the learned Munsif that the petitioner not being himself a cultivator, is not a raiya within the meaning of Section 2 (10), is erroneous.

15. In the result, the order of the learned Munsif dismissing the applications of the petitioner under Section 8 (1) is set aside and the orders of the Senior Land Reforms Officer allowing the applications of the petitioner are restored. The Rules are made absolute. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

S. K. Guha and Amiya Bikash Dutta
Sarma, for Appellants; Mrs. Archana Sen
Gupta, for Respondent.

GUPTA, J.:— This appeal is under Section 39 (1) (iv) of the Arbitration Act from an order refusing to file an arbitration agreement. The appellant, a firm of building contractors, submitted tender for the construction of an Auto Exchange at Durgapur which was accepted by the respondent, Durgapur Projects Ltd., and a formal contract was executed on the 11th March, 1964. The contract contained an arbitration clause namely Cl. 25, the relevant part of which is as follows:

"Except where otherwise provided in the contract all questions and disputes.... shall be referred to the sole arbitration of the Chief Engineer of the Department. Should the Chief Engineer be for any reason unwilling or unable to act as such arbitrator, such question and dispute shall be referred to an arbitrator to be appointed by the Chief Engineer. The award of the arbitrator shall be final, conclusive and binding on all parties to this contract."

2. The appellant alleges that the respondent subsequently revised the design and the drawings for the building introducing radical changes. Admittedly in terms of Clause 12 of the contract the appellant was entitled to payment at revised rates for the changes. Under Clause 12 the Engineer-in-charge has the "power to make any alterations in, omissions from, additions to and substitutions for the original specification, drawings, designs and instructions that may appear to him to be necessary or advisable." Clause 12 states inter alia that in such a case the Engineer-in-charge shall revise the rates at which payment was to be made by "determining the rates on analysis worked out from (a) the basic rates of materials and labour provided in the current schedule of rates or (b) the current market rates of materials and labour when even basic rates for the work are not available in the schedule." Cl. 12 further provides that "In the event of any dispute regarding rates determined on analysis for any altered, additional or substituted work under this clause, the decision of Superintending Engineer of the Circle shall be final and binding".

According to the appellant the respondent failed and neglected to refix the rates as required under Cl. 12 while the work was in progress. On 28th May, 1965, the appellant addressed a letter to the Chief Engineer of the respondent Company complaining that they had "come to understand that your office had drastically reduced the costing to an unworkable level" and requesting the favour of his intervention and "restoration of the cuts". This letter is Ext. A (11) in the case. On 12th July, 1965 the Chief Engineer wrote back to the appellant offering certain revised rates which were not found acceptable by the appellant. Then on 11th March 1966 the appellant again wrote to the Chief Engineer of the respondent Company requesting him to "refer the matter in dispute to the sole arbitration of the Chief Engineer of the Department as per contract" in view of the "differences of opinion" that had arisen between the contracting parties. It does not appear that this letter, Ext. 1/X, was answered by the Chief Engineer. Ultimately on 28th September, 1966 the appellant made an application under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Asansol wherein they contended that the Chief Engineer having already "meddled" in the dispute had "committed himself to a certain position in the matter" and had thereby disabled himself from acting as the sole arbitrator as also from nominating any one else as arbitrator. On these statements the appellant prayed that the arbitration agreement contained in the contract between the appellant and the respondent for the construction of the Auto Exchange Building at Durgapur be filed, a sole arbitrator be appointed by the Court and an order of reference to arbitration be made. The respondent filed a written statement contending that as the Chief Engineer on reference to him by the appellant had fixed and revised the rates in his letter dated 12th July, 1965 there was no further scope for reference to arbitration.

3. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the case came within the purview of Clause 12 of the contract which itself provided for reference of disputes as to rates etc. to the Superintending Engineer and that as such there was no scope for application of Clause 25. On this finding the Court below dismissed the application made under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act.

4. Before us it was also contended on behalf of the respondent that in view of the revised rates fixed by the Chief Engineer in his letter dated 12th of July, 1965, there was no further scope for reference to arbitration. We do not find this contention acceptable. The letter dated 12th July, 1965 was addressed by the Chief Engineer to the appellant in reply to their letter dated 28th May, 1965, Ext. A (11). We have reproduced above the substance of the letter, Ext. A (11); it cannot be maintained that this letter, Ext. A (11), was a reference to the Chief Engineer for arbitration as provided in Clause 25. We also find it difficult to agree with the learned Judge that on the facts of this case Cl. 12 would apply. Clause 12 applies when rates are determined on analysis by the Engineer-in-charge for any altered, additional or substituted work and a dispute arises regarding rates so determined; it is only in such a case that the decision of the Superintending Engineer of the Circle becomes final under this clause. Admittedly in this case no rates had been determined as contemplated in Clause 12. In our opinion, therefore, Clause 12 has no application. In our view the dispute that has arisen between the parties in this case is covered by the terms of Clause 25, the relevant portion of which I have already set out. We are also inclined to accept the appellant's contention that the Chief Engineer having suggested certain rates in his letter dated 12th July, 1965 which were found unacceptable by the appellant, had rendered himself incapable of acting as an arbitrator in this matter. Further, it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that there was no officer now functioning as Chief Engineer. Seeking clarification on the point, we asked the respondent to file an affidavit stating the correct position. The affidavit filed by the respondent pursuant to our direction, though somewhat vague, states that the post of Chief Engineer is now lying vacant, though it is not clear from the affidavit whether the post has been abolished or not. The question now is, what should be done in such circumstances. The arbitration agreement does not indicate that the parties intended that in such circumstance the agreement would come to an end; it was also not argued before us that the agreement would stand cancelled in such a case. On the contrary, it seems clear from the contract between them that the parties wanted their disputes and differences to be settled through arbitration. It seems established on the authorities that there is no bar to the Court appointing an arbitrator in such a case (see 52 Cal WN 288 = (AIR 1948 Cal 230); Governor General in Council v. Associated Livestock Firm (India) Ltd., AIR 1964 Pat 468; Hindustan Steel Ltd. v. Ingeniurs and Contractors).

5. This being the position, the Court below was wrong in refusing to file the arbitration agreement as prayed for by the appellant. We, therefore, allow this appeal, set aside the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge and remit the case to the Court below. The learned Subordinate Judge shall order the agreement to be filed and shall make an order of reference to an arbitrator to be appointed by him. We are making this order upon the footing that the post of Chief Engineer is now lying vacant; if, however, in the meantime a fresh appointment is made to the post of Chief Engineer, the learned Judge will make an order of reference to him in terms of Clause 25 of the Contract. Considering the circumstances of the case, we direct the parties to bear their own costs in this Court and in the Court below.

AMIYA KUMAR MOOKERJI, J. —

6. I agree.

(1889) 41 Ch. D 52, Re: Yeadon Local Board and Yeadon Water Works Co. 8

K. K. Maitra and Sushil Kumar Bajpayee, for Petitioner; Samir Kumar Mukherjee, for Respondents.

ORDER:— This is a Rule obtained by the petitioner for quashing an order of dismissal from his service in writ jurisdiction of this Court.

2. The petitioner served as a Constable for more than 11 years under the West Bengal Police. While he was attached to the Dubrajpur Police Station in the district of Birbhum he was charged with gross misconduct unbecoming of a Police Officer. The charges briefly were firstly, outraging the modesty of a woman, secondly of assaulting a Dafadar and thirdly, demanding illegal gratification from few Rickshaw Paddlers of Dubrajpur. An enquiry proceeding was started by one Mr. D. N. Panda, the then Superintendent of Police, Birbhum, but as he was subsequently transferred, one Mr. J. Barman who came in his place proceeded with the enquiry and found that the first and the third charges were proved. The petitioner was not dismissed as "considering the hard days and also his service records" he felt inclined "to give him a chance to rectify himself", and accordingly imposed on November 17, 1965, a penalty of reduction of Rs. 4/- from his pay per month for a period of three years from 18-11-65 without affecting his future increments and service. The petitioner did not prefer any appeal but suffered the penalty.

3. Thereafter, one Mr. D. Dhar, Deputy Inspector General of Police, Burdwan Range, again issued a show cause notice on May 16, 1967, upon the petitioner in exercise of his revisional power against his proposed punishment of dismissal from his service agreeing with the finding of Superintendent of Police on the identical charges Nos. I and III. Although the petitioner submitted an explanation, Mr. Dhar dismissed him from his service. An appeal preferred by the petitioner against the order of dismissal was also dismissed by the Additional Inspector General of Police. That is how, in short, the petitioner felt aggrieved and obtained the present Rule.

4. Quite a large number of grounds were taken but Mr. Maitra on behalf of the petitioner has raised four points as follows:

1. The revisional proceeding not having been initiated during the pendency of the case against the petitioner according to Regulation 884 of Police Regulations Bengal 1943 it was entirely illegal and without jurisdiction.

2. In any event, the proceeding not having been started within the time fixed under Regulation 883 or within a reasonable time but after lapse of about two years from the date of imposition of penalty such proceeding culminating in the order of dismissal was invalid.

3. Regulation 884 of Police Regulations is ultra vires Article 311 (2) of the Constitution.

4. Alternatively, the petitioner in revisional proceeding was not given a reasonable opportunity consistent with the provisions of Article 311 (2) of the Constitution, and therefore, order of dismissal cannot be sustained as valid.

5. In developing the first point Mr. Maitra has argued that in order to exercise revisional powers under Regulation 884 of the Police Regulations the case must be pending. It is said that in the instant case after the imposition of penalty the case was closed since the petitioner did not prefer an appeal but suffered the penalty. To appreciate the correctness of this contention I should read the Regulation 884 which is in these terms:

"The Inspector-General or the Deputy Inspector-General may call for the proceedings of any case, even where no appeal lies, and pass such orders as may seem fit provided that no order under this regulation shall be made to the prejudice of any person unless he has had an opportunity of showing cause against the proposed order. If he so desires he shall be granted a personal hearing and this fact should be recorded in the proceedings."

6. It is nowhere stated that the Revisional Authority may call for the proceedings only where the case is pending. The contention raised by Mr. Maitra cannot be accepted as a sound proposition for it is only after the completion of the original proceeding before the Disciplinary Authority or disposal of appeal from the order passed in such an original proceeding or where no appeal lies against original order of disciplinary authority, the question of revision of such order can arise and this regulation clearly contemplates interference by the revisional authority only where the final orders have been passed in a disciplinary proceeding. So, it cannot be doubted that if the final order is passed in a proceeding by the disciplinary authority or the appellate authority as the case may be it cannot be deemed to be pending any longer. Mr. Maitra, however, points out that, in the instant case, the petitioner has suffered penalty and there is no case against him. Even if it is so, I do not think, that fact by itself will preclude the revisional authority from interference if it is not otherwise barred by the Regulation. In the present case, however, it is not quite correct to say that the petitioner has served out the punishment for the penalty appears to be of recurring nature and it is still continuing. I do not find anything under the regulations which warrants the conclusion that the revisional authority has no power to interfere where a person is suffering the punishment imposed by the Disciplinary Authority or the Appellate Authority. I am, therefore, unable to accept the contention of Mr. Maitra as correct.

7. This brings me to the second point which is that such proceeding in absence of any period of limitation must be made within the time limit fixed in Regulation 883 or within a reasonable time. Mr. Maitra argues that having regard to the various procedural clauses for the disciplinary proceeding and the time limit prescribed for preferring an appeal or revision the Revisional Authority must exercise its power within a certain time otherwise, it is contended, it would lead to impossible result. Can it be said then in such cases where there is no time limit for exercise of a suo motu revisional power by Revisional Authority, the only reasonable view that ought to be taken is that such power must be exercised within a time limit or at any rate within a reasonable time?

8. It cannot be gainsaid that there must be finality of a proceeding not only in a Court of law but also before the Administrative Authority. A line must be drawn somewhere to set the parties at rest permanently over their rights involved in a particular proceeding. Under Regulation 883 of the Police Regulations the petition of appeal or revision is required to be presented by the petitioner within 37 days from the date of receipt of the order, but there is no time limit under Regulation 884 in exercising the revisional powers by the authorities on their own motion. The question is what then should be time limit in such cases in exercising revisional powers in a disciplinary proceeding under the Police Regulations? It is well settled that the Court will not normally supply any omission in the language of the statute unless it becomes imperative to do so where such omission having regard to the legislative intent makes a statute absurd or unreasonable or where legislative intent is clearly indicated by the context or other parts of the statute but there was accidental slip or unintentional omission. In the instant case omission of the time limit in Regulation 884 in exercising revisional powers will undoubtedly make the regulation "absurd, irrational or unreasonable." In such a situation I think the Courts are not precluded in applying the rule of "Casus Omissus." Maxwell in his "Interpretation of Statutes" 10th Edition (at page 250) while dealing with such cases of omission in statutes states:

"An omission which the context shows with reasonable certainty to have been unintended may be supplied, at least in enactments which are construed beneficially, as distinguished from strictly."

In support of this statement of law he has referred to amongst others an English decision in In re Yeaton Local Board and Yeaton Waterworks Co. (1889) 41 Ch D 52. In this case while considering somewhat similar questions under Public Health Act, 1875, where no time limit was fixed in the statute for making an award by the Umpire, Cotton, L. J. expressed himself as follows (at page 58):

"But what ought we to do? It is perfectly clear to my mind that the framers of the Act considered there was a time limited originally for the umpire to exercise his powers, which might be extended, in the proper sense of the word, by extending the original limited time. There is no clause in the Act expressly limiting the time during which the umpire is to act, but in my opinion it would be right on our part to act by analogy to that which is the limited time given to the arbitrators, namely, the date of appointment. Then the limit must be twenty-one days from the time when the reference of the matters to the umpire took place."

9. Following the principles indicated above it seems quite reasonable to suppose that in the instant case it was the intention of the framers of the Police Regulations that the revisional proceeding even without the petition of the delinquent servant must be commenced within the same time prescribed for presentation of petition of appeal or revision under Regulation 883. This omission to my mind as to time limit in Regulation 884 was unintentional. In my view in exercising powers under Regulation 884 the period of 37 days from the date of the final order in the original proceeding must be considered normally to be the time limit unless the delay for commencing the proceeding at a later date is unavoidable and sufficiently explained by the revisional authority.

10. Even assuming that I am wrong in reading such a time limit in Regulation 884 where it is not, then also there is an implied obligation to exercise such power with due diligence in such manner as it may not cause hardship and injustice to the person affected thereby. In construing implied powers and obligation in a Statute Maxwell again in his Interpretation of Statutes 10th Edition at page 364 states thus:

"But when an Act confers such powers, it also impliedly requires that they shall be exercised only for the purposes for which they were given and subject to the conditions which it prescribes, and also with due skill and diligence and in a way to prevent a needless mischief or injury."

11. So, considering the matter from this aspect also the revisional authority is under an implied obligation to commence the proceeding with diligence to prevent the "needless mischief or injury". In this connection I may refer also to Craies on Statute Law 5th Edition page 261, where it is stated that a statutory power of interference with property must be exercised within a reasonable time. I do not find any reason why this principle should not be extended to a case where the Administrative Authority is conferred under statutory rules to perform its quasi-judicial duty affecting the rights of a person relating to his employment under the State. In this case no affidavit has been filed by any of the respondents or revisional authority countering the allegations in the petition or explaining that the delay caused was unavoidable nor there is any material on record to show that the delay in initiating the proceeding was justified. I may mention that direction to file affidavit-in-opposition was given on September 25, 1969; but no steps were taken. At the hearing of the Rule Mr. Mukherjee wanted me to consider whether time should be given to file such affidavit, if necessary. I cannot allow such prayer at this stage. It seems, therefore, clear that the proceeding started by the Revisional Authority after the lapse of about two years from the date of the imposition of penalty by the disciplinary authority no doubt resulted in breach of its implied obligation to commence the proceeding with diligence under Regulation 884 and this caused serious "mischief and injury" to the petitioner. Considering the matter, therefore, from both the aspects the entire revisional proceeding with the resultant order of dismissal cannot be sustained as valid.

12. There is yet another aspect of the matter. Apart from the disputed question whether in absence of any condition imposed in the rule in exercising revisional power the concerned authority ought to on principle exercise such power only in the manner and under the circumstances set forth in Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the administrative authority, as it acts quasi-judicially in exercising power of revision, must have to give his decision with reasons. The Supreme Court in M. P. Industries Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1966 SC 671, while examining a similar rule conferring powers of revision upon the Central Government under Rule 54 of Mineral Concession Rules 1960 of order passed by the State Government held (at p. 674) as follows:

"The conception of exercise of revisional jurisdiction and the manner of disposal provided in Rule 55 of the Rules are indicative of the scope and nature of the Government's jurisdiction. If tribunals can make orders without giving reasons, the said power in the hands of unscrupulous or dishonest officers may turn out to be a potent weapon for abuse of power. But, if reasons for an order are to be given, it will be an effective restraint on such abuse, as the order, if it discloses extraneous or irrelevant considerations, will be subject to judicial scrutiny and correction. A speaking order will at its best be a reasonable and at its worst be at least a plausible one. The public should not be deprived of this only safeguard."

It is to be noticed, however, that Bachawat, J. (with Mudholkar, J.) in a separate judgment made a distinction between the case where the order of the inferior Tribunal was followed and where such order is reversed or set aside by the Tribunal exercising power of revision. On a reference to earlier decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1961 SC 1669, Bachawat, J. while dealing with this aspect of the matter inter alia observed (at page 677):

"In that case, it appears that the Central Government acting as an appellate tribunal under Section 111 (3) of the Companies Act, 1956, had without giving any reasons for its order, set aside a resolution of the directors of a company refusing to register certain transfers of shares. There was nothing on the record to show that the Central Government was satisfied that the action of the directors in refusing to register the shares was arbitrary and untenable and, moreover, on the materials on record it was not possible to decide whether or not the Central Government transgressed the limits of its restricted power under Section 111 (3). The Central Government reversed the decision appealed from without giving any reasons; nor did the record disclose any apparent ground for the reversal."

13. The majority view in this case has been consistently followed by the Supreme Court in later decisions. See AIR 1967 SC 1606, Bhagat Raja v. Union of India and AIR 1971 SC 862, Travancore Rayons v. Union of India. Even, in either view of the matter expressed in M. P. Industries case AIR 1966 SC 671 (supra), the impugned order passed in revision in the instant case imposing penalty of dismissal upon the petitioner cannot be sustained. For, here also the order of the disciplinary authority was reversed and punishment of dismissal was inflicted without giving any reasons. It is simply said that after giving personal hearing and after going through the show cause explanation and considering "the pros and cons of the serious nature of charges Nos. 1 and 3 proved against the delinquent I see no reason why the maximum punishment of dismissal should not be inflicted on the delinquent...." and thus the petitioner was dismissed. There is nothing in the order to show that the order of the disciplinary authority in imposing a lesser punishment was arbitrary and untenable or it went beyond its limits in imposing a lesser punishment upon the petitioner. Having regard to the principles indicated in the above decisions of the Supreme Court it seems clear that the impugned order of dismissal passed by the revisional authority is not a "reasoned order" at all. Mr. Mukherjee on behalf of the respondent relying on a decision of the Supreme Court in Syed Yakoob v. Radhakrishnan, AIR 1964 SC 477, has submitted that in any case on agreeing with the disciplinary authority on finding of fact the punishment was enhanced to one of dismissal by the Revisional Authority and, therefore, no error either of jurisdiction or of procedure resulting in violation of rules and principles of natural justice is involved. This case is not of any assistance to the respondents, for, failure to give reasoned order constitutes a breach of duties of Revisional Authority enjoined under the Rules to act quasi-judicially and involves clearly consequential failure to exercise its jurisdiction vested in it. In this view of the matter. I think, the impugned order passed by the Revisional Authority imposing penalty of dismissal upon the petitioner suffers from serious infirmities and must be struck down as invalid.

14. Turning now to the appellate Order I do not find any provision in the Police Regulation for such an appeal. The order passed on this appeal is, therefore, of no consequence. In any case, even in the appellate order no reason has been given. The Appellate Authorities have only agreed with the revisional authority in justifying the penalty of dismissal. Such being the case, it is clear, the appellate order is equally invalid.

15. In view I have taken on the second point it is unnecessary to examine the correctness of contention of Mr. Maitra on the third and fourth points and I do not express any opinion on them.

16. The result, however, is, the petition succeeds. The impugned order of penalty of dismissal is quashed. The Rule is made absolute accordingly but there will be no order as to costs.

17. Let a writ both in the nature of Mandamus and Certiorari issue accordingly.

18. Stay of the operation of the order made today as prayed for by Mr. Samir Kumar Mukherjee learned Advocate on behalf of the respondents is not allowed.

Petition allowed.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.

Nazla Rob, Petitioner v. The Commissioner of Wakf, West Bengal and others, Respondents.

C. R. Case No. 830 (W) of 1966, D/- 14-7-1971.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Who can apply — President of Administrative Committee formed by Wakfs Commissioner cannot by himself challenge order dissolving the Committee without either being authorised by other members on the Committee or making them parties to Writ Petition. (Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), Ss. 27 (2) (iii) and 29).

Neither the President nor the Committee has any vested right as such in the wakf estate. The Committee as such has only the right to administer the estate and that right cannot be arrogated by any individual member be he President or Secretary. (X-Ref:— Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), Ss. 27 (2) (iii) and 29). (Para 2)

(B) Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), S. 32 and R. 1 — "Persons affected" in R. 1 (a) — Meaning.

"Persons affected" in a case where the Wakf Commissioner orders dissolution of Administrative Committee is the Administrative Committee as such and not individual members thereof. (Para 2)

(C) Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), Ss. 27 (2) (iii) and 29 and R. 4 — Rule 4 does not necessarily bar inclusion of mutawalli in the Administrative Committee that is formed under the above Sections.

But, where serious allegations of mismanagement and acts prejudicial to the Wakf estate were made against the mutawalli, an Administrative Committee formed with a close relative of mutawalli as the President and mutawalli himself as the Secretary was held improper. Its dissolution was not interfered with. (1964) 68 Cal WN 509, Referred. (Paras 2 & 5)

(D) Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), Ss. 27 (2) (iii) and 29 — Commissioner who has the power to appoint Administrative Committee has the concomitant power to dissolve it by reason of S. 17 of the Bengal General Clauses Act. (X-Ref:— Bengal General Clauses Act (1 of 1898), S. 17). (Para 4)

(E) Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), S. 27 (2) (iii). — Allegation of mismanagement is not sine qua non for dissolving Administrative Committee formed under the section. (Para 4)

Pradyat Kumar Bose v. Chief Justice of Calcutta High Court 4

Balai Ch. Roy with Samaresh Banerjee, for Petitioner; Bhabesh Ch. Mitter and Miss Aruna Mukherjee (for Nos. 1 and 3-8) and Sabita Ranjan Pal (for No. 9), for Respondents.

ORDER: — This is an application under the Bengal Wakf Act, 1934. The petitioner one Nazla Rob claims to be in charge as the President of an Administrative Committee appointed in respect of Hazi Belayet Hossain's Estate of Arna. It appears that Hazi Belayet Hossain, in March, 1927 created a Wakf estate which was enrolled in the office of the Commissioner of Wakfs. The said Hazi Belayet Hossain appointed himself to be the first Mutwalli. On his death, his wife Musamat Badrunessa Bibi was appointed under the deed of Wakf to be the Mutwalli. Thereafter, one Abdul Hoque became the Mutwalli. He is respondent No. 10 in the present application. By an order dated 26th of July, 1962, the Commissioner of Wakfs appointed an Administrative Committee of seven members of which the petitioner was the President. The said appointment was made under Section 27 (2) (iii) of the Bengal Wakf Act, 1934 read with Section 29 of the said Act. According to the petitioner the said Administrative Committee functioned very well and gave proper directions for the management of the Wakf estate. It appears, however, that the Mutwalli is the father-in-law of the petitioner, that is to say, the petitioner is the son-in-law of the Mutwalli. The Mutwalli was appointed the Secretary of the said Committee. The petitioner was appointed the treasurer as well as the President of the said Committee. According to the petitioner, the petitioner received on the 24th of April, 1966 the order dated 20th of April, 1966 passed by the Commissioner of Wakfs dissolving the Administrative Committee and appointing a new Committee. It appears that prior thereto there was a sub-committee appointed and the sub-committee made a report, and thereafter the Commissioner dissolved the present Administrative Committee and re-constituted a new Committee. The propriety and the validity of the order of the Commissioner dated 20th of April, 1966 passed by the Commissioner of Wakfs are under challenge in this application under Article 226 of the Constitution. It is the case of the petitioner that prior to the receipt of the notice the petitioner had no knowledge of the constitution about the alleged sub-committee. It is, further the case of the petitioner that the petitioner did not have any opportunity or was given no notice to show cause against the constitution of the sub-committee. Thirdly, it was urged that there was no power to appoint sub-committee as such by the Board or the Commissioner while there was an Administrative Committee. Fourthly, it was urged that the Administrative Committee could not be dissolved in the manner purported to be done. Fifthly, it was urged that the constitution of a new Committee was illegal and beyond the powers of the Commissioner and the Board. Lastly, it was urged that the Commissioner in dissolving the Administrative Committee was not functioning as a delegate of the Board and as such he had acted in excess of his powers in the facts and circumstances of the case. Appearing for the petitioner learned counsel contended that there was no hearing given to the petitioner. It was contended that the same amounted to violation of the principles of natural justice as well as infringement of the relevant Rules framed under the Bengal Wakf Act and that the said sub-committee was not lawfully constituted and as such could not exercise lawful powers while there was an Administrative Committee. It was urged that the constitution of the sub-committee under the Act by the Commissioner before dispensing with the Administrative Committee or before appointing a Committee to look into the matter was illegal. It was contended that the new Committee could not be of more than three members but seven members had been appointed. It was then contended that without any allegation of mismanagement, the Administrative Committee could not be dissolved. It was also urged that the sub-committee in making the report never functioned as a Committee.

2. It appears from the records as mentioned hereinbefore that the petitioner is the President of a dissolved Administrative Committee. The Committee, according to the petitioner and according to the respondents was appointed by virtue of Section 27, sub-clause (2) (iii). The said provision provides for constituting committees, where necessary, for the administration of wakfs. Section 29 of the Act provides as follows:—

"29. The Board may, from time to time, authorize the Commissioner to exercise and perform, subject to the control of the Board, any of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on the Board by or under this Act."

Section 32 also is in the following terms:—

"32. In the case of a wakf-al-ul-aulad, a beneficiary or any person entitled under the wakf deed to receive pecuniary or other material benefits either on his own account or on behalf of a religious or charitable institution, and in the case of any other wakf, any person interested may make an application to the Commissioner supported by an affidavit to institute inquiry relating to the administration of wakf or for the examination and audit of the accounts of a wakf, and the Commissioner, on receipt of such application and the prescribed fee, and on being satisfied from facts set forth in the affidavit that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the affairs of the wakf are being mismanaged, shall take such action thereon as he thinks fit:

Provided that an application for the examination and audit of accounts shall not be made in respect of accounts relating to a period more than three years prior to the date of such application."

Counsel for the Commissioner of Wakfs contended that the petitioner had no locus standi to make the application. It was urged that the petitioner was a President of a Committee which was illegally constituted. In this connexion reliance was placed on the observations of P. B. Mukharji, J. (as his Lordship then was) in the case of Sk. Abdur Rahaman Mutwalli v. The Commr. of Wakfs, (1964) 68 Cal WN 509, at page 513 after discussing the relevant provisions of Rules and the Rule 4 read with Section 27 (2) (iii) of the Bengal Wakf Act, 1934 P. B. Mukharji, J. observed as follows:—

"Therefore, it is not intended either by the Act or the rules made thereunder that the Mutwalli himself should be a member of such a committee to supervise himself. But this is exactly what has been done by the Commissioner by his second order introducing the Mutwalli also in this committee of administration. This again therefore is clearly beyond the Act and the rules made thereunder."

In the instant case it was urged that the constitution of the Administrative Committee of which the petitioner was the President, was illegal in view of the aforesaid observations. Looking at the facts of the instant case from that point of view it appears that the constitution of the Administrative Committee of which the petitioner was President, was improper and its dissolution was proper. It is, however, not necessary for me to decide the present case on the basis of the aforesaid observation of P. B. Mukharji, J. that the Commissioner could not under any provision or under Section 27 (2) (iii) of the Bengal Wakf Act, 1934 appoint a Committee consisting of the Mutwalli himself. It may be urged that Rule 4 cannot in any way curtail the amplitude of the powers given under Section 27 (2) (iii) and there may be cases where for the purpose of maintaining proper liaison between the administration of Wakf estate and the public a committee might be constituted which would include the Mutwalli. But for the purpose of this application it suffices to say that the constitution of the Administrative Committee of which the petitioner was the President, was an undesirable step. I am, however, of the opinion that the petitioner himself as such cannot maintain this application. The petitioner is the President of the Administrative Committee. The Administrative Committee has no vested right as such in the wakf estate. The only right it has is the authority or the power to administer or hold the administration or management of the wakf estate. That is a right belonging to the Committee as such. It cannot be arrogated in any event by any individual member, be he the President or the Secretary. There is no averment in the petition that the petitioner was authorised by the other members of the Committee to make this application nor is the application purported to be made on behalf of the other members of the Administrative Committee. The other members of the said dissolved Administrative Committee are not parties to the present proceeding. In the premises the petitioner, in my opinion, is not entitled to maintain an application under Article 226 of the Constitution. Learned counsel for the petitioner contended that by the report of the sub-committee appointed by the Board the reputation of the petitioner as such had been affected and the petitioner being the person affected was entitled to receive notice under the rules framed under the Bengal Wakf Act. He drew my attention to the following rule framed under Section 32 of the Bengal Wakf Act, which runs as follows:—

"1. On receipt of an application under Section 32 and on being satisfied from the facts set forth in the affidavit accompanying the application that there is a prima facie case for enquiry under the said section, the Commissioner may, if he thinks necessary—

(a) fix a date for the hearing of the application, and cause a notice to be served on the mutwalli or persons affected by the allegations, together with a copy of the application, to appear on the date fixed and

(b) on the date fixed for such hearing, or any subsequent date to which the hearing may be adjourned, the Commissioner may allow an opportunity to both sides to represent their case and to adduce evidence, if necessary, and may make any further inquiries as he may consider desirable and pass such orders as he thinks fit."

As such there was no allegation against any individual member of the Administrative Committee. Persons affected, if any, in my opinion, would be the Administrative Committee. Therefore, the petitioner as such has no locus standi to maintain this application.

3. It was contended that there was no hearing given to the petitioner and there was violation of the principles of natural justice and also the aforesaid rule. It has been stated in the report of the sub-committee that the notice had been given and the petitioner as well as the mutwalli appeared before the sub-committee. It has been reiterated in the affidavit that notice had been served and, on the other hand, it has been controverted on behalf of the petitioner that such a notice had been given or that the petitioner in fact appeared. Where in a case the question whether hearing has been given or not is dependent upon adjudication of such disputed question of fact, the petitioner should ordinarily seek remedy in proceedings other than by an application under Article 226 of the Constitution. Prima facie it appears to me that the allegations made in the report of the sub-committee are correct but even if they are not correct and the petitioner wants to establish to the contrary, he should seek remedy by proceedings other than an application under Article 226 of the Constitution.

4. It was then contended that the sub-committee which was appointed to investigate into the affairs was not lawfully constituted. I am unable to accept this contention. The Commissioner and the Board who had the power to appoint the Administrative Committee had the power to dissolve the Committee always. That is inherent in the power of appointment under Section 17 of the Bengal General Clauses Act and for the purpose of carrying out this power if the Board or the Commissioner wants to enlighten itself by an enquiry by a sub-committee there is nothing in the Act and the rules framed under the Act which prevented such a course of action. In this connexion learned counsel for the respondents drew my attention to the decision in the case of Pradyat Kumar Bose v. Chief Justice of High Court at Calcutta, 1956 SCA 79. = (AIR 1956 SC 285). In the view I have taken of the facts it is not necessary for me to discuss this decision in detail. It is contended that the Commissioner was not acting as a delegate in making the appointment and as such the order was bad. I am unable to agree. Reading the order as a whole, it is clear that both in making the dissolution of the Administrative Committee as well as in the appointment of the new committee the Commissioner was acting as a delegate of the Board under Section 29 of the Act. Even, however, that construction is eliminated, it appears to me that under Section 17 of the General Clauses Act when the Commissioner had the power delegated by the Board to appoint the Committee under the Act it carried with it the power to suspend or dissolve the Committee. In view of the same, looking at the order of 20th of April, 1966 it appears to me that it cannot be said that the Commissioner had acted beyond jurisdiction. In view of the new amendment of the Rules the new committee could be constituted as was done. It was then urged that the sub-committee which went into the allegation did not meet as a sub-committee. Reliance was made to the signatures of three members on different dates—two of them Lutfal Haque and M. Israil has signed on 19th of January, 1966 while Abdul Ashan signed on the 21st of December, 1965. It was urged, therefore, that the Committee did not meet as such as the sub-committee. I do not think it is proper to consider the events in that manner. Sub-committee's report is the result of the decision of the committee and it may be that the members signed on different dates, that does not prove that the sub-committee did not meet as such. It was urged that without any allegation of the mismanagement the Administrative Committee could not be dissolved. I am unable to agree. In view of the provisions of Section 27 (2) (iii) read with Section 17 of the Bengal General Clauses Act, the Board and the Commissioner had the power to dissolve the Administrative Committee.

5. Apart from any legal consideration it appears to me that the order passed by the Commissioner of Wakfs in this case is pre-eminently a desirable order. President of the dissolved Administrative Committee is the son-in-law of the Mutwalli. The Committee had lasted for long time. The President was also the treasurer of the Committee and the Mutwalli, who is the father-in-law of the President, was the Secretary. The sub-committee which was appointed by the Board of Wakf had made serious aspersions against the Mutwalli in the sense that he had not deposited moneys, realised on behalf of the estate from the Land Acquisition Department. He had already built a house in his own name and that his own remuneration had been enhanced at Rs. 1,200/- per annum. It appears from annexure 'D' to the petition that the Mutwalli had leased out a big tank adjacent to his house to his wife at a very low rate of rent. In view of such kind of allegations it is better to have the property managed by a committee different from the present dissolved Administrative Committee. In the premises, I am of the opinion that it cannot be and it should not be interfered with by this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution.

6. In the view I have taken, this application must fail and is, accordingly, dismissed. Rule Nisi is discharged. Interim order, if any, is vacated. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition dismissed.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This appeal is at the instance of the defendant and it arises out of a suit for recovery of money.

2. The case of the plaintiff as made in the plaint is as follows:—

The plaintiff is the nephew (Sister's son) of one Paritosh Bhattacharjee. Paritosh Bhattacharjee and some of the members of his family had been, at the material time, the directors of the defendant company named Bhattacharjee (Agency) & Co.

Pvt. Ltd. The plaintiff was an employee of the defendant company on a monthly salary of Rs. 300/- which was subsequently increased to Rs. 500/-. During the period of his employment in the defendant company, the plaintiff used to deposit moneys with the defendant company and he also used to keep in deposit with the defendant company his monthly salaries. The said deposits were used to be made by the plaintiff at the request of his maternal uncle Paritosh Bhattacharjee. It was agreed that the amount of deposit would be payable to the plaintiff on demand. The plaintiff discontinued his services under the defendant company since Baisakh 11, 1362 B.S. corresponding to April 25, 1955, and thereafter joined another company named Bhattacharjee (Tea Blenders) Private Ltd. which was sponsored and incorporated at the instance of the said Paritosh Bhattacharjee and his brother Bankim. The plaintiff became a director of this Company.

3. The amounts deposited by the plaintiff with the defendant Company were shown in the annual balance sheets and the books of accounts of the Company under the head "Deposit of Staff". The defendant company by its letter dated July 4, 1960, admitted that a sum of Rupees 15,963.28 was lying with the defendant company to the credit of the plaintiff. The plaintiff resigned from the office of the director of Bhattacharjee (Tea Blenders) Private Ltd. on November 2, 1967, on account of differences with Paritosh Bhattacharjee relating to the management of the said company. As the defendant company failed and neglected to pay to the plaintiff the said amount lying in deposit with the defendant company, the plaintiff by his letter dated November 2, 1967, sent to the defendant company under registered post with acknowledgment due, demanded payment of the said amount, but although the defendant company received the said letter on November 6, 1967, it remained silent. The plaintiff sent a letter of reminder dated January 5, 1968. In reply to this letter, the defendant company by its letter dated January 16, 1968, for the first time denied that any sum was due to the plaintiff by the defendant company and made certain false allegations. The plaintiff through his Advocate's letter dated January 24, 1968, denied the said allegations. This letter was replied to by the defendant company whereby the defendant company reiterated the said false allegations.

4. On the aforesaid allegations, the plaintiff filed the suit for the recovery of Rs. 15,963.28 being the amount of deposit and Rs. 378.72 on account of interest, in all Rs. 16,342/-.

5. The defendant company contested the suit by a written statement. The case of the defendant company was that the plaintiff used to draw against the deposit account, and his drawing in the year 1361 B.S. was Rs. 3000/- and in the year 1362 B.S. it was Rs. 15,940/- leaving a balance of Rs. 15,963.28 as on Chaitra 30, 1362 B.S. and that there being no deposit or drawing during the years between 1363 B.S. and 1370 B.S., the same amount of balance of Rs. 15,963.28 was shown in the books of accounts to the credit of the plaintiff as on Chaitra 30, 1370 B.S.

6. It was alleged by the defendant company that in the year 1371 B.S., the plaintiff withdrew from the deposit account a sum of Rs. 10,000/- in cash on Magh 19, 1371 B.S. (February 2, 1965) and after the said withdrawal the balance sum of Rs. 5,963.28 lay in deposit with the defendant company to the credit of the plaintiff. It was further alleged that the plaintiff withdrew the said balance sum of Rupees 5,963.28 on Jaistha 20, 1362 B.S. (June 3, 1965). The defendant company denied that the said sum of Rs. 15,963.28 or any part thereof was due by the defendant (continued on Col. 2)

21. For money lent under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand

Three years

When the loan is made.

22. For money deposited under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand, including money of a customer in the hands of his banker so payable

Three years

When the demand is made.

9. The distinction between a 'loan' and a 'deposit' is to some extent difficult to ascertain. The Limitation Act does not define either of the expressions 'loan' or 'deposit', but judicial decisions have laid down certain tests for distinguishing a loan from a deposit. Both the articles require that there shall be an agreement that the money lent or money deposited shall be payable on demand. It is therefore clear that the agreement that the money shall be payable on demand is not a relevant fact to be considered in determining whether a particular transaction is a loan or a deposit. The only fact which has to be ascertained is whether by the advance of the money, a relationship of debtor and creditor has been created between the parties. Apparently it may seem that there is no distinction between the two terms, and a deposit is also a loan, but really a deposit is something more than a loan.

10. In Mahomed Akbar Khan v. Attar Singh, AIR 1936 PC 171, it has been laid down by the Privy Council that the distinction which is perhaps the most obvious is that the deposit not for a fixed term does not seem to impose an immediate obligation on the depositee to seek out the depositor and repay him, that he is to keep the money till asked for it and that a demand by the depositor would therefore company to the plaintiff, as alleged. It was also contended by the defendant company that the suit was barred by limitation.

7. The learned Subordinate Judge by his judgment dated December 24, 1969, held that the defendant Company failed to prove its plea of payment of the said sum of Rs. 15,963.28 to the plaintiff and that the suit was not barred by limitation. In view of the said findings, the learned Subordinate Judge by his said judgment decreed the suit in full. Hence this appeal by the defendant Company.

8. Mr. Sudhir Kumar Bose, learned Advocate for the appellant strenuously urged before us that the suit was barred by limitation. It was contended that on the facts alleged in the plaint, it should be held that it was a case of loan and not a deposit and as such Art. 21 and not Art. 22 of the Limitation Act, 1963, would apply. It was submitted that as the suit was instituted more than three years from the date of the loan, the suit was barred. Articles 21 and 22 are as follows:—

seem to be a normal condition of the obligation of the depositee to repay. In a later decision in Suleman Haji v. Haji Abdulla, AIR 1940 PC 132, the Privy Council has reiterated the same principle as laid down in Mohammad Akbar Khan's case.

11. From the aforesaid Privy Council decisions it follows that in order to determine whether a particular transaction is a deposit or a loan, it has to be ascertained whether the depositee is obliged to seek out the depositor for repayment or whether the depositee is to keep the money with him till payment of it is demanded by the depositor. In the former case it will be a loan and in the latter case it will be a deposit.

12. In the instant case, there is no evidence that the defendant Company ever tried to seek out the plaintiff to repay. It was the plaintiff who from time to time approached the defendant Company for the purpose of withdrawing money out of the amounts deposited by him. Mr. Bose drew our attention to paragraph 3 of the plaint wherein it was pleaded that the agreement was that the amount of deposit would be payable on demand. Mr. Bose submitted that an agreement to pay on demand would attract the provisions of Article 21 and not Article 22. We are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Bose. It has been already pointed out that both the Articles require an agreement that the money advanced shall be payable on demand and accordingly that cannot be a point of distinction between a deposit and a loan. To quote the language of the Privy Council in Mohammad Akbar Khan's case referred to above, "a demand by the depositor would therefore seem to be a normal condition of the obligation of the depositee to repay." Whether it is a case of deposit or a loan, there shall be an agreement for repayment on demand. There is therefore no force in the contention of Mr. Bose that as the amount advanced was payable on demand, it was a loan and not a deposit.

13. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that he used to keep in deposit with the defendant Company the amounts of his monthly salaries. The defendant Company did not in its written statement specifically deny the said allegation nor did the defendant Company allege that the money deposited by the plaintiff was by way of loan. D.W. 3 Paritosh Bhattacharjee, a director of the defendant Company in the examination-in-chief of his evidence says as follows:—"The plaintiff's salary used to be kept in deposit in our Company. Sometimes, he also used to make additional deposits of money in our Company." Throughout his evidence he did not allege that the defendant Company used to take loan from the plaintiff or that the plaintiff used to lend money to the defendant Company out of his salary. Instead, D.W. 3 characterised the transactions as deposit.

14. In paragraph 5 of the plaint the plaintiff states that the amount of Rs. 15,963.28 has all along been shown as deposit under the head 'Deposit of staff' in the annual balance sheets and the account books of the defendant Company. This statement in paragraph 3 of the plaint has been admitted by the defendant Company in paragraph 3 of the written statement. There is no explanation by or on behalf of the defendant Company why the amount has been shown under the item 'Deposit of staff', if it was really a loan as contended on behalf of the Company. It is unthinkable that a limited Company will describe a loan as a deposit in its books of accounts and in the annual balance sheets.

15. In Kashinath v. New Akot Cotton Ginning and Pressing Co. Ltd., AIR 1951 Nag 255, a Division Bench of the Nagpur High Court consisting of Vivian Bose, C. J. and Mangalmurti, J. has held that if the parties deliberately chose to consider their transaction a deposit and not a loan, then it is difficult to hold that it was not intended to be a deposit. It has been further held in that case, that although the mere use of the term 'deposit' cannot alter the substance of the transaction, but as the dividing line between a 'deposit' and a 'loan' is so fine, and as the difference must to a large extent depend upon the intention of the parties, the fact that they agree to regard their act as 'deposit' is of importance.

16. In Jagannath Prasad v. Ram Dularey, AIR 1956 All 63, it appears that the parties at the time of making the payment used the word 'Amanat' or 'Jama' and it has been held that prima facie the intention of the parties would appear to be that the payment was made by way of a 'deposit'. The Madras High Court in Abdul Hamid v. Rahmat Bi, AIR 1965 Mad 427, has expressed the view that the use of the term 'loan' or 'deposit' may not in itself be conclusive though, of course, it is a circumstance which would be taken into account and that what should be regarded is the cumulative effect of the evidence which bears on the character of the debt as a loan or a deposit.

17. In V. E. A. Annamalai Chettiar v. V. S. Veerappa Chettiar, AIR 1956 SC 12, the Supreme Court has laid down that whether a transaction is a transaction of loan or deposit does not depend merely on the terms of the document but has got to be judged from the intention of the parties and all the circumstances of the case.

18. The decisions referred to above have laid down the same principle, namely, that in ascertaining whether a debt is a loan or a deposit the intention of the parties and all the circumstances of the case have to be considered.

19. In the instant case, it has been already stated that the debt appears in the balance sheets and the audited books of accounts of the defendant Company as 'deposit of staff'. D.W. 3 Paritosh Bhattacharjee in his evidence refers to the amount in question as deposit. There is no evidence that the defendant Company ever tried to seek out the plaintiff to repay and further, it has not been alleged on behalf of the defendant Company either in its written statement or in the evidence of its witnesses that the transaction was a loan transaction and not a deposit. From the circumstances stated above, it cannot but be held that the intention of the parties was that the amount should be regarded as a deposit and not a loan. The suit having been instituted within three years when the demand for payment was made by the plaintiff, it is not barred by limitation.

20. Now coming to the merits of the case, it has been stated already that the defendant Company admitted that the sum of Rs. 15,963.28 had been shown in the books of account of the defendant Company as lying to the credit of the plaintiff as on Chaitra 30, 1370 B.S. It is, however, alleged by the defendant Company that the said amount was paid to the plaintiff in two instalments, namely, Rs. 10,000/- on February 2, 1965, and the balance sum of Rs. 5,963.28 on June 3, 1965. There can be no doubt that the defendant Company having alleged payment of the amount, the onus is on the defendant Company to prove the same.

21. In support of the plea of payment, strong reliance was placed on the books of accounts of the defendant Company. Exhibit A (17) is the entry dated February 2, 1965, in the Jabeda Khata of the defendant Company. That entry no doubt records payment of the sum of Rs. 10,000/- to the plaintiff, but it is not supported by any voucher or receipt. D.W. 3 Paritosh Bhattacharjee says in his evidence that vouchers were not demanded from the plaintiff as he was a close relative of Paritosh. The plaintiff in his evidence denies that he never granted receipts for the money which he withdrew from the defendant Company. Further, the plaintiff says that whenever he took money from the defendant Company receipts were demanded from him and that he also granted receipts therefor. The amount of Rupees 10,000/- has alleged to have been paid to the plaintiff by D.W. 1 Ganesh Chandra Bhattacharjee, the Accountant of the defendant Company. Ganesh was appointed in the year 1969 B.S. i.e. long after the plaintiff left the defendant Company. It is hardly believable that Ganesh would pay Rs. 10,000/- to the plaintiff without any receipt. No reason has been given by Ganesh why he made payment of such a considerable amount to the plaintiff without any receipt instead, it has been simply said by him that the plaintiff did not sign any receipt or voucher. There is no evidence that Ganesh requested the plaintiff to give a receipt for the payment. It appears from another entry of the same date i.e., February 2, 1965 (Exhibit 1/b) that Rs. 1,500/- was paid to the Director Paritosh Bhattacharjee against voucher No. 1392. It is curious that while the plaintiff who had no connection with the defendant Company would be paid Rupees 10,000/- without any voucher, the Director of the defendant Company would be paid much lesser amount i.e. Rs. 1,500/- against voucher.

22. It appears from the cash book of the defendant Company that the cash balance at the close of February 1, 1965, i.e., the day previous to the day on which payment of Rs. 10,000/- has been alleged to have been made to the plaintiff, was Rs. 1,256.13. Ganesh says that on the following day, i.e., on February 2, 1965, Paritosh Bhattacharjee gave him Rupees 10,000/- in cash and asked him to enter the amount in his name in the Jabeda Khata. The entry Ex. 1/c shows receipt of

Rs. 10,000/- from Paritosh. It appears from the evidence of Paritosh that he withdrew a sum of Rs. 10,000/- from the Bhattacharjee (Tea Blenders) Private Ltd. by encashing a cheque on Hong Kong Bank. The counter-part of the cheque (Ext. E) shows that the cheque was issued by the Bhattacharjee (Tea Blender) Private Limited in favour of Paritosh Bhattacharjee in his personal capacity on January 21, 1965. It appears from the Bank's statement of accounts that the cheque was encashed on the same date. Paritosh says that he gave the amount to Ganesh about 8/10 days after the encashment of the cheque and that he advised him to pay the amount to the plaintiff. There is no evidence on record that the plaintiff demanded payment so as to justify withdrawal of the said amount from the said Company. There is also no explanation why the cheque was issued to Paritosh Bhattacharjee in his personal capacity and also why he kept the money for 8/10 days after encashment of the cheque.

23. The defendant Company has examined its auditor Nripendra Nath Sanjal (D.W. 2) of the firm of M/s. Sarkar & Co. D.W. 2 audited the accounts of the defendant Company for the relevant year. Regarding the disputed amount of Rupees 10,000/-, this witness admitted that he did not make any comment in his report, that he did not consider it to issue confirmation letter to the plaintiff nor did he ask for any confirmation letter from the plaintiff. We get from P.W. 1 Manash Kumar Bandopadhyay, a qualified Chartered Accountant that when a Company makes any payment not supported by any voucher the auditor requires written confirmation from the recipient before passing it. D.W. 2 in his evidence admitted that some auditors would issue confirmation letters but he did not consider it necessary. D.W. 2, however, alleged that he had a talk with the plaintiff regarding the payment shown under the entry (Ext. A17) at the latter's residence at No. 5, Hyde Road, Kidderpore. It is clear from the evidence of D.W. 2 that he departed from the established practice and procedure of auditing by not issuing a letter of confirmation to the plaintiff regarding the alleged payment to him of Rs. 10,000/- without any receipt. It may be that he was known to the plaintiff from before and that he frequently went to the plaintiff's house as alleged by him, but that is no reason why he should make a departure from the usual practice and procedure of auditing. In this state of facts it is difficult to place reliance on his evidence that he had talks with the plaintiff at his residence and that the plaintiff admitted receipt of the said sum.

24. Regarding the disputed amount of Rs. 5,963.28 the entry dated June 3, 1965, in the Jabeda Khata (Ext. A18) shows payment of the said amount to the plaintiff. It also refers to a receipt. D.W. 3 Paritosh says in his evidence that a sum of Rs. 15,000/- was given by Bhattacharjee (Tea Blenders) Private Ltd. to the defendant company. It appears that a cheque for Rs. 15,00/- was issued by the said Company in favour of the defendant Company on June 3, 1965. The cheque was encashed on the same day. D.W. 2 alleged that out of the said amount, he paid Rs. 5,963.28 to the plaintiff at the latter's residence in full and final settlement of his dues and that the plaintiff gave him a receipt. It was further alleged by Paritosh that he sent a slip to Ganesh advising him to make necessary entries in the account books. The receipt alleged to have been granted by the plaintiff is not forthcoming. Ganesh alleged in his evidence that the letter of Paritosh Bhattacharjee and the receipt were both kept in a flat file, but the same could not be traced when he searched for the same in April, 1968. Ganesh, however, admitted that all other vouchers were available.

25. The D.W. 2 Nripendra Nath Sanyal says that he saw the voucher at the time of auditing the accounts of the defendant Company.

26. The case of the defendant Company is that no receipt was ever taken from the plaintiff. We fail to understand why this time, Paritosh took a receipt from the plaintiff for the said sum of Rupees 5,963.28. Be that as it may, the receipt has not been produced on the ground that it has been lost. It is significant that when all other vouchers are available, this particular voucher alleged to have been granted by the plaintiff for the first and the last time could not be traced out although it was the positive evidence of Ganesh that it was kept in a flat file. We are unable to rely on the evidence of D.W. 2 that he saw the receipt. The story alleged on behalf of the defendant Company that there was payment to the plaintiff of the said sum of Rs. 5,963.28, that the plaintiff granted a receipt for the said amount and that the said receipt could not be traced out, is difficult to believe. In view of the evidence of D.W. 2 which we are unable to believe and the manner in which the accounts were audited by him, we are of the opinion that the entries Exts. A17 and A18 are not true.

27. The plaintiff by his letter dated November 2, 1967 (Exhibit J) demanded from the defendant Company the sum of Rs. 15,963.28 as due to the plaintiff from the defendant Company. This letter of the plaintiff was not replied to by the defendant Company. Paritosh Bhattacharjee says that as he was seriously ill, he could not give any reply. Save and except the uncorroborated testimony of Paritosh, there is no evidence that he was seriously ill. He merely alleged that he was seriously ill and did not disclose the nature of the illness. Even Ganesh, the Accountant of the defendant Company does not say that the director Paritosh Bhattacharjee had been seriously ill at the time of the letter (Ext. J). We are unable to accept the evidence of Paritosh that as he was seriously ill, he could not reply to the letter of the plaintiff. Even assuming that Paritosh was ill what prevented Ganesh to give a simple reply to the letter that the plaintiff had been paid the amount claimed by him by two instalments, one on February 2, 1965, and the other on June 3, 1965, particularly when it has been alleged that the payment of Rs. 10,000/- was through Ganesh and the other payment of Rs. 5963.28 was against receipt granted by the plaintiff and alleged to have been kept by Ganesh in a flat file. In this context it may be pointed out that the disputed entries in the books of accounts recording payment to the plaintiff were made by Ganesh. In our opinion, the letter of the plaintiff was not deliberately replied to as the defendant Company was not in a position to deny the plaintiff's claim.

28. The plaintiff not having received any reply from the defendant Company gave a letter of reminder on January 5, 1968. This letter was not replied to till January 16, 1968, when on that date Paritosh Bhattacharjee wrote to the plaintiff as follows:—

"With reference to your letter of the 5th instant we confirm that you came to our above office on the 12th instant and after personally inspecting the books satisfied yourself that nothing was due and owing to you by this company as wrongly alleged in your letter under reply".

Paritosh Bhattacharjee in his evidence alleged that on receipt of the demand letter from the plaintiff, he asked Ganesh to call the plaintiff and to show him the accounts in his name. But this allegation does not find corroboration from the evidence of Ganesh. Ganesh alleged that in August 1967 and again in January, 1968, the plaintiff came to the office of the defendant Company, that on being asked by the plaintiff, Ganesh showed him the account books and that on seeing the accounts, the plaintiff stated that it was all right. It appears from the evidence of Ganesh that the plaintiff came to the office of the defendant Company and looked into the books of accounts out of his own. The evidence of Paritosh is contradictory to that of Ganesh and we disbelieve the evidence of both of them. From the facts stated above, there can be no doubt that the allegations made in the letter dated January 16, 1968, are untrue and the letter containing the said allegations was written as a result of afterthought.

29. In view of the facts and circumstances stated above and after considering the evidence on record, both oral and documentary, we hold that the defendant Company has failed to prove payment to the plaintiff of the said sum of Rupees 15,963.28 or any part thereof. The learned Subordinate Judge was perfectly justified in decreeing the plaintiff's suit.

30. In the result, the judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge are hereby affirmed and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

31. There will be stay of operation of this Order for six weeks.

ARUN K. MUKHERJEA, J.:— 32. I agree.

A. F. O. O. No. 281 of 1969; Matter No. 345 of 1968, D/- 30-3-1971.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 43, R. 1 — Appeals from Orders — Order allowing inspection of seized documents — Whether appealable. (X-Ref:— Letters Patent (Cal), Cl. 15).

In pursuance of an authorisation for search and seizure of a person's premises search and seizure took place and various documents were seized. That person filed a petition and obtained an interim order directing the authorities not to examine the documents until further orders. Liberty was given to the authorities to apply for variation of the interim order. On application, the authorities were allowed to take inspection of the documents. They were however restrained from proceedings against the petitioner on the basis of such inspection.

Held, the order was only an order for inspection of the documents seized. Although to the extent that inspection has been allowed, the order was a variation of the interim order issued, such variation did not make the order anytheless an order for inspection of documents. Such an order was not an appealable order. Case law discussed. (Paras 6, 9)

The order is not a "judgment" within Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. The main and the real controversy between the parties is the issue of an authorisation for search and seizure of books and documents. The prayer for ad-interim injunction until disposal of the application is no part of the controversy between the parties and the order cannot be said to have affected the controversy between the parties as pleaded in the Writ Petition. much of excise duty as is in excess of
Rs. 25/- per metric tonne. The standard rate of duty of ammonia is Rs. 125/- per metric tonne.
2. The Excise authorities brought to the notice of Sahu Chemicals and Ferti-lisers that muriate was distinct from ferti-liser and that ammonia used in the manufacture of muriate of ammonia was not entitled to concessional rate and was subject to the standard rate of Rs. 125/- per metric tonne.
3. According to the management of Sahu Chemicals and Fertilisers, there was no separate process in the manufacture of muriate of ammonia. The owners of the factory contended that they were producers of fertilisers and the production of muriate was the result of accidents and vagaries of production connected with the manufacture of fertiliser. According to the Excise authorities, on the other hand, muriate of ammonia was obtained in the said factory by a process of manufacture different from that for the manufacture of fertiliser. The Respondent No. 1 claims to have come into possession of information that there were a number of relevant papers, books and documents in the possession of the appellant which were secreted in its Calcutta office. According to Respondent No. 1 again, these papers, books and documents would establish that muriate of ammonia was produced in the said factory in pursuance of a definite programme and that the entries in the books will further show that the contention of New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd., that there was no separate process in the manufacture of muriate of ammonia was false.
These books, it is further alleged, would show that payment of excise duty has been evaded, and further that information will be available from such books regarding other parties connected with the appellant's transaction with the New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. who are involved in the evasion of excise duty. In these facts, the Respondent No. 1 issued an authorisation for search and seizure of the documents and books at the appellant's premises and pursuant to such authorisation, search and seizure took place and the search was conducted at the appellant's business premises at No. 18A, Brabourne Road, Calcutta, on May 11, 1968. Various books, documents and papers, which would be useful for the proceedings under the Central Excises and Salt Act and the Central Excise Rules, were seized.

4. Thereafter the appellant moved this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution, and obtained a Rule Nisi, and an interim order directing that the seized documents including all books and papers should be kept forthwith in steel boxes and these boxes should be sealed and the respondents should not examine or look into the books until further orders. Liberty was given to the respondents to apply for variation of the interim order upon notice to the appellant. Pursuant to this liberty, the Respondent 1 moved an application for variation of the interim order to enable the Assistant Collector of Central Excise, Calcutta, to examine and inspect the books and documents, a list of which was annexed to the petition. On this application, an order was made on December 3, 1969 by which it was provided that the Assistant Collector of Central Excise, Calcutta III, and Ahibhusan Chatterjee, Superintendent of Central Excise, should be at liberty to take inspection of the seized documents; but it was also provided that the respondents should not proceed against the applicants on the basis of such inspection. It was further ordered that the variation would not prevent the respondents from proceeding against other parties. There were certain other directions that inspection should be taken in the presence of the appellant and upon notice to it. This appeal is directed against this order.

5. In effect and in substance, the order which is the subject-matter of challenge in this appeal is one for inspection of certain documents which have been seized by the respondents. The question, therefore, is whether such an order is appealable. Mr. Goho, learned counsel for the appellant, contended that the order was a variation or modification of the original order of injunction made on May 16, 1968, by which the respondents were restrained from examining or looking into the books until further orders. It was argued that since the order under appeal has the effect of affecting the order of injunction, it should be held to be an appealable order.

It was also submitted that the order was an order under Order 39, Rule 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure and as such, it was appealable under Order 43, Rule 1 (r) of the Civil Procedure Code.

6. It seems to us that although the order partly has the effect of varying the order of injunction made on May 16, 1968, in effect and in substance it is an order for inspection of documents seized. All that the order provides is that inspection may be taken of the documents, but the respondents are restrained from proceeding against the appellant on the basis of such inspection. Liberty has been given to them to proceed against others on the materials obtained on such inspection. Therefore, the order for inspection does not in any manner prejudice or affect the appellant.

7. Counsel for the appellant next contended that it was a judgment within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, inasmuch as the respondents have been given the right to inspect the documents, and one of the prayers in the Writ Petition was for an injunction restraining such inspection. Therefore, he submitted that the claim to inspect documents was one of the disputes in the main Rule. In support of this contention, reliance was placed on the Bench decision of this Court reported in ILR (1961) 1 Cal 317 = (AIR 1960 Cal 582). In that case, an injunction was issued restraining issue of a cinema licence pending disposal of the Rule. This injunction was varied and modified by an order which provided that the injunction should be dissolved except that no permanent licence should be issued until disposal of the Rule but a temporary licence might be granted. The issue of a licence itself was the subject-matter of an order of injunction and it was that order of injunction which was dissolved by directing the issue of a temporary licence. It was, therefore, held that it was a judgment within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. We do not think that this decision is of any assistance to the appellant.

8. Mr. Bhabra, counsel for the Respondents submitted, on the other hand, that the order under appeal was a plain order for inspection and nothing more. He argued that such an order was not appealable. In support of this contention he relied on a decision in (1872) 9 Bom HCR 398. In that case, an order for inspection of books of account was made. It was held that such an order was not appealable. Reliance was next placed by Mr. Bhabra on another decision of the Bombay High Court in (1909) 11 Bom LR 248 in which it was held that no appeal lay from an interlocutory order allowing free and complete inspection of documents. Reliance was next placed on a decision of this Court in AIR 1961 Cal 578 (SB). This decision is an authority for the proposition that the power of search and seizure is an overriding power of the State for the protection of social security and that power is regulated by law. The question in that case was whether a search and seizure was an interference with the right to hold property. Counsel for the respondents also relied on a decision of this Court in (1971) 75 Cal WN 233. In that case it was held that an order refusing ad interim injunction under Order 39, Rule 1 or Rule 2 was a final order and was appealable. This decision has no application to the facts in this case because we are not concerned with an order refusing an injunction but with an order varying or modifying an order of injunction for the purpose of giving inspection to certain documents.

9. In our view, the order under appeal is only an order for inspection of the documents seized. Although to the extent that inspection has been allowed, the order is a variation of the interim order issued, such variation does not, in our view, make the order any the less an order for inspection of documents. Such an order, in our view, is not an appealable order. It is to be noticed that in the Rule petition itself there was a prayer for injunction restraining the respondents from examining or looking into the books and documents seized by the respondents. An order for injunction was made by the Court when the Rule Nisi was issued. Thereafter the respondents made an application for variation of the order of injunction and it is on that application that the order under appeal was made.

10. We cannot also accept the contention of counsel for the appellant that the order is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The order does not dispose of the controversy between the parties, nor does it affect the merit of the question between the parties by determining any right or liability. Although there is a prayer in the writ petition for an injunction restraining the appellants, their servants and agents from examining or looking into any of the seized documents until disposal of the application, that prayer is plainly a prayer for interim relief. The main and the real controversy between the parties, as appears from prayers (a) and (b) of the writ petition, is the issue of an authorisation dated May 11, 1968 for search and seizure of books and documents. The prayer for ad interim injunction until disposal of the application is no part of the controversy between the parties and the order under appeal cannot be said to have affected the controversy between the parties as pleaded in the writ petition.

11. There is one other matter to be considered which seems to us to have a good deal of bearing on this appeal. Counsel for the respondents relied on a decision of the Supreme Court in the New

Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. v. Asst. Collector of Central Excise, AIR 1971 SC 454. In that case, the same questions were involved and the appellant was New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. An order for search and seizure of books and documents was issued upon information claimed to have been received by the Excise authorities that ammonia made for manufacture of fertiliser, on which the reduced duty of Rs. 25/- per metric tonne was paid as against the standard duty of Rs. 125/- per metric tonne, was diverted to other users. The appellant challenged the order for search and seizure as also the seizure itself on various grounds viz., (1) that Section 12 of the Central Excises and Salt Act 1944 was void as the powers delegated to the Central Government were excessive; (2) that the Sea Customs Act 1878 having been repealed, it was not open to the Central Government under Section 12 of the Act to apply Section 105 (1) of the Customs Act, 1962; (3) that the search and seizure made by the respondents were not in accordance with Section 105 of the Customs Act 1962. All these contentions, however, were rejected by the Supreme Court. Although the question of validity or legality of the search and seizure is not a matter for consideration in this appeal, the decision of the Supreme Court mentioned above is of considerable importance in this appeal for another reason. The appellant before the Supreme Court was New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. and the appellant before us is, according to the affidavit in reply affirmed by Lakshmi Narayan Burman on May 12, 1969, the selling agent of some other products of the same New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd. The facts involved in the appeal before the Supreme Court are identical with the facts in the writ petition out of which this appeal arises. Two of the questions canvassed before the Supreme Court by the New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd., are the same as the two questions raised in the appellant's writ petition in this Court. One of the grounds raised by the appellant in the writ petition is that S. 12 of the Central Excises and Salt Act, 1944 is ultra vires the Central Legislature on account of excessive and unauthorised delegation of essential legislative functions. This ground is the same as the first ground urged before the Supreme Court in the case noticed earlier. The second common ground is that the issue of the authorisation for search and seizure was without jurisdiction and null and void. The Supreme Court in dismissing the appeal of New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd., rejected both these contentions.

12. We are not concerned in this appeal with the merits of the appellant's writ petition which is now pending and we refrain from expressing any views on them. But in considering if there are prima facie grounds for interfering with the order varying the order of injunction, we cannot overlook or ignore the impact of the decision of the Supreme Court on the appellant's pending writ petition. The challenge thrown by the New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd., AIR 1971 SC 454 to the validity of the authorization has been rejected by the Supreme Court as mentioned earlier and to that extent, at any rate, the contentions advanced by the appellant in the writ petition now pending in the trial Court must fail. It is also to be noticed that although the writ petition appears to us to be ready for hearing since May 12, 1969, instead of taking steps for expeditious hearing of the rule itself the appellant has chosen to prefer this appeal against the interim order varying the order of injunction.

13. Keeping in mind the decision of the Supreme Court it seems to us that it cannot be said that the appellant is entitled to contend that the order under appeal should be set aside. In our view the appellant has failed to make out any grounds for interfering with the order under appeal. We should also notice that in the appeal before the Supreme Court the appellant was New Central Jute Mills Co. Ltd., AIR 1971 SC 454, who is the principal of the appellant before us. It appears to us that the first attempt to stall the proceedings by challenging the authorization on various grounds having failed, the appellant before us is now making a second attempt for the same purpose. We see no reason to interfere with the order of the Court below.

14. We should also notice that the order varying the interim order by the trial Court, which is the subject-matter of appeal, is a discretionary order and the Court below in making the order has taken into consideration the rights of the various parties and has fully protected the appellant by providing that no steps should be taken against the appellant on materials obtained upon inspection of the books and documents. In our view, both on the grounds that the appellant has no prima facie right to the variation sought for and also on the ground that the order is a discretionary order this appeal must fail and is accordingly dismissed with costs. All interim orders are vacated.

The proper way of the interpreting charge-sheet in disciplinary proceedings is not to be technically and legalistically strict as in the case of a charge-sheet in criminal proceedings. It should be fairly and reasonably interpreted in a common sense way to see that there is a plain statement of the thing complained of as wrong so that the party complained against may be put on his defence to meet the allegation.

Where in disciplinary proceedings under the Customs Act the words in the charge-sheet were "Shri B. M. was found to be in possession of assets.... giving rise to a presumption that....." and the High Court quashed the order in disciplinary proceedings on the ground that the words 'found' and 'giving rise to presumption' indicated bias of the collector who himself was the punishing authority and the whole proceedings were vitiated the charge being defective and being in violation of principles of natural justice and it was found that the accused had cross-examined the witnesses of employing authority and had led his evidence thereafter it was held that a question of fair interpretation of a charge-sheet in a disciplinary proceeding depended on the context of facts in which the charge was laid. The two words 'found' and 'giving rise to the presumption' were not, enough by themselves to make the charge in this case in limine bad and void on the ground of violation of the principles of natural justice. (B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 25 and S. 151 — Calcutta High Court Rules Rule 43 — Appeal from order in writ proceedings — Whether remand can be ordered.

The Calcutta High Court Original and Appellate Side Rules apply to appeals from orders in writ proceedings. These rules do not prevent remand in such appeals. Civil P. C. Order 41, Rule 25 also applies to such appeals. Apart from this express provision the High Court in exercise of its inherent powers can also pass an order of remand in such cases. P. B. MUKHARJI, C. J.:— This is an appeal from an order passed by T. K. Basu J., in an application under Article 226 of the Constitution.

2. This was an application by Biswanath Mukherjee challenging the order dated February 6, 1968 passed by the Collector of Customs, Calcutta whereby the petitioner was removed from service. The only point on which the learned judge decided the whole application was whether the charge-sheet was defective or not, leaving the other points undecided. The decision appealed from was based entirely on the interpretation of two expressions "found" and "giving rise to presumption" in the charge-sheet. The charge-sheet reads as follows:—

"That Sri Biswanath Mukherjee, who had been functioning as Preventive Officer, Grade I, during the period between 20-12-58 and 31-12-59, was found on 1-1-60 to be in possession of assets which are disproportionate to his known sources of income to the extent of about Rs. 61,000/- giving rise to the presumption that the aforesaid Sri Biswanath Mukherjee acquired the said disproportionate assets by obtaining pecuniary advantage to himself by corrupt and illegal means and thereby he had failed to maintain absolute integrity and devotion to the duty as a public servant."

The learned judge came to the conclusion on an interpretation of the expressions "found" and "giving rise to the presumption" that they were indicative of the mind of the Collector of Customs who was also the punishing authority and that he had not kept an open mind. Therefore the learned judge held that the whole proceeding was vitiated and the charge-sheet was defective, being in violation of the principles of natural justice, and vacated the entire proceedings.

3. The learned Judge expressly mentions four other points which were argued before him but on which he expressed no opinion. These are:

(1) the petitioner had been found guilty of a charge of "Benami" which was not in the charge-sheet;

(2) the findings of the Enquiring Officer were perverse as being based on no findings and on mere conjectures and surmise;

(3) certain documents were considered by the Enquiring Officer behind the back of the petitioner; and

(4) the onus of the proof was misplaced by the disciplinary authority as a result of a confusion between the law regarding disciplinary proceedings under Section 178-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

The learned Judge observed: "It is not necessary for me to express any opinion on the merits of these contentions".

4. The proper way, in our view, of interpreting a charge-sheet of this nature in disciplinary proceedings is not to be technically and legalistically strict as in the case of a charge-sheet in criminal proceedings. This principle is well known. It should be fairly and reasonably interpreted in a common sense way to see that there is a plain statement of the thing complained of as wrong so that the party complained against may be put on his defence to meet the allegation.

In Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, (1919) 253 U.S. 421, a learned Judge of the American Supreme Court observed:—

"It does not purport to set out the elements of a crime like an indictment of information nor the elements of a cause of action like a declaration of law or a bill in equity. All that is requisite in a complaint for commission is that there be a plain statement of the thing claimed to be wrong so that the respondent may be put upon his defence."

5. Now, a question of fair interpretation of a charge-sheet in a disciplinary proceeding depends on the context of facts in which the charge is laid. The two words "found" and "giving rise to the presumption" are not, in our judgment, enough by themselves to make the charge in this case in limine bad and void on the ground of violation of the principles of natural justice. The word "found" is a general word and it will depend on the context of the situation whether that expression means a bias or conclusion on the mind when the charge-sheet says that the officer is found to be in possession of assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. Secondly, the words "giving rise to the presumption" cannot also be conclusive in this particular context of facts because we find on examination of the records that no presumption in fact was drawn and that it was the employing authorities who led the evidence and there was no misplacing of onus of proof and there was cross-examination by the petitioner of the evidence led by the Customs authority. It was only after the Customs authorities had led their evidence and there was such cross-examination that the petitioner led his evidence. Therefore, in fact there was no misplacement of onus and nothing was presumed against the petitioner. This aspect of the problem was not considered by the learned Judge in his decision. But these considerations reflect on the question of how the charge should be read in the context.

6. Besides, if principles of natural justice are said to be violated by the use of the two expressions abovenamed, then there are also the other questions of principles of natural justice on which the learned Judge has not come to a finding namely, (1) no evidence, and (2) documents considered by the Enquiring Officer behind the back of the petitioner. It is difficult therefore to judge piecemeal even this question of the principles of natural justice in the present context of facts. One of the four points noticed above includes the question of benami.

7. Now the question of benami does not appear to us to vitiate the proceedings because the whole point was whether the petitioner was in possession of assets disproportionate to his known sources of income. The enquiry is implicit as to whether the assets though may be standing in the name of his mother were in reality his assets. By itself such a consideration would not in our view vitiate the enquiry. It is therefore necessary to come to certain findings on those four questions.

8. With a view to enable us to come to an appropriate conclusion whether on a total view of the present context the charge-sheet was defective on the grounds mentioned above we feel that on the present materials it is difficult to draw that conclusion which the learned Judge has drawn without having before us the findings on the four questions mentioned above.

9. We, therefore, remand the case to the learned Judge for his findings and conclusions on the four points set out above. After the learned Judge comes to a finding on those four points then his findings may be placed before us or the appropriate Bench dealing with these appeals when we or the appropriate Bench dealing with these appeals will finally dispose of the appeal.

10. A point at one stage raised whether there could be a remand in an appeal from an order under Article 226 of the Constitution deciding only on one issue more or less preliminary in nature and leaving the other issues undecided. We have carefully considered the point and we think that our jurisdiction in this respect is unquestionable. This Court has jurisdiction to make an order of remand in such cases. No doubt Article 226 of the Constitution has its own rules and procedures and no doubt it may be arguable that Civil Procedure Code as such may not be wholly applicable without any limitations or qualifications. We support the jurisdiction to order a remand in such cases first by reference to Rule 43 of the Rules of the High Court at Calcutta relating to applications under Article 226 of the Constitution which provides as follows:—

"Appeals from final orders in this jurisdiction shall be made in the same manner as appeals from original orders in the Original Side and appeals from orders in the Appellate Side according as they arise out of Original Side and Appellate Side applications and all rules applicable thereto in the rules of the Original and Appellate Side, respectively, shall apply thereto mutatis mutandis."

That means all the Original Side and Appellate Side rules will apply in these appeals. It must necessarily, therefore, follow that as both the Original and Appellate Side rules do not prevent remand orders, remand orders are within the jurisdiction of this Court in these cases relating to appeals from orders under Art. 226 of the Constitution. Secondly there is inherent jurisdiction in this Court of appeal for ends of justice to make an order of remand, quite apart from the specific provisions of the Civil Procedure Code under Order 41, Rule 25.

11. Regarding the applicability of the Civil Procedure Code we need only refer to certain decisions to make the point clear. In Ramsingh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1969 Raj 41, a Division Bench of the Rajasthan High Court came to the conclusion that even though the provisions of Civil Procedure Code might not directly apply, such of the provisions as were not in conflict with any particular rules of the Rajasthan High Court could apply and in that case the provisions of Order 9, Rule 9 of the Civil Procedure Code were applied. In that decision some of the relevant cases on the point including those of the Supreme Court are discussed and it will be unnecessary for us to repeat them. See particularly the observations at page 47 of that report. The next case to which reference may be made is Daryao v. State of U. P., AIR 1961 SC 1457, which considered the applicability of Section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code. Again in Gulabchand Chotalal Parikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 SC 1153, Section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code was applied. We shall conclude our citation of the authorities of this point by making a reference to the decision in Narayan Row v. Iswar Lal, AIR 1965 SC 1818, where the Supreme Court observed at p. 1823 as follows:—

"On a careful review of the provision of the Constitution we are of the opinion that there is no ground for restricting the expression 'civil proceeding' only to those proceedings which arise out of civil suits or proceedings which are tried as civil suits, nor is there any rational basis for excluding from its purview proceedings instituted and tried in the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 226, where the aggrieved party seeks relief against infringement of civil rights by authorities purporting to act in exercise of powers conferred upon them by revenue statutes. The preliminary objections raised by Counsel for the assessee must therefore fail."

This authority was cited and followed in the Jay Engineering Works Ltd. v. State of West Bengal, a Full Bench decision of this Court in 72 Cal WN 441 at p 589 = (AIR 1968 Cal 407).

12. We, therefore, remand the appeal on the four specific points set out above. The costs of this proceeding will be reserved and will abide by the result of the final disposal of the appeal after it comes back from the remand and when it is finally disposed of. The parties will be at liberty to mention this matter to the learned Judge, for expeditious hearing and who will take it up and will deal with these four specific points according to his convenience and to the convenience of the parties.

ORDER.— Two common questions arise for decision in these two Rules which were issued at the instance of the defendant in two suits for eviction. The first one is whether the tenant is entitled to get relief under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act, in a suit for eviction under the provisions of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act. The learned Munsif held that this relief is not open to him, and he is quite right in that view.

2. The second question that arises is as to whether the learned Munsif was justified in rejecting his application filed under Sections 8 and 9 of Act XXXIV of 1969 (West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Second Amendment) Act, 1969). Section 8 amends Section 21 of the Original Act and Section 9 amends Section 22. Section 13 of Act XXXIV of 1969 would show that the amendments by Sections 8 and 9 "shall have effect in respect of suits including appeals which are pending at the date of commencement of this Act." Mr. Bhattacharjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners submits that the suits are still pending, though the defences against the delivery of possession had been struck out and that under the recent amended Sections 21 and 22 referred to above, the deposits made by the tenant would be quite valid and the order under Section 17 (3) striking out the defence against delivery of possession shall have to be re-opened. It would appear that one of the main grounds as to why the application under Section 17 (3) was allowed, was that the tenant did not make the deposit of rent in the office of the Rent Controller after the institution of the suit within the 15th of the succeeding month. Mr. Bhattacharjee contends that in view of the amended Ss. 21 and 22, the deposits would be valid and those two sections would control actually Section 17 (1) of the Act. I am not in a position to accept these propositions, as correct. Sections 21 and 22 occur in Chapter IV which relates to 'Deposit of Rent'. Sec. 17 occurs in Chapter III which relates to suits and proceedings for eviction. It is clearly stated in Section 18 (1) that after the institution of the suit the tenant "shall thereafter continue to deposit or pay month by month by the 15th of each succeeding month a sum equivalent to rent at that rate." Though thereafter there have been a number of amendments to Section 17 by successive Acts, still this position has not been affected at all. It is obvious, therefore, that after the institution of the suit irrespective of Section 21 or 22, the deposit must be made within the 15th of each succeeding month. In other words, this provision under Section 17 (1) is not controlled by Sections 21 and 22 as amended upto date. This view was also taken by my learned Brother Gupta, J. in C. R. Nos. 3896 and 2897 of 1968 (Cal) between the same parties and I respectfully agree with the observations made therein, though that decision was before Act XXXIV of 1969 had come into operation. The fact, therefore, remains that the petitioner has not made the deposit even in the office of the Rent Controller after the institution of the suit within the 15th of each succeeding month. In the circumstances, the order striking out the defence under Section 17 (3) cannot be reopened.

3. The Rules, therefore, fail and are accordingly discharged. Each party will bear its own costs in both these Rules.

Petitions dismissed.

PRADYOT KUMAR BANERJEE, J.

M/s. Munilal Bhagwat Sharan and others, Petitioners v. The Chief Commercial Superintendent, Eastern Railway and others, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 1932 (W) of 1968, D/- 10-5-1972.

Index Note.— Essential Commodities (Amendment) Act (1967), Ss. 6-A and 6-B — Competent authority issuing show cause notice for confiscating goods without hearing representation of the person affected — Held, that the notice was bad in law.

(Para 6)

Brief note:— Section 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act makes it clear that no confiscation can be made unless the competent authority hears a representation from the person affected. If the authorities do not have an open mind before hearing, the provision for hearing under the statute becomes an idle formality. In this case even at the stage of issuing notice of hearing under Section 6-B of the Act the collector was himself satisfied that a contravention has been made. This cannot be done. The satisfaction that contravention, has in fact taken place can come only after the hearing and not before.

ORDER:— The petitioner is a partnership firm and deals in foodgrains and oil seeds. The petitioner No. 1 Messrs. Munilal Bhagwat Sharan is the holder for value of several Railway Receipts having been negotiated through Bank in Calcutta, upon payment made by the petitioner firm. The Railway Receipts are quite a number issued between 14th October, 1967 and 15th October, 1967. The said Railway Receipt is for carrying on maize and bazra from different stations in Haryana to Howrah. It is alleged that the State of Haryana is a surplus State in foodgrains but there was a ban on export of maize from the said State imposed by the Northern Inter Zonal (Movement Control) Order, 1967. It is alleged that the State Government of Haryana lifted the ban on export of maize and other coarse grains including bazra outside the State of Haryana from October, 1967. It is further alleged that an announcement to the said effect was made at Karnal by the then Hon'ble Chief Minister of Haryana on October 11, 1967. The said lifting of ban on the export of maize was broadcast in the news bulletin and was also published in various newspapers. The Tribune, a daily published from Ambala, within the State of Haryana, in its issue dated October, 12, 1967 published the following Press Note:

"Haryana Ban on coarse Grain Movement goes— F. O. S. O. Chandigarh October 11, 1967. The Haryana Government has decided to remove the restriction on the movement on coarse grains produced in the State of Haryana during the current Kharif season says an Official Press Note. The major coarse grains are Bazra, Maize and Jowar."

In the same issue of Tribune it has been published as follows:—

"The Chief Minister disclosed that Haryana Government today ordered the lifting of ban on the export of Bazra, Jowar and Maize to ensure grains of farmers. The Government would also do its best to ensure a suitable price of paddy."

On the basis of this announcement the wagons containing maize and bazra from various stations in the State of Haryana during the period between 12th October, 1967 to 16th October, 1967 were despatched and it was duly booked by the Railway authorities at the despatching stations and the movement was allowed by the Railway authorities without any objections whatsoever. Further in view of the lifting of the ban on export of maize and bazra by the Haryana Government, the District Food Controllers in the State of Haryana under whose jurisdiction the respective despatching Railway Stations referred to in the said Railway Receipts are situate duly authorised the despatch of the goods under the said Railway Receipts and endorsements of such authorisation were also made by the appropriate authorities of Food Department of the State of Haryana. Such authorisation of the export of foodgrains outside the State of Haryana also appears from the memo dated 28th October, 1967 written by the Secretary to the Government of Haryana to the Chief Commercial Superintendent, Eastern Railway wherein it has been stated that though the Government of Haryana allowed to despatch the maize and bazra at Howrah but when it reached at Howrah the delivery was wrongfully refused. It is stated also that the Railway Receipts presented by the representatives at this office did not bear any export permit numbers and as such this office was not in a position to arrange delivery of the goods unless the petitioners can produce any permit from the Regional Director (Food), Government of India, 8, Esplanade East, Calcutta.

It is alleged that the similar consignment of maize despatched from Haryana to Delhi and other stations were duly released. It is also alleged that such delivery was effected in different stations of West Bengal. Be that as it may, the Railway authorities of Howrah refused to deliver the maize to the petitioner. Thereafter the Collector of Howrah issued a notice on the petitioner under Section 8-B of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 to make representation in writing against the maize exported by the petitioner. It is alleged that the petitioners have abetted the export of or exported 229 bags of maize from Karnal to Howrah without any permit. Being aggrieved by the said notice the petitioner moved this Court and obtained the present rule. Under the order of the Court the maize etc. imported by the petitioner was allowed to be sold by the Joint Receiver appointed by this Court and after deducting their remuneration and also other expenses, the balance of sale proceed was directed to be deposited in Court.

2. Mr. R. C. Deb on behalf of the petitioner contended firstly that the maize was imported in accordance with law, inasmuch as, Haryana Government withdrew the ban for importation. Secondly Mr. Deb contended that by the notice in Annexure "B" to the petition, the authorities concerned have already made up their mind before the issue of the notice, about the confiscation and as such the officer concerned had no open mind which is essential in a matter of a quasi-judicial proceeding.

3. Mr. Sankar Das Banerjee on behalf of the respondent contended that there was no order made under the Essential Commodities Act withdrawing the ban imposed under Clause (3) of the Maize Control Order. Secondly it is contended by Mr. Banerjee that as the respondent invited the representation from the petitioner it cannot be said that the said respondent had already a closed mind in regard to the matter.

4. Under the Northern Inter Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order, 1967, it is incumbent on the part of the exporter to take out a permit either from the Central Government or from the State Government. It appears that no statutory form of permits have been prescribed by the said order at the relevant time. Clause (3) of the Northern Inter Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order, 1967 runs as follows:—

"3. Prohibition of Export and Import of Maize.—

(1) No person shall export or attempt to export or abet the export of maize except under and in accordance with a permit issued by the Central Government or by the Government of the State from which such maize is to be exported or by an officer authorised in that behalf by the Central Government, or, as the case may be, by the Government of that State.

(2) No person shall import or attempt to import or abet the import of maize except under and in accordance with a permit issued by the Central Government or by the Government of the State into which such maize is to be imported or by an officer authorised in that behalf by the Central Government or, as the case may be, by the Government of that State:

Provided that nothing contained in sub-clause (1) or sub-cl. (2) shall apply to—

- (a) the export or import of maize—
 - (i) not exceeding one kilogram in weight in the aggregate by a bona fide traveller as part of his luggage;
 - (ii) on Government account;
 - (iii) under and in accordance with Military Credit Notes;
 - (iv) by or under the authority of the Food Corporation of India established under the Food Corporations Act, 1964 (37 of 1964);

(b) the export of maize from any place within the State of Haryana or Punjab to any place within the Union Territory of Chandigarh;

(c) the import of maize from any place within the State of Haryana or Punjab into any place within the Union Territory of Chandigarh."

It is quite clear therefore that no exportation of maize can be made without a permit from the prescribed authorities. In this case, the dispute is that though Haryana Government or its Chief Minister by public meeting or by a Press Note stated that the ban is withdrawn but no order under the statute was however passed. It is argued that the Railway Receipts were signed by the authorities of the Food Department but it does not appear that the authority which might have counter-signed the Railway Receipts was authorised person within the meaning of Clause (3) of the Northern Inter Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order, 1967. At the point of time, therefore, the ban as contained in Clause (3) was in force and therefore it must be said that the permit is necessary for the exportation of the goods outside the State. It is very unfortunate, however, because of the statement made by the Chief Minister of Haryana and/or Press Note issued by the Haryana Government, the petitioner or the consignor has been caught on the wrong foot, though prima facie it does not appear that the consignor was wrong and in fact he acted in the bona fide belief that the order has been withdrawn. It is the Haryana Government who is to be blamed for the petitioner's difficulties.

5. Be that as it may, under the law it is necessary to have a permission for the exportation of goods and if no person is authorised by the said Government, for issuing permit it is for the petitioner to apply either to the Central Government or to the State Government for the permit.

6. The next question, Mr. Deb contended, is on the basis of the show cause notice as issued under Sections 6-A and 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act, 1967. Sections 6-A and 6-B of the said Act make the following provisions:—

"6-A. Where any foodgrains, edible oilseeds or edible oils are seized in pursuance of an order made under Section 3 in relation thereto, they may be produced, without any unreasonable delay, before the Collector of the District or the Presidency-town in which such foodgrains, edible oilseeds or edible oils are seized and whether or not a prosecution is instituted for the contravention of such order, the Collector, if satisfied that there has been a contravention of such order, may order confiscation of the foodgrains, edible oilseeds or edible oils:

Provided that without prejudice to any action which may be taken under any other provision of this Act, no foodgrains or edible oilseeds seized in pursuance of an order made under Section 3 in relation thereto from a producer shall, if the seized foodgrains or edible oilseeds have been produced by him, be confiscated under this section.

6-B. No order confiscating any foodgrains, edible oilseeds or edible oils shall be made under Section 6-A unless the owner of such articles or the person from whom they are seized—

(a) is given a notice in writing informing him of the grounds on which it is proposed to confiscate the articles;

(b) is given an opportunity of making a representation in writing within such reasonable time as may be specified in the notice against the grounds of confiscation; and

(c) is given a reasonable opportunity of being heard in the matter."

Under Section 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act the authorised Officer in the present case is the Collector who is empowered to confiscate the maize exported if he is satisfied that the same has been done in contravention of any order under the Essential Commodities Act or orders made thereunder. In my opinion, Sec. 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act makes it clear that no confiscation should be made unless the competent authority hears a representation from the person affected. After hearing the matter and after that if the respondent Collector is satisfied that there was such a contravention, then the confiscation can be ordered. Before the stage of hearing, the authorities concerned must have an open mind in regard to the matter. If the authorities do not have the open mind before hearing, the provision for hearing under the statute becomes an idle formality. In this case unfortunately, it appears to me, that even at the stage of issuing notice for hearing under Section 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act, the Collector of Howrah was himself satisfied that a contravention has been made. In my opinion, this cannot be done. The satisfaction can come only after hearing the petitioner and not before that. The respondent in the impugned notice has stated as follows:—

"NOTICE.

To M/s. Manilal Bhagat Saran, 7, Baikuntha Sen Lane, Calcutta.

Under Section 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 (Act X of 1955).

Whereas information has been received that you have abetted the export of/exported 229 bags of Maize from Haryana to West Bengal in Wagon No. SE 47066 from Karnal Railway Station on 17-10-67 without any permit in violation of Rule 3 of the Northern Inter-Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order 1967 which is an offence under S. 7 of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955.

Whereas I am empowered under Section 6-A of the Essential Commodities Act for ordering the confiscation of the foodgrains (Maize) which has been exported in contravention of the above order.

Whereas I am satisfied on perusal of the documents produced before me and hearing that a contravention has been made by you of the Provisions of Rule 3 of the Northern Inter-Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order 1967.

You are therefore given this notice to make your representation in writing by 18-12-67 against the ground for confiscation of the Maize exported by you.

Sd/- Illegible

Collector."

From a perusal of the said annexure, it appears to me, that the respondent Collector has come to a finding that the petitioners have abetted the export of/exported 229 bags of Maize from Haryana to West Bengal without any permit and secondly he was satisfied that a contravention has been made under the provision of Rule 3 of the Northern Inter-Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order 1967 and thereafter he has given notice to show cause against the ground of confiscation of maize exported. If the Collector of Howrah has already made up his mind that there is exportation of maize without a permit, the Collector has no other option but to confiscate the maize. Before the hearing given in the representation against the allegation under Sections 6-A or 6-B it is incumbent on the part of the Collector to keep an open mind and give the opportunity to the petitioner for making representation that there has been no contravention under Rule 3 of the Northern inter-Zonal Maize (Movement Control) Order 1967, but reading the terms of the notice it is clear that the Collector was already satisfied that there is such a contravention.

7. Mr. Banerjee contended that as it has been stated that the Collector of Howrah heard the representation against the ground for confiscation it cannot be said that the Collector did not have an open mind which was necessary. Reading the show cause notice, I however, cannot accept Mr. Banerjee's contention. In my opinion, the notice read as a whole makes it clear that the Collector was satisfied that there was a contravention and show cause notice only given for the confiscation, should not be allowed to stand. In my opinion, such notice cannot be sustained and must be quashed.

8. The Rule is therefore made absolute to the extent that the notice under Section 6-B of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 is set aside.

9. There will be no order as to costs.

10. Let operation of this order remain stayed for six weeks from today as prayed for by Mr. Mukherjee.

BANERJEE, J.

Saugar Electricity Supply, Petitioner v.
M. P. Electric Board, Respondents.

Matter No. 295 of 1967, D/- 9-5-1972.

Index Note:— (A) Electricity (Supply) Act (1948), Sch. 7, Item C (a) (iii) — Life of diesel electric set — In computing its actual number of hours the set had run, cannot be taken into account.

ORDER:— In this rule the petitioner challenges the order by which the respondent demanded a sum of Rs. 26,164/- per annum as rent of 500 KW Mirlees Diesel Set. It is not necessary for me to refer the facts of the case in detail but it will suffice to say that while the rent payable was fixed at Rs. 26,164/- per annum on the basis of the facts that fixing the remaining life of the set, the department stated that the set is to be taken as life of 12 years. The petitioner stated that the mode of fixing the rental on that basis was patently wrong and contrary to the Seventh Schedule of the Act. The case of the petitioner, as made out in the petition, is that the set was purchased in 1950 for a sum of £13000 and admittedly there is no dispute that the costs of the set was originally Rs. 2,95,000/-. On the basis of the said amount, it is stated by the petitioner, that the rent as fixed by the respondent is wholly illegal. It is further stated that the rent so fixed was in violation of the Seventh Schedule of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948. For the purpose of the Seventh Schedule we may set out the Seventh Schedule which provides as follows:

"C. Assets purchased new—

(a) Plant and machinery in generating stations, including plant foundations—

- (i) Hydro-electric .. Thirty-five
- (ii) Steam-electric .. Twenty-five
- (iii) diesel-electric .. Fifteen.

(b) Cooling towers and circulating water systems .. Thirty.

(c) Hydraulic works forming part of a hydro-electric system including—

(i) dams, spillways, weirs, canals, reinforced concrete flumes and syphons .. One hundred.

(ii) reinforced, concrete pipe-line and surge tanks, steel pipelines, sluice gates, steel surge tanks, hydraulic control valves and other hydraulic works .. Forty."

It is admitted that this is a Diesel electric set and the life under the Schedule of the table is 15 years from the date of purchase. It is also relevant for me to set out D to the Seventh Schedule which provides as follows:—

D. Assets purchased secondhand and assets not otherwise provided for in this Table.

Such reasonable period as the State Government determines in each case having regard to the nature, age and condition of the asset at the time of its acquisition by the owner."

2. Mr. Subrata Kumar Roy Choudhury on behalf of the petitioner contended that admittedly the set was purchased in 1952 or 1953. He took 1953 as the date when set was purchased. Applying the principle therefore the set was purchased in 1953 and it is more than 12 years old. Therefore it is argued by Mr. Roy Choudhury that applying the Seventh Schedule the fixation of Rs. 26,164/- per annum as rent is invalid.

3. On behalf of the respondent however, Mr. Das contended that the set did not run for most of the time. In the Seventh Schedule it is computed on the normal average annual running hours of a continuously operating power station of an electric utility undertaking. It is argued that the life of 15 years is based on 3000 working hours per year and therefore it is argued that the total working of 45000 hours is a life of a machine as the particular machine did only run for 8,820 hours, the fixation of the rent was made accordingly. This case of the respondent is to be found in paragraphs 27 and 28 of the affidavit-in-opposition.

4. In my opinion, the section, as it stands today, cannot be construed as argued by Mr. Das. It is not stated therein that the working hour is to be taken into consideration for the purpose of computing 15 years run of the machine. It must be stated that the machine itself ran about 12 years admittedly and therefore to compute rent on that basis of working hours during the period cannot be correct on provision of the statute as it stands. Mr. Das further contended that this is a second hand machine. Even if, that is so, there must be an order by the State Government under 'D' of the Seventh Schedule but no such determination has been made. In the circumstances, therefore, the order is set aside and the matter goes back to the competent authority either to fix the rents on the basis of the Seventh Schedule C or D as the case may be and thereafter proceed in accordance with law. Petition allowed.

ORDER:— This Rule is directed against an appellate order passed in an appeal under Section 9 (6) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955. A short and interesting point arises for consideration in the present Rule is, whether an application for pre-emption under Sec. 8 (1) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act (hereinafter referred to as the Act) is liable to be rejected when a co-sharer of a holding made a short deposit of the consideration money at the time of filing such application.

2. The petitioner filed an application under Section 8 (1) of the Act and deposited Rs. 750/- being the value of the land as stated in the kobala, but he did not deposit Rs. 250/- being the value of the structure mentioned in the Conveyance because, according to him, there was no structure on the land, as such the value of the structure stated in the kobala was a fictitious one. The Revenue Officer dismissed the petitioner's application for pre-emption on two grounds viz., that the required consideration money was not deposited by the petitioner and the lands were not agricultural lands. On appeal, the appellate tribunal found that the lands were agricultural lands but dismissed the petitioner's appeal, upon the view, that the petitioner failed to comply with the statutory obligation cast upon him in the matter of depositing the consideration money together with compensation thereon. The petitioner being aggrieved against the said appellate order, moved this Court on an application under Article 227 of the Constitution and obtained the present Rule.

3. Mr. Roy, appearing in support of the Rule contended, that the learned Munsif failed to consider that the petitioner specifically raised a dispute as regards the quantum of consideration money paid by the opposite party. The Revenue Officer under Section 9 (1) of the Act after determining the said dispute should have directed the petitioner to deposit such further amount within a specified time. If the petitioner failed to deposit such amount within such time, in that case only, the petitioner's application under Section 8 (1) of the Act should have been dismissed. The Revenue Officer has got no power or jurisdiction to dismiss the petitioner's application on account of short deposit of the consideration money.

4. Admittedly the present petitioner is a non-notified co-sharer. Article 137 of the New Limitation Act corresponding to Article 181 of the Old Act apply to an application by a co-sharer who has not been served with a notice of transfer under Section 5 (5) of the Act and his application would be in time, if made within three years from the date of the transfer (Vide, Asmatoli Sharip v. Mufaharali Sardar, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48 (SB)). Therefore, the application for pre-emption in the instant case is within time.

5. Under Section 26-F (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, unless the applicant at the time of making an application for pre-emption deposits in the Court the amount of consideration money his application shall be dismissed. Similar provisions are to be found in sub-section (2) of Section 24 of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act. But such provisions are absent in Section 8 of the Act.

6. A single Bench decision of this Court held in Sachindra Nath Chakraborty v. Trailakyanath Chakraborty, 40 Cal WN 1023 = AIR 1936 Cal 576 = ILR (1937) 1 Cal 112, that the Court has no power to extend the time for making a deposit by a co-applicant beyond the period of time mentioned in clause (a) of sub-section (4) of S. 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act. A Division Bench of this Court in Nural Hossain Mallick v. Mihilal Sheikh, AIR 1948 Cal 144, dissented from the above single Bench decision and held, that an application for pre-emption under Section 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act will not be dismissed if the circumstances are such that the deposit may be deemed to have been made at the time of making the application.

7. Another Division Bench of this Court in Prabartak Jute Mills Ltd. v. Anila Devi, (1955) 59 Cal WN 939, held, that even in cases where notice under Sec. 23 of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act had been served, though deposit is essential, the time stated in Section 24 of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act, is not so essential as to compel the Court to dismiss the application if such deposit was not made at the time of filing the petition. The date of deposit might be treated as the date when the petition is presented and/or the application for pre-emption is made and an order for pre-emption can be made provided such deposit was made, within the time prescribed by general law of limitation.

8. Where there are mandatory provisions in the statute that an application for pre-emption shall be rejected if the applicant fails to deposit the consideration money at the time of making such application, even then in view of the above decisions of this Court as referred to above, such applications could not be rejected if the consideration money is paid subsequently within the period of limitation.

9. In the instant case, the balance of consideration money had not been paid by the petitioner. The Revenue Officer did not direct the petitioner to deposit any such amount. Section 9 (1) of the Act deals with the procedure to be followed where an application under Section 8 of the Act is filed. Notices are required to be served by the Revenue Officer to the transferee and also on the land which forms the subject-matter of the application. The transferee or any person interested may prove the consideration money paid for the transfer and other sums viz. rent, revenue, cess, tax etc. paid in respect of the land. The Revenue Officer may, after such enquiry as he considers necessary, direct the applicant to deposit such further sum, if any, within the time specified by him, and all such sums being deposited shall make an order that the amount of the consideration money together with such other sums as are proved, have been paid by the transferee. The Revenue Officer, thereafter, shall make a further order that the portion or share of the holding to be transferred to the applicant.

10. A fact is said to be proved when, after considering the matter before it, the court either believes it to exist, or considers its existence so probably that a prudent man ought, under the circumstances of the particular case, to act upon the supposition that it exists.

11. In the instant case, the petitioner believed that as there was no structure on the land, the value of the structure as shown in the kobala was fictitious,

So upon the assumption of non-existence of the structure, he deposited the value of the land but did not deposit Rs. 250/- the value of the structure. Under these circumstances, obviously the onus lies upon the transferee to prove that the consideration money so deposited by the pre-emptor was insufficient as it did not include the value of the structure standing on the land. The Revenue Officer after making an enquiry if he is satisfied that there is a structure on the land and the value of the structure as shown in the kobala is not fictitious, in that case, he should direct the applicant to deposit such further amount as he might deem fit and proper within a specified time and when such further deposit having been made, the Revenue Officer shall order for transfer of the portion of the share of the holding to the applicant.

12. So, in my opinion, the Revenue Officer or the Appellate Tribunal has got no jurisdiction to reject the petitioner's application under Section 8 (1) of the Act simply because the applicant made a short deposit of the consideration money. Where the consideration money is disputed, it would be sufficient compliance of Section 8 (1) of the Act, if the applicant deposits the balance of consideration money when the Revenue Officer makes a final order either granting or refusing pre-emption after the amount of consideration money payable by the pre-emptor, has been adjudicated under Section 9 (1) of the Act.

13. In the result, this Rule is made absolute, the impugned orders of the Appellate Tribunal as well as the Revenue Officer are set aside and the case is remitted back to the Revenue Officer to determine afresh the petitioner's application under Section 8 (1) of the Act after giving the petitioner opportunity to deposit such further amount as the Revenue Officer might deem fit and proper after making a proper enquiry, within a specified time and dispose of the petitioner's application in accordance with law. If the petitioner fails to make the deposit such further amount within the time as directed by the Revenue Officer, in that case, his application under Section 8 (1) of the Act will stand rejected.

14. There will be no order as to costs.

15. Let the records go down to the Revenue Officer as expeditiously as possible.

Petition allowed.

Civil Rule No. 4366 of 1967, D/- 22-3-1972.

West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (17 of 1950), S. 9 (1) (f) (as amended by Act 62 of 1950) — Section 9 (1) (f) does not violate Art. 19 (1) (f) or Art. 14 of Constitution. (X-Ref:— Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f) and Art. 14).

The object of amending Section 9 (1) (f) was to provide inducements to the landlords for building new houses and since the amended provisions cumulatively are more advantageous to the landlords than the old provisions the amended Section 9 (1) (f) does not violate Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution on the ground that it imposes unreasonable restrictions on landlords; nor can it be said to violate Article 14 on the ground of discrimination between constructions made before, 31-12-1949 and those made after that date. R. K. Banerjee, Saktinath Mukherjee and Abhijit Banerjee, for Petitioners; G. N. Roy and S. Nandy, for Opposite Parties; Gouri Mitter (Advocate General), Somen Bose and B. C. Basak, for the State.

MITRA, J.:— This Rule is against an order of the Second Additional District Judge at Howrah in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 262 of 1966. The order was made on the 18th September, 1967.

2. On the 30th March, 1950 the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 came into force. Section 9 (1) (f) of the Act reads thus:—

"In any of the following cases, the Controller shall on application by any landlord or tenant, fix the standard rent as set forth hereunder:—

Where any premises have been wholly or substantially constructed after the 31st day of December, 1949, by fixing the standard rent payable for one year at a rate not less than four per centum and not more than six per centum of the reasonable costs of construction added to the reasonable price of the land included in the premises as on the date of commencement of such construction taking into account the prevailing rate of rent in the locality for similar accommodation with similar advantages and amenities and the comparative advantages or disadvantages of accommodation in the premises:

Provided that where the premises whose standard rent is to be fixed form a part of the construction the standard rent shall be fixed at a rate which is fairly proportionate to the total standard rent of the entire construction."

3. On November 30, 1950 the above provisions were amended by the Amendment Act 62 of 1950. The new Section 9 (1) (f) stood as follows:—

"In any of the following cases, the Controller shall on application by any landlord or tenant, fix the standard rent as set forth hereunder:—

Where any premises have been wholly or are substantially constructed after the 31st day of December, 1949, by fixing the standard rent payable for one year at a rate equal to six per centum of the actual cost of construction as determined by the Controller added to the market price as on the 31st day of December, 1946, of the land included in the premises or to the market price of the said land as on the date of the completion of the construction whichever is less:

Provided that where the premises whose standard rent is to be fixed form a part of the construction the standard rent shall be fixed at a rate which is fairly proportionate to the total standard rent of the entire construction."

4. On the 9th June, 1954 the tenants (Opposite Parties Nos. 1 and 2 before us) of a shop room at premises No. 1 Satya Narayan Temple Road, Salkia, Howrah, instituted Rent Control Case No. 69 of 1954 in the Court of the Rent Controller of Howrah for fixation of standard rent payable by them under Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act. On the date of this application these two tenants were paying rent at the rate of Rs. 60/- per month for the shop room.

5. The Rent Controller of Howrah on the 18th February, 1963 fixed the standard rent at Rs. 29/- per month. The landlords (Petitioners Nos. 1 to 3 before us) preferred an appeal to the Additional District Judge. This was Miscellaneous Appeal No. 50 of 1963.

6. The Additional District Judge, Howrah, on the 27th July, 1963 determined the costs of construction at Rs. 19,031/-. But he disagreed with the Controller's assessment of the value of the land. He sent the case back to the Controller on remand.

7. The Rent Controller by his order No. 113 dated the 12th October, 1966 valued the land at Rs. 4,200/-. The total value, therefore, came to Rupees 23,231/- (Rs. 19,031 for construction plus Rs. 4,200/- for the land). The rent of the entire premises was fixed at Rs. 116-15 per month. And the rent of the shop room was fixed at Rs. 40/- per month. The landlords again preferred an appeal. This was Miscellaneous Appeal No. 261 of 1966.

8. The Second Additional District Judge of Howrah disposed of the last-mentioned appeal on the 18th September, 1967. He affirmed the order of the Rent Controller with a modification that the rate of rent, that is Rs. 40/- per month would be effective from the 1st of Baishakh 1361 B. S. instead of the 1st May, 1964.

9. The present Rule was obtained on the 18th December, 1967.

10. Mr. R. K. Banerjee, learned counsel for the petitioners contends before us that the amended provisions of Sec. 9 (1) (f) are ultra vires the Constitution. Learned counsel submits that rent is monetary compensation which the tenant pays to the landlord for his occupation. Rent is also one of the indices of the value of the property. An artificial fixation of rent, therefore, affects the valuation of the land and the structures thereon. Such artificial fixation is irrational. From these points of view the rent that the tenant pays must be just and reasonable. Mr. Banerjee says that fixation of percentage by the legislature he is not challenging, because, the legislature has the right to enact the percentage of total value of the property which should be payable as rent. But the fixation of the value of land on hypothetical basis dating it back to the 31st of December, 1946 is destructive of the principle of monetary compensation and ascertainment of proper value of land and structure. Mr. Banerjee further submits that all the rent restriction Ordinances and Acts up to 1956 were of temporary duration. It is, therefore, improper for the legislature to fix rents on such artificial considerations with respect to past or future dates; Mr. Banerjee has also referred us to Section 8 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 which is a permanent Act. Section 8 (1) (d) of the Act contains provisions similar to those in Section 9 (1) (f) of the previous Act and in these permanent provisions instead of market price as on the 31st December, 1946, the market price on the date "of commencement of construction" has been introduced. In other words, the legislature has tried to revert to the original provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act.

11. Mr. Banerjee has also argued that although the 1950 Act was a temporary Act, standard rent fixed under that Act was practically unalterable in view of the provisions of Section 9 of the 1956 Act. This section lays down that rent payable for any premises can be increased only when there has been an increase in the tenant's share of the municipal rates and taxes or when any construction has been made at the instance of the tenant. The position, therefore, is that when rents are determined under the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act, the landlord is for all practical purposes irreparably prejudiced.

12. Mr. Banerjee points out that the legislature in the 1956 Act, by reverting more or less to the original Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act shows that it has realised that rents fixed under the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) were not fair.

13. For all the reasons aforesaid, counsel for the petitioners has urged that the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act offend against Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution, as they seek to impose unreasonable restrictions on the right to acquire or hold property. Mr. Banerjee has contended further that these amended provisions violate Article 14 of the Constitution as well. By these provisions a discrimination has been made between owners of land who had made constructions before the 31st December, 1949 and those who have made constructions after the 31st December, 1949. The same class of land has been treated differently.

14. Mr. Banerjee has relied upon two decisions of the Supreme Court in support of his proposition that it is not permissible to affect retrospectively the valuation of the property. These are the decisions in State of West Bengal v. Mrs. Bela Banerjee, AIR 1954 SC 170 and Jayvantsinghji Ranmalsinghji v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1962 SC 821. In Bela Banerjee's case the Supreme Court was considering the provisions of Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Development and Planning Act, 1948. This was a permanent Act and Section 8 prescribed that lands might be acquired under it at the market value on the 31st December, 1946. The Supreme Court has said that fixation of this ceiling of compensation without reference to the value of the land at the time of the acquisition is arbitrary and cannot be regarded as due compliance in letter and spirit with the requirement of Article 31 (2). We have to point out that apart from the fact that this was a case under Article 31 (2), the Supreme Court itself has said further that fixing of an anterior date for the ascertainment of value may not, in certain circumstances, be violation of the constitutional requirement as, for instance, when the proposed scheme of acquisition becomes known before it is launched and prices rise sharply in anticipation of the benefits to be derived under it; but the fixing of an anterior date, which might have no relation to the value of the land when it is acquired, may be, many years later, cannot but be regarded as arbitrary. The Supreme Court has expressed the view that any principle for determining compensation which denies to the owner any increment in value cannot result in the ascertainment of the true equivalent of the land appropriated. The result, therefore, is that it all depends on the circumstances in which an anterior date of valuation is fixed by the legislature and there may be cases in which fixation with reference to an anterior date may not be violative of any of the provisions of the Constitution.

15. In Jayvantsinghji's case, AIR 1962 SC 821 cited above the Supreme Court had to construe, inter alia, the provisions of Sections 3, 4 and 6 of the Bombay Land Tenure Abolition Laws (Amendment) Act, 1958. In paragraph 14 of the Judgment the Supreme Court has observed that the right of the petitioners to the purchase price under Section 32-H of the Tenancy Act, 1948 from those of their tenants who were non-permanent on April 1, 1957 was a right of property in respect of which the petitioner has a guarantee under Article 19 (1) (f). The provisions in Sections 3, 4 and 6 of the impugned Act of 1958, according to the Supreme Court, in so far as they laid down that in certain circumstances a tenant would be deemed to be a permanent tenant from the date of the Taluqdari Abolition Act, 1949, adversely affected the right of the petitioner with retrospective effect. This is again a case in which certain provisions were considered to be unconstitutional on the peculiar circumstances that arose and cannot be treated as a guiding authority in all cases. In our case the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act were considered by a Special Bench of this Court in Iswari Prosad Goenka v. N. R. Sen, 55 Cal WN 719 = (AIR 1952 Cal 273), Harries, C. J. who presided over this Bench observed at pp. 723 to 724 as follows:—

"It was urged that owing to the increase in the cost of building materials and the cost of maintenance, the rents permitted by these Rent Control Acts are wholly unreasonable, and therefore the Court would be bound to hold that the Rent Control Act of 1950 as amended, is in its entirety ultra vires the Constitution.

There can be no doubt that the cost of building materials has greatly increased and that the Rent Control Act of 1950 has very drastically curtailed the rights of the landlord to demand what rent he pleases from a tenant. It may be that the margin of profit allowed to the landlord by the Rent Act of 1950 is small, but that would not of necessity, make the Act ultra vires as being an unreasonable restriction on the landlord's rights. What has to be considered is whether these restrictions on the landlord's rights are justified, having regard to the circumstances which would inevitably arise if landlords were free to charge what rent they wished. It appears to me that in the interests of law and order and good Government, restrictions on the landlord's rights were absolutely necessary, for otherwise thousands of tenants would have been ejected and persons would have been compelled to pay far more than they could afford for most inferior accommodation. In considering whether the restrictions imposed on the landlords are reasonable regard must be had to the position of the tenants. Would it be in the interest of good Government and in the public interest generally for thousands of people to be rendered homeless and for thousands of others to be compelled to pay exorbitant rents and to be literally at the mercy of their landlords? It appears to me that in the circumstances existing in this country and particularly in this State, the control of the rents during the War and particularly after partition, was essential and had any Government failed to take action in this matter serious consequences might well have arisen which might have shaken the very foundation of this State and indeed of the whole of India. In my view it cannot possibly be said that in the circumstances existing when these Acts were passed, the restrictions imposed by the Acts generally were unreasonable more than were necessary in the interests of the general public."

16. The above observations of Harries, C. J., constitute an effective answer to Mr. Banerjee's arguments based on Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. But we may go deeper into this matter. We have looked into the statement of objects and reasons which was laid before the legislature in support of the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the 1950 Act. The relevant portion of this statement runs thus:—

"It is also proposed to amend Section 9 (1) (f) of the Act assuring a return of six per cent on capital investment with a view to increasing construction of new houses for letting purposes, the need for which has become more imperative than ever on account of large scale influx of refugees from East Bengal."

17. The learned Advocate-General has also placed before us the speech which was delivered on the floor of legislature by the Minister concerned. In this speech the Minister says:—

"...Two questions have emerged since the Act was passed, which have necessitated further amendment of this Act of 1950. In the first place it is seen that in Calcutta we are not going to have very many new houses and representations have been made that unless better terms, than those that have been provided for in the Act of 1950 are offered, owners of lands will not feel encouraged to build new houses. It is therefore just to give encouragement to the owners of land to build new houses which this province needs so much at the present moment when there is such an influx of refugees and other people to Calcutta and the urban areas. Government have thought it fit and proper to assure the owners of land that if they build new houses they can expect better return. That is the reason for the proposed amendment of Section 9 of the Act....."

18. The learned Advocate-General has also placed before us extracts from notes and orders of the land and Land Revenue Department's file relevant for our purposes. In these extracts we find the following observations made by the officers who were dealing with the file:—

"In this connection it may be noted that the question of amending clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 9 of the Act has also been taken up for consideration as desired by Hon'ble Chief Minister with a view to creating conditions and facilities for construction of more new houses."

19. From the above statements it appears that at the relevant time owing to large influx of refugees from East Bengal and rush of population into the City of Calcutta and its neighbouring areas it was felt that more houses should be constructed in this city and in the suburbs, but the authorities found that it was necessary to provide for incentives to give encouragements to land-holders to build new houses. That is why they amended the provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) in order that the owners of land might have better terms to induce them to undertake new constructions. It is in this context that we have to analyse the old provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) and compare them with the new provisions. We set out below a comparative chart consisting of the old and the new provisions:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. At a rate not less than four percentum and more than six percentum. 2. Percentum of reasonable costs of construction. 3. Add to reasonable costs of construction reasonable price of the land included in the premises as on the date of the commencement of such construction taking into account the prevailing rate of rent in the locality for similar accommodation with similar advantages and amenities and the comparative advantages or disadvantages of accommodation in the premises. | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Fixed rate of six per cent with no discretion to the Controller. 2. Percentum of the actual costs of construction. 3. Add to the actual costs of construction the market price of the land as on the 31st day of December, 1946 or on the date of completion of the construction whichever is less. |

20. Mr. Banerjee for the petitioner concedes that so far as costs of construction are concerned, the amended provisions are improvements on the original provisions. But he urges that the same argument does not apply to the price of land. On the contrary, with respect to the price of land, in the amended provisions, the landlord has been adversely affected.

21. We are unable to accept this contention of Mr. Banerjee. Firstly the legislature thought that by the amended provisions it was providing inducements to landlords for building new houses. Secondly, we have to consider the cumulative effect of the old provisions and that of the new provisions. It seems to us that the old provisions, cumulatively speaking, were less advantageous to the landlords. In the old provisions there were three uncertain factors, namely, (1) the percentage of standard rent could vary from four to six per cent, (2) it was for the Controller to determine the reasonable costs of construction and (3) it was also for the Controller to determine the reasonable price of land having regard to the locality in which it was situate. All these factors were uncertain and the legislature by the amended provisions tried, as far as possible, to make them certain. In this view of the matter we are unable to say that the amended provisions impose unreasonable restrictions on landlords and as such they violate Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. That the legislature thought it necessary to change these provisions again in the 1956 Act does not seem to us to be relevant to the issue under consideration. Firstly the 1956 Act is a permanent Act whereas the 1950 Act was to remain in operation temporarily. Secondly, when it came to be enacted as a permanent legislation, the authorities might have thought that the market value as on the 31st December, 1946 was not proper. Thirdly, it may be that the purpose for which Section 9 (1) (f) was amended had failed. But these are not the tests for determining the validity or the vires of the Act having regard to the immediate object sought to be achieved.

22. We now proceed to discuss whether the amended provisions violate Article 14 of the Constitution. The Supreme Court has repeatedly laid down that while Article 14 forbids class legislation, it does not forbid reasonable classification for the purpose of legislation. In order, however, to pass the test of reasonable classification, two conditions must be fulfilled, namely, (1) that the classification must be founded on an intelligible differentia which distinguishes persons or things that are grouped together from others left out of the group and (2) that that differentia must have a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by the statute in question. What is necessary is that there must be a nexus between the basis of classification and the object of the Act under consideration (vide Ram Krishna Dalmia v. S. R. Tendolkar, AIR 1958 SC 538).

23. In the instant case owing to large influx of population necessitating new constructions, the legislature has made a classification. It has placed constructions after the 31st of December, 1949 in one group and constructions before that date in another group. But there is clearly a nexus between the basis of classification and the object sought to be achieved. We have already said, whether or not the legislature has succeeded in achieving this object is a different matter altogether.

24. Incidentally, we may refer to a judgment of the Bombay High Court and one of the Allahabad High Court which have some relevance to the points urged before us in the present case. In A. S. Ruben v. Narayan Moreswar, AIR 1953 Bom 174, Explanation (a) to Section 13 (1) (g) of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 was challenged. Section 13 (1) (g) entitled a landlord to recover possession from his tenant if he required the premises reasonably and bona fide for occupation by himself or for any person for whose benefit the premises were held. Sub-clause (2) of Section 13 gave a further protection to the tenant. It said that even though a landlord might establish his requirements, the tenant would still be protected if the Court came to the conclusion, on a consideration of a balance of convenience, that the ejectment would result in greater hardship to the tenant than to the landlord. Explanation (a) to Section 18 (1) (g) was as follows:—

"Explanation (a): A person shall not be deemed to be a landlord unless he has acquired his interest in the premises at a date prior to the beginning of the tenancy, or the 1st day of January, 1947, whichever is later or, if the interest had devolved on him by inheritance or succession, his predecessor-in-title had acquired the interest at a date prior to the beginning of the tenancy, or the first day of January, 1947, whichever is later."

25. The Bombay High Court has said that this explanation is not hit by Article 14 of the Constitution. Article 14, states the Bombay High Court, does not prohibit the legislature from classifying in certain cases. But if it does classify, and if it does lay down that a particular class is exempt from a particular law, that classification must be on a reasonable basis. The Bombay High Court proceeds to add that the Government had found that in recent years there had been many purchases of houses — properties and as the owners might apply for ejectment of their tenants, it was necessary to enact Explanation (a). And the legislature was fully justified in extending protection to the tenants by framing this particular explanation. As the discrimination was justified and there was a reasonable basis for the discrimination, the selection of the date itself, says the Bombay High Court, must be left to the good sense and intelligence of the legislature, and in this particular case there was 'prima facie' good sense and intelligence in selecting January 1, 1947. The Bombay High Court has also held that as the explanation does not offend against Article 14 of the Constitution, no question arises with regard to Article 19 (1) (f); the explanation is in the interest of the general public and is not ultra vires.

26. In our case a similar situation has arisen. No doubt the legislature has chosen an anterior date for purposes of valuation of the land. But it seems that the anxiety of the legislature was to ensure more constructions. That is why a return of six per cent of the actual cost of constructions was provided for in the amended Section 9 (1) (f) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 and so far as the price of land is concerned, there is no evidence on record to show that a lesser value than what was prescribed in the original provisions was intended by the legislature. In any event, the cumulative effect of what the landlord would get taking into consideration his actual costs of construction and the value of the land on which the construction stands appears to be better than what the original provisions had contemplated. For these reasons we cannot say that the new provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) offend against Article 14 of the Constitution, and since these were provisions meant to serve the general interest of the public, they do not also offend against Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution.

27. The case of the Allahabad High Court is AIR 1952 All 703 (FB) (Raman Das v. State of Uttar Pradesh). This is a Full Bench judgment of the Allahabad High Court. Certain provisions of the Uttar Pradesh Temporary Control of Rent and Eviction Act, 1947 came to be considered in this judgment. For our purposes it would be relevant to set out paragraph 10 of the judgment at page 706. The paragraph runs thus:—

"The last point urged is that there is discrimination between the owners of houses built after July 1, 1946, and the owners of houses constructed before that date. The history behind this Act explains the reason for this difference. The Act was passed early in 1947 at a time when there was acute shortage of accommodation. It was thought that an Act of this kind controlling the activities of landlords might discourage persons from building houses and as it was necessary in the public interest that as many houses should be built as possible an incentive was given to those who had lands and were willing to spend money that any houses built by them would be at their complete disposal and no restrictions would be imposed on the same. The Act as originally drafted, therefore did not apply to houses built after July 1, 1946. In 1948, however, it was found that this privilege was being abused and fancy rents were being asked for such premises and by an amendment a proviso was added giving the owners a right of occupation of premises built by them after July 1, 1946, but otherwise allowing the District Magistrate to have control over allotment of these premises. We do not think that there was no just basis, therefore, for this discrimination between houses built before July 1, 1946, and those built after July 1, 1946. We do not think, therefore, that the proviso in any way affects the validity of the Act."

28. In the instant case the reasons for amending Section 9 (1) (f) have been fully discussed in the earlier part of this judgment. The legislature was seeking to give incentive to construction of new buildings and the discrimination that it has made between constructions before the 31st December, 1949 and after the 31st December, 1949 appears to be justified by the situation, namely, shortage of accommodation due to influx of population which the legislature was seeking to meet.

29. In the premises aforesaid we are of opinion that the amended provisions of Section 9 (1) (f) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 do not violate either Article 19 (1) (f) or Article 14 of the Constitution.

30. The Rule is, therefore, discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

31. Let the records be sent back as early as possible.

JANAH, J.:— 32. I agree.
Rule discharged.

Appeal No. 50 of 1971, D/- 16-3-1972.

Index Note (A) — Income-tax Act (1961), S. 297 (2) (a) — Assessee filed return under Income-tax Act (1922). — Assessment order passed under Section 143 (3) of Act (1961) — Order held valid.

(Para 12)

Brief Note (A) — A wrong reference to the power under which the order is made does not per se vitiate the order if there is some other power under which that order could lawfully be made. The validity of the impugned order has to be tested by reference to the basic question whether the authority had any power at all to make that order. A wrong description of the order would not vitiate it if the power to make the order really existed.

(Para 12)

Index Note (B) — Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Alternative remedy open — Writ jurisdiction cannot be invoked.

(Para 15)

Brief Note (B) — Assessee filed return under Income-tax Act (1922). However the assessment order was passed under Section 297 (2) (a) of Act (1961). Instead of approaching Income-tax Appellate Tribunal for getting the order corrected the assessee applied under Article 226 of the Constitution. Held that the writ jurisdiction could not be invoked when there is an alternative remedy open.

P. B. MUKHARJI, C. J.:— The appellant made an application under Article 226 of the Constitution raising a question of interpretation of Section 297 (2) (a) of the Income-tax Act of 1961.

2. For the assessment year 1961-62 the appellant filed his return voluntarily on December 1, 1961. On February 1, 1963, a notice under Section 23 (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 was issued and served on the appellant. On March 17, 1966, a further notice under Section 23 (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 was issued calling upon the appellant to attend on March 22, 1966 for completion of the assessment. On March 23, 1966 the appellant informed the Income-tax Officer that as the aforesaid notice was served on the appellant after 1 P.M. it was not possible for him to comply with it. Thereafter on December 31, 1966, a notice under Section 221 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 was issued by the respondent Income-tax Officer on the appellant to show cause why a penalty should not be imposed upon him for not paying the tax assessed. On January 11, 1967 another notice under Section 154/155 of the 1961 Act was issued by the respondent Income-tax Officer for rectification of the purported assessment made under Section 144 of that Act. On January 21, 1967, two applications were presented by the appellant to the Income-tax Officer. In the first application, the petitioner contended that the assessment was ultra vires as it was made under the 1961 Act and not under the 1922 Act and therefore no question of penalty could arise. In the second petition, objection was taken by the appellant to the competency of the notice for reduction of the order of assessment already made. On February 16, 1967, a notice of demand and the corresponding challan and assessment order under Section 144 of 1961 Act relating to the assessment year 1961-62 were served on the assessee and on the same date the assessee made an application to the respondent Income-tax Officer requesting him to cancel the assessment and make a fresh assessment as he was not given reasonable opportunity to comply with the notice dated March 17, 1966. The appellant's aforesaid application was accepted and the respondent Income-tax Officer cancelled the assessment and made a fresh assessment for the year under Section 143 (3)/146 of 1961 Act on September 6, 1967.

3. The appellant thereafter took an appeal from the aforesaid order of assessment before the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. In the grounds of appeal, objections were taken to the inclusion of certain amount in the total income and there was an omnibus ground at the end viz. the assessment was otherwise bad in law and in the facts and circumstances of the case. But before the Appellate Assistant Commissioner no argument was advanced that the assessment was bad because it was made under the provisions of 1961 Act and the Appellate Assistant Commissioner gave the appellant certain reliefs by way of deductions which were given effect to by the respondent Income-tax Officer under Section 250 of 1961 Act in the order of assessment. No further appeals were taken by the petitioner to the Tribunal.

4. On June 28, 1968, a challan was issued for realisation of the tax on the basis of the modified assessment and on July 18, 1969 the respondent Income-tax Officer issued a notice under Section 221 of 1961 Act on the appellant to show cause why a penalty should not be imposed for failure to pay the tax assessed and demanded within the time allowed by the Act.

5. Thereupon the Rule was obtained by the appellant on August 20, 1968 calling upon the respondents to show cause why the aforesaid order of assessment, the demand for tax, the notice for showing cause why penalty should not be imposed as well as the appellate order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner should not be quashed.

6. That sets out the bare facts of this case. The learned Judge who heard the Rule discharged it. He came to the following finding of facts:

7. The respondent Income-tax Officer had abundant authority to make the assessment under the corresponding provisions of 1922 Act which are more or less in pari materia with the assessment sections of 1961 Act. Therefore, according to the learned Judge, the order of assessment and the consequential orders and notices thereto cannot be considered void ab initio and without jurisdiction. The proper thing for the authorities would have been to rectify the order and make it in consonance with the provisions of the repealed Act of 1922.

8. But the learned Judge says that unfortunately the fact that under the provisions of Section 297 (2) (a) the assessment should have been made under the provisions of the old Act was not brought to the attention of either the respondent Income-tax Officer or the respondent Appellate Assistant Commissioner. There, of course, the learned Judge was wrong. The attention of the Income-tax Officer in fact was drawn to the appellant's letter dated January 21, 1967 where it is stated:

"It now appears to me from your notice under Sections 154/155 of the Act of 1961 that the assessment order in question was passed under Section 144 of the new Act. As the return was filed under the old Act the assessment in question should have been made under the old Act and as such the assessment under Section 144 is ab initio void."

To the same effect it was repeated by the appellant in his letter dated January 21, 1967. Therefore, it is not quite correct to say that the Income-tax Officer's attention was not brought to the fact that the new Act not being applicable the old Act is applicable.

9. But the question did not rest there. The appellant took no point under this score. He appealed to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. In his several grounds of appeal, he makes no special ground of this point and he does not state that his whole contention is that the old Act applied and the new Act did not apply. Mr. Mukherjee, who appeared for the appellant showed us his several grounds where it was stated that the assessment is otherwise bad in law and in fact. We do not, however, feel that that ground covers this point and we feel that it was incumbent upon the assessee appellant to put it forward as a ground in his ground of appeal before the Income-tax Officer and the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. Before the Appellate Assistant Commissioner, as we have already stated, the appellant did not argue the point at all that the old Act applied.

10. Now proceeding with the findings of the learned trial Judge, he says:

"Now possibly it is too late for anybody to make any rectification of the impugned orders and notices. For this state of affairs the petitioner has nobody but himself to blame. He should have filed an appeal to the Tribunal from the order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner and pointed out that the order of assessment was erroneous as it was not made under the provisions of the 1922 Act and the Tribunal could have passed the necessary orders enabling the respondent Income-tax Officer to rectify the order of assessment. As I am satisfied that there was no initial lack of jurisdiction in the respondent Income-tax Officer in making the assessment, this Rule must be discharged."

I do not think that the learned Judge could have passed any other order. The returns in this case were filed on December 1, 1961 and the notice under Section 23 (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 was issued on February 1, 1963.

11. Two points really arise in this appeal. First is, can the appellant having chosen his course of remedy change it in the mid-stream? Secondly, is the order of the learned trial Judge at all prejudicial to the assessee?

12. Regarding the point that the order should have been made under the old Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 it is quite clear that wrong reference to the power under which the order is made does not per se vitiate the order if there is some other power under which that order could lawfully be made. The validity of the impugned order has to be tested by reference to the basic question whether the Income-tax Officer had any power at all to make an order of that nature. If the power is otherwise established, the fact that the source of the power has been incorrectly described would not make the order invalid. The provisions of Section 23 (3) of the 1922 Act are in pari materia with the provisions of Section 143 (3) of the 1961 Act and deal with the same subject-matter, that is, assessment. There is a slight difference in the language but the purport of the provisions in both the Acts is the same. Therefore, an order of the Income-tax Officer passed under Section 143 (3) of the Act of 1961 could, therefore, be legitimately held to have been passed in exercise of the powers vested in the Income-tax Officer under Section 23 (3) of the 1922 Act. That was the decision of the Punjab and Haryana High Court in Commr. of Income-tax, Patiala v. Hargopal Bhalla and Sons, 82 ITR 243 = (1971 Tax LR 738 (Punj. & Har.)).

13. In L. Hazari Mal Kuthiala v. Income-tax Officer, Special Circle, Ambala Cantt., 41 ITR 12 = (AIR 1961 SC 200) the Supreme Court tended to give the same decision. There it was held that the Commissioner of Income-tax, purporting to act under Section 5 (5) and (7-A) of the Indian Income-tax Act, made an order on November 4, 1953, that the assessment of the assessee firm would be done by the Income-tax Officer Special Circle, Ambala, and not by the Income-tax Officer, Patiala, who was the competent authority under Section 64 of the Act to assess the firm. In 1955 the Income-tax Officer, Special Circle, Ambala issued a notice under Section 34 of the Patiala Income-tax Act to reopen the firm's assessment for the accounting year 1945-46. The firm contended that the Officer at Ambala had no jurisdiction as the order of the Commissioner was ultra vires, since it was not issued under the Patiala Act. It was held by the Supreme Court that the exercise of a power would be referable to a jurisdiction which conferred validity upon it and not to a jurisdiction under which it would be nugatory, and the order of the Commissioner was not invalid merely because it was not made under the Patiala Act.

14. The appellant contended that he has been prejudiced by the application of the new Act. The contention is that the penalty and prosecution are harsher in the new Act than under the old Act and there were alternative remedies under the old Act. Reference was made in support of this argument to Section 28, sub-section (4) of the old Act and Section 275-A to Section 280 of the new Act of 1961. It was also pointed out that under the new Act of 1961 Section 139 (1), Proviso (iii)

there is also a penal rate of interest. Secondly, it was argued that the substantive procedure was also different and it was not a matter of adjective procedure. In support of that proposition Section 67 of the new Act of 1961 was shown and argued that no such procedure under the old Act of 1922 was available. The argument on this point seems to me to be entirely misplaced. What we are dealing with in this appeal is not the question of penalty or prosecution. If and when the penalty and prosecution take place, the appellant has ample remedies and doors of this Court are open to take proceedings. But that is not the subject-matter of the present application.

15. Now regarding the point whether the appellant having chosen one particular remedy can in the mid-stream start a Writ Petition under Article 226 of the Constitution. The appellant was aware of the point at all material times. The appellant in fact took the point in two of his letters to the Income-tax Officer but the appellant did not press for it and allowed the Income-tax Officer to go into the merits. Then the appellant chose the remedy and followed that path by way of an appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. There he does not argue the point at all and allowed the Appellate Assistant Commissioner to come to a decision on the merits and in fact he reduced the assessment. Now the appellant thinks of a change of course. He could have appealed to the Appellate Tribunal and got his relief if his point was sound and the corrections made in the order of assessment. He did not do so. On the contrary he turned round and sought a Writ under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. As the appellant has already resorted to an alternative, and equally efficacious, legal remedy, it should be required to pursue that remedy and should not be allowed to invoke the special jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution. Specially it is so here where the matter on merits hardly deserves interference under the Writ in the discretionary jurisdiction. The appellant's fear of the penalty and prosecution being different under the new Act being made applicable to him is premature and if it comes then the appellant's remedy would be open under Article 226 of the Constitution.

16. In that view of the problem, I do not think that I should interfere with the decision of the learned Judge. I therefore, dismiss the appeal. There will be no order as to costs.

B. C. MITRA, J.:— 17. I agree with the order made by my Lord but I would like to add a few words of my own. The appellant preferred an appeal against the order of the Income-tax Officer and in the grounds of appeal, he stated that the Income-tax Officer had committed an error in holding the loans, amounting to Rupees 40,000/- as income from other sources. This point was agitated on behalf of the appellant before the Appellate Assistant Commissioner and in the Order made by the latter, it appears, he held that the appellant had discharged the onus that lay upon him in proving the genuineness of the loan of Rs. 5,000/-, taken from Kamal Kumar Dey. He also held that regarding the balance loan of Rs. 35,000/-, stated to have been taken in 1961-62 and Rs. 50,000 taken in 1962-63 assessment years, the representative of the appellant gave up his argument that the amount represented borrowings. Finally the Appellate Assistant Commissioner held that the total income of the appellant for 1961-62 and 1962-63 should be reduced by Rs. 10,762/- and Rs. 50,200/- respectively. It is quite clear to us that the appellant's grievances with regard to loans were removed by the Order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner.

18. Another point to which I should like to refer is that the appellant had alternative remedy available to him. The existence of an alternative remedy is no bar to the issue of Writs by this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. But where such alternative remedy exists, the Writ Court in exercise of its discretion should not grant relief to a petitioner unless the petitioner satisfies the Court that there are sufficient and/or adequate grounds as to why the alternative remedy will not be sufficient to meet his grievances. That is the view which has been taken by the Supreme Court in two decisions viz. in the case of C. A. Abraham v. Income-tax Officer, AIR 1961 SC 609 and in the case of Shivram Poddar v. Income-tax Officer, 51 ITR 823 = (AIR 1964 SC 1095). In this case the appellant has made out no grounds in the Writ Petition as to why the alternative remedy available to him by way of a further appeal to the Tribunal would not have been adequate or sufficient for his purpose.

19. The only other matter to which I would like to refer is the provision in Section 297 of the Income-tax Act, 1961. That section deals with repeals and savings and provides for different circumstances where the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 and Income-tax Act, 1961 are to be applied in assessment and also in penalty proceedings. Admittedly in this case, no penalty has yet been imposed upon the appellant. If and when such penalty is imposed upon the appellant for omission on his part to pay the assessment already made, the question as to under which Act, viz. the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 or the Income-tax Act, 1961, penalty would be recovered, would have to be considered. It seems to us that a discussion on this question at this stage is premature.

20. For these reasons, I agree with the order made by my Lord.

21. Appeal is, therefore, dismissed. Order accordingly.

SALIL KUMAR HAZRA, J.

Corporation of Calcutta, Plaintiff v. Hindusthan Construction Co. Ltd., Defendant.

Suit No. 1618 of 1960, D/- 1-3-1972.

(A) Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act (6 of 1941), S. 2 — Construction contracts — Material supplied by contractor cannot be assessed for payment of sales tax. AIR 1958 SC 560 and AIR 1957 Cal 283, Relied on. (Para 8)

(B) Contract Act (1872), S. 72 — Payment made by mistake of law — It is recoverable. AIR 1946 Cal 245, Followed. (Para 9)

(C) Contract Act (1872), S. 72 — Payment made under mistake of fact or law — Party is entitled to get back money in absence of circumstances like estoppel, waiver, limitation or the like — Equitable consideration is not a bar to such a relief. AIR 1959 SC 135 and (1959) 10 STC 57 (All.), Relied on. (Para 12)

In this case defendant paid sales tax believing that sales tax was payable even in respect of construction contracts. Under the terms of the contract if sales tax was payable it was to be paid by the plaintiff. Both the parties, however, were acting under a common misapprehension that sales tax was payable. Acting under such a notion plaintiff paid certain amount to defendant when the latter asked the plaintiff to reimburse the amount paid. Hence no question of estoppel arises because plaintiff made no representation which was acted upon by the defendant to his own detriment. No question of waiver also can arise because immediately after the mistake became known demand was made by plaintiff for refund of sales tax. (Para 13)

(D) Contract Act (1872), S. 72 — Word 'mistake' would comprise both mistake of law and fact — Section is not in conflict with Ss. 21 and 22. AIR 1955 Cal 626 treated as not good law in view of AIR 1959 SC 135. (X-Ref.: Ss. 21 and 22). (Para 15)

(E) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 34 — Ad interim interest — Suit under S. 72 of Contract Act for refund of money paid by mistake — Both the parties labouring under the same mistake — Held it would not be sound exercise of discretion to allow plaintiff ad interim interest during pendency of suit. (Para 21)

Sankar Ghose with P. K. Roy, for Plaintiff; B. K. Ghose with Ajit Sen, for Defendant.

JUDGMENT :— The plaintiff Corporation of Calcutta is claiming in this suit repayment or refund of Rs. 40,871/- from the defendant, as money paid to the defendant by mistake of fact and law.

2. The defendant carries on business as engineer and contractor. In January/March, 1952, the plaintiff Corporation of Calcutta invited tenders for completion of Dry Water Flow Channel for 'Dr. Dey's Kulti Outfall Scheme', for construction of channels. The defendant submitted tenders. Three contracts were entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant. The first contract was executed on April 29, 1952, the second contract was executed on April 29, 1952 and the third contract was executed on November 1, 1952. The contracts were made as per specifications and tenders of the defendant. Tenders were sent along with forwarding letters of the defendant. Each of the forwarding letters of the defendant to the plaintiff provided as follows:—

"We have not provided for sales tax in our quotation. Any sales tax payable on account of this work will be to your account."

It was expressly and/or impliedly agreed by and between the parties that in case any sales tax was payable in respect of the said contracts by the defendant to the State of West Bengal, the plaintiff will reimburse the defendant for the same. In terms of the said agreement between the parties the works of construction of dry water flow channel was carried on by the defendant and completed in the year 1953. The defendant, from time to time, submitted bills to the plaintiff, for sales tax which the defendant claimed to have paid to the State of West Bengal, in respect of the said contracts. The defendant stated that the total amount so paid by the defendant was Rs. 54,498.42 p. The particulars of the same will appear as hereunder:

H. C. O./OB/69	15.3.54	Manufacture of bricks at Kantatola	Rs. 22,229.75 paise
K. W. B./S. F. B.		Remodelling Topsia- Kulti Road, Zone IV
H. C. O./OB/S	23.3.56	D. W. F. Channel 1-3 miles	Rs. 3,570.94 "
H. C. O./OB/1	23.3.56	-do- do- 4th mile	Rs. 15,483.81 "
H. C. O./OB/2	23.3.56	-do- do- 5th mile	Rs. 4,524.71 "
H. C. O./OB/3	23.3.56	-do- do- 6th mile	Rs. 4,531.73 "
H. C. O./OB/4	23.3.56		Rs. 4,157.48 "
			Rs. 54,498.42 paise

The defendant wrote to the plaintiff on January 10, 1957, demanding from the plaintiff an advance of Rs. 50,000/- against the sum of Rs. 54,498.42 paise, which the defendant stated that they have already paid as sales tax to the State of West Bengal. On September 27, 1957, the plaintiff advanced a total sum of Rs. 40,871/- to the defendant for sales tax, relying and/or acting on the representation of the defendant. In or about April 1958, the plaintiff discovered that the said payment of Rupees 40,871/- was made by mistake of fact and law. On September 25, 1958, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant asking for refund of the amount received by the defendant from the plaintiff on account of sales tax. The plaintiff enclosed with the said letter, a copy of the report and opinion of the law officer of the plaintiff, to the effect that the contracts entered into between the parties were construction contracts and bricks manufactured on Corporation land and supplied at a cost fixed under the contracts by the contractors and the Corporation for exclusive use of the work to be done, as such there was no liability to pay sales tax on such contract in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1958 SC 560, and also the judgment of the Calcutta High Court in AIR 1957 Cal 283. According to the plaintiff the payment of Rs. 40,871/- was made by mistake and the mistake was discovered in or about April, 1958 after the decision of the Supreme Court reported in 1958 SC page 560 (Gannon Dunkerley's case), holding, that no sales tax is payable on construction contracts as stated above, became known to the plaintiff. As the said amount was not refunded by the defendant, this suit was instituted on 15th November, 1960. On February 10, 1961, the defendant filed its written statement. In the written statement the defendant denied that the payment of sales tax was made by the plaintiff by mistake of fact and law. The defendant stated the contract in respect of manufacture of bricks at Kantatola is not a construction contract within the meaning of the Supreme Court decision as alleged. The defendant denied that the plaintiff is entitled to claim refund. The written statement was amended on September 5, 1963. In the amended written statement the defence, inter alia, was that the defendant in good faith paid the sum of Rs. 54,498.42 p. as sales tax at the request and/or with the knowledge and/or consent of the plaintiff, who induced the defendant to believe that it was obligatory to pay sales tax as aforesaid and the plaintiff would reimburse the defendant for such payment. The plaintiff not only induced the defendant to pay sales tax as aforesaid but also paid the sum of Rs. 40,871/- as and by way of indemnification and/or reimbursement. Further the plaintiff was estopped from denying the validity of the payment of the sales tax and/or its liability to reimburse or indemnify the defendant for the same. The following issues were raised before me:

ISSUES:

1. Was the sum of Rs. 40,871/- advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant by mistake of fact and/or law on the representation of the defendant that the sales tax was payable in respect of the contracts as stated in the plaint?

1 (a). Was there any agreement that the defendant would pay sales tax to the State of West Bengal on account of the plaintiff in relation to the contract in suit?

2 (a). Was the mistake of fact or law discovered in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court holding that no sales tax was payable on construction contracts?

2 (b). Were the contracts between the parties and in any event the contracts for manufacture of bricks at Kantatola 'Construction contracts' within the meaning of the Supreme Court decision?

3. Has the consideration for payment of Rs. 40,871/- wholly failed or become illegal or void as alleged in paragraph 12 of the plaint?

4. Is the plaintiff estopped from denying the validity of the payment of sales tax made by the defendant and/or its liability to reimburse and/or to indemnify as pleaded in paragraph 11 (c) of the Written Statement?

5. Is the suit bad for non-joinder of parties as the State of West Bengal has not been made a party in this suit?

6. Is the suit barred by the law of limitation?

7. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

The real question in this suit is whether the sum of Rs. 40,871/- is refundable by the plaintiff as claimed in the plaint. The letters and documents between the parties are admitted and are included in Ext. A, the admitted brief of documents. The contracts between the parties entered into are also admitted. It seems to me that there is no proper scope of oral evidence in this case but since oral evidence has been given I am setting out hereunder the nature of oral evidence adduced by the parties to the suit. Two witnesses were examined on behalf of the plaintiff Corporation of Calcutta. The first witness is Bireswar Roy Chowdhury who was working as a sub-overseer in Dr. Dey's Kulti Outfall Scheme and the second witness is Ajit Kumar Bose, who is now assistant law officer of the Corporation of Calcutta. On behalf of the defendant only one witness was examined, Claud D'Souza who was serving in the defendant company in the accounts department and dealt with the sales tax matter of the defendant company. Bireswar Roy Chowdhury, Sub-Overseer in Dr. Dey's Kulti Outfall Scheme proved its three contracts which are admitted by the defendant Company. He said that the defendant Hindusthan Construction Company was carrying on the works. He also stated that at the Corporation ground some bricks were manufactured by the defendant and the D.W.F. Channel was pitched with bricks. Some works on the roads were carried on. The soiling and edging of roads were carried on. The construction work was from first to 3rd mile of Dr. Dey's Kulti Outfall Scheme and also for 5th mile and 6th mile. The Hindusthan Construction Company Ltd. supplied the labour. Bricks were manufactured at Kantatolla brick-field belonging to the Corporation. The defendant had a work site not in the brick-field itself, but on the side of that brick-field they had a temporary construction where they had three work sites and the works of the channel were carried on by them from this earth. The defendant did excavation of earth for carrying out the works. From this earth they manufactured bricks, and with these bricks they carried on the works of the D.W.F. Channel. The bricks were manufactured out of Corporation earth for use in constructing those channels.

3. The second witness on behalf of the Corporation, Ajit Kumar Bose stated before me that, he actually assisted the Law Officer in drafting the report. The report arose out of sales tax claimed by the defendant payable in respect of the contract entered into between the Hindusthan Construction Company and the Corporation. The defendant Company claimed sales tax from the Corporation in respect of the contract entered into by them and there were three contracts. The witness came to know after the decision passed by the Supreme Court that the Corporation is not liable to pay sales tax in accordance with the contract. The decision was with regard to the case of Gannon Dunkerley & Co. and in the report of the Chief Law Officer this decision has been referred. As a result of the Supreme Court decision the position was that the Corporation is not liable to pay sales tax, on the contrary, it can recover sales tax paid to the defendant company by the Corporation of Calcutta by mistake. The contract being one contract for construction of road and the channel to be constructed pursuant to the outfall scheme framed by Dr. Dey, the Corporation was not liable to pay sales tax in respect of the three contracts. There was no sale of goods in these contracts. The contract being one or indivisible contract, sales tax was not payable. The bricks were utilised for preparation of the channel and for construction of the road. The bricks were manufactured out of earth obtained from the Corporation land. The payment of sales tax was made on September 27, 1957, before the decision of the Supreme Court in 1958. Prior to the decision of the Supreme Court the Corporation did not know or realise that sales tax was not payable. Payment was made by mistake to the defendant Company. He also stated that payment was made on September, 1957. The suit was filed on November 15, 1960. The High Court reopened after long vacation on November 14, 1960. On that date the Court was closed on account of the death of Mr. Hem Chandra Naskar who was a Minister of the Government of West Bengal. The Court re-opened on November 15, 1960 and on the re-opening day the suit was filed. The Court remained closed for long vacation from September 20, 1960 up to November 13, 1960.

4. The only witness for the defendant Company Claud D'Souza admitted that the work that the defendant did was in connection with the construction of Dry Water Flow Channel. He also admitted that for the said works three contracts were entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant. Whatever sales tax the defendant claimed to have paid as sales tax was in respect of the works done in respect of the three contracts and under no other contract. He also admitted that the Corporation had asked the defendant to construct these channels and drains for the entire work and for that the entire work had been done by the defendant. In connection with that work, some bricks had to be used by the defendant and the bricks had been used for the completion of the construction work.

5. Mr. B. K. Ghose learned counsel for the defendant submitted as follows:—

It was a term of the contract that the plaintiff would re-imburse the defendant in case any sales tax was payable in respect of the contracts. The defendant demanded advance payment of Rs. 50,000/- by the letter dated January 10, 1957 and the plaintiff advanced on September 27, 1957, a total sum of Rs. 40,871/-. The judgment of Sinha, J. was delivered on January 18, 1957 and was reported in AIR 1957 Cal 283 (May Issue). Therefore, in May 1967 when the payment was made the plaintiff should have discovered the mistake of fact or law. Ignorance of law is no excuse. Money had been paid ignoring the law. In course of argument Mr. B. K. Ghose further submitted that there was a separate contract for manufacture of bricks at Kantatolla. The tender for manufacture of bricks on Corporation land at Kantatolla mentioned in the letter dated January 11, 1951 was accepted and there was a separate contract for the same. The defendant paid sales tax as agent of the plaintiff. The plaintiff is estopped from realising Rs. 40,871/- from the defendant. Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act does not apply. As the defendant parted with the money, therefore its money was realised from the plaintiff. The plaintiff is disentitled to recover what was paid by mistake, because the defendant has been misled by the plaintiff's conduct. On equitable consideration, the plaintiff is not entitled to refund. He relied on the following cases:

(1) AIR 1963 Mad 231 (P. S. Machado v. Venkatarama Gopala Ayer).

(2) AIR 1946 Cal 245 (Jagadish Prosad Pannalal v. Produce Exchange Corporation Ltd.).

(3) AIR 1955 Cal 626 (Anath Bandhu Deb v. Dominion of India).

(4) 76 Ind App 244 = (AIR 1949 PC 297) (Shiba Prasad Singh v. Sris Chandra Nandi).

(5) AIR 1951 Nag 372 (Nagorao Govindrao Ayachit v. Governor-General in Council).

(6) ILR 42 Bombay 16 = (AIR 1917 Bombay 119) (Soloman Jacob v. National Bank of India Ltd., Aden).

(7) AIR 1958 SC 560 (The State of Madras v. Gannon Dunkerley & Co.).

(8) AIR 1958 SC 682 (Mithan Lal v. State of Delhi).

(9) AIR 1957 Cal 283 (Dukhineswar Sarkar & Bros. Ltd. v. Commercial Tax Officer).

6. Mr. Sankar Kumar Ghose the learned counsel appearing for the plaintiff submitted as follows:—

7. There are three contracts which are the subject-matter of the suit in respect of which the defendant alleged to have paid sales tax to the State of West Bengal. The plaintiff advanced Rs. 40,000 thinking that sales tax was payable on the three contracts. These are all work contracts or construction contracts and sales tax is not payable on such contracts. This point has been finally decided in the judgment of the Supreme Court in AIR 1958 SC 560. Previous to this judgment there was a judgment of the Calcutta High Court by Sinha J. in AIR 1957 Cal 283, to the same effect. But before the judgment of the Supreme Court there were different views of different High Courts and the matter was finally decided by the Supreme Court as stated above. Sales tax was not paid by the defendant as an agent of the plaintiff but as dealer under the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act, 1941. The plaintiff paid sales tax in view of the agreement between the parties upon demand made by the defendant for payment of sales tax thinking that sales tax was payable in respect of works under the contracts, but the plaintiff realised after the decision of the Supreme Court that in the instant case sales tax was not payable. The amount paid as such sales tax by the plaintiff was paid by mistake of fact and law, and Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act is attracted. There was no question of any waiver, estoppel or limitation. Equitable consideration is no bar to the relief claimed by the plaintiff for refund as Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act applies in this case. Mr. Sankar Ghose in support of his submissions very ably relied on and referred to the relevant passages in the several judgments in the following reported cases: 76 Ind App 244 = 54 Cal WN 1 = AIR 1949 PC 297; (Sri Shiba Prasad Singh v. Sris Chandra Nandi), AIR 1959 SC 135; Sales Tax Officer Banaras v. Kanhaiyalal, (1959) 10 STC 57 (All); Sales Tax Commr., U. P. v. Sada Sukh Vyopar Mondal, AIR 1916 Nag 61; Govind v. Mt. Chandrabhaga, AIR 1948 Nag 110; Nainsukh Das v. Goverdhandas, AIR 1927 PC 151; John Agabog v. James Golder Robinson, AIR 1962 SC 1471; Hem Nolini v. Isolyne Saroj Bashini, AIR 1963 Cal 198; Steuart and Co. Ltd. v. Mackertich, (1968) 22 STC 524 (SC); Gill & Co. Pvt. Ltd. v. Commercial Tax Officer, Hyderabad.

Upon due consideration of the evidence adduced and the arguments made on behalf of the respective parties, my findings are as follows:—

The execution of the contracts between the parties are admitted. The contracts between the parties are included in Exts. B, C & D. The defendant claims to have paid the sum of Rs. 53,036.88 as sales tax on contracts for construction of D. W. F. channels as will appear from the letter of the defendant dated July 15, 1959. The payment of sales tax was made by the defendant on November 3, 1952, October 6, 1953, October 28, 1954 and November 3, 1955. There is nothing to show, before me, that a separate contract for manufacture of bricks at Kantatolla was made. The defendant did not prove any such contract. Only three contracts are admitted and proved before me and these three contracts are included in Exts. B, C & D. The contract included in Ext. B is dated April 29, 1952. In this contract it is mentioned that tender dated March 15, 1952 was accepted. Another contract is dated April 29, 1952 which is Ext. D. In this contract it is mentioned that tender dated March 18, 1952 was accepted. The third contract is dated November 1, 1952 which is Ext. C. In this contract it is mentioned that tender dated January 25, 1952 was accepted. Therefore, the tender mentioned in the letter dated January 11, 1951 for manufacture of bricks at Kantatolla was not separately accepted and there was no separate contract for manufacture of bricks at Kantatolla. Use of bricks was part of the works to be done under the contracts. This will appear from the Schedule of rates and tender form which contain the description of the works including the works for excavation, lining and ancillary works. Manufacturing of bricks at Kantatolla was required for all the three contracts. The works included brick soling, brick edge lining and so forth. Claude D'Souza, witness called by the defendant admitted that in connection with the works, certain bricks had to be used by the defendant. The bricks that were used by the defendant were manufactured at Kantatolla on Corporation land and on sand supplied by the Corporation. All works were done under these three contracts. The contracts were for construction of channel and drains (D'Souza Qq 53 to 70). Therefore, in view of the fact admitted before me, there is no doubt that the contracts were contracts for construction, and manufacture of bricks was made for the use of construction work and the using of bricks was part of construction contracts. There was no occasion for sale of bricks separately but the bricks manufactured at Kantatolla were used for construction work and became parts of the entire indivisible works done by the defendant.

8. The principles of law laid down in AIR 1958 SC 560 and in AIR 1957 Cal 283, are clearly attracted and no sales tax was payable on the three contracts. These are all construction contracts. When the assessment orders were passed by the assessing authorities, and when payment of sales tax was made by the defendant in terms of the assessment orders, the law on the point was not clear; and the view prevailed on interpretation of West Bengal Sales Tax Act, that construction contracts were assessable under the Sales Tax Act and the materials used for carrying out the contract of construction in case of structural contract were also assessable for payment of sales tax. However, after the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1958 SC 560, affirming the decision of the Calcutta High Court in AIR 1957 Cal 283, it is clear that sales tax could not be assessed on construction contracts. Materials used for construction contract cannot be separately assessed for payment of sales tax. Therefore, when payment was made by the Corporation of Calcutta on September 27, 1957 to the defendant the payment was made by mistake of law and fact. The same mistake was made by the defendant when payment was made by the defendant to the State of West Bengal. Both parties were labouring under the same mistake inasmuch as on construction contract the sales tax was not payable.

9. The next question which arises is whether in the instant case Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act will be applicable. The leading case on this point is the case of Sri Sri Sibaprosad Singh v. Maharaja Srish Chandra Nandy, decided by the Privy Council in the year 1949 and reported in 78 Ind App 244 = AIR 1949 PC 297 = 54 Cal WN 1. With regard to the argument made by Mr. B. K. Ghose that payment was made by mistake of law and as such it is not recoverable, this decision of the Privy Council is a complete answer. Previous to the Privy Council decision, there were conflicting views of the learned Judges in India. Harries, C. J., took the view following the English principles of law that money paid under mistake of fact is recoverable; but generally speaking, money paid under mistake of law is not recoverable. In the opinion of Harries, C. J., under the Indian Contract Act though the same deals with the effect of mistake of fact and law upon a contract there is no express provision relating to the effect of payment made under such mistake. The view of Harries, C. J., was that the law relating to the matter is the same in this country as it is in England. Lort-Williams J., in 39 Cal WN 174 (Katherine Stiffles v. Carr Mackertich) also took the same view that when money is paid voluntarily with full knowledge of all facts, it cannot be recovered on the ground that payment was made under a mistake of law. Sen J. in a case reported in AIR 1946 Cal 245, disagreed with the above view of Lort-Williams J. Sen J., took a contrary view in interpretation of Sec. 72 of the Indian Contract Act and held that English Common Law Rule that payment made under mistake of law is not recoverable can have no application in India, where there is a statute governing this question. The Privy Council in Sibaprosad's case, 78 IA 244 = (AIR 1949 PC 297), agreed with the view of Sen J., Therefore, prima facie, under the facts of this case the law laid down in Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act is attracted.

10. The only other points which remain to be considered, are whether there are other circumstances which disentitle the plaintiff to recover the sum which was paid by mistake of law and fact. It is to be noted that in the Privy Council judgment in Sibaprosad's case, AIR 1949 PC 297, their Lordships of the Privy Council added that, "Their Lordships' judgment does not imply that other sum paid under a mistake is recoverable, no matter what their circumstances may be. There may, in a particular case, be circumstances which disentitle a plaintiff by an estoppel or otherwise". The Privy Council used very careful and guarded expression as to the circumstances which disentitle a plaintiff to get refund. The Privy Council used the words "By estoppel or otherwise." What is the meaning of the words 'or otherwise'? The law as laid down in Sibaprosad's case was approved and explained by the Supreme Court of India in Kanhiyalal Mukundlal's case, AIR 1959 SC 135. It was held by the learned Judges of the Supreme Court at p. 143 of the report that "on a true interpretation of Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act the only two circumstances there indicated as entitling the party to recover the money back are that the monies must have been paid by mistake or under coercion. If mistake either of law or of fact is established, he is entitled to recover the monies and the party receiving the same is bound to repay or return them irrespective of any consideration whether the monies had been paid voluntarily, subject however to the question of estoppel, waiver, limitation or the like." In other words, the Supreme Court used the expressions "waiver, limitation or the like", in place of the words "or otherwise" which occurred in the judgment of the Privy Council (76 Ind App 244 at p. 259 = AIR 1949 PC 297)."

11. In the judgment of the Supreme Court, AIR 1959 SC 135, it has also been held at p. 142 that in case where S. 72 of the Indian Contract Act applies if payment was made voluntarily, that would not disentitle the plaintiff from receiving this amount. Equitable consideration is again no bar for such relief. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court held at page 143, that no question of estoppel can ever arise when both the parties are labouring under a mistake of law and one of the parties is no more to blame than the other. An estoppel arises only when the plaintiff by his act or conduct makes a representation to the defendant of a certain state of facts which is acted upon by the defendant to his detriment; it is only then that the plaintiff is estopped from setting up a different state of facts.

12. The decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1959 SC 135, has been explained by the Allahabad High Court in the case in (1959) 10 STC 57 (All). It was held by the Allahabad High Court in Sadasuk's case that a person, who had paid money to another by mistake, be it a fact or law, is entitled to get back the money under Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. His title to get back the money may, however, be lost on account of certain circumstances like estoppel, waiver, limitation or the like; but no equitable consideration can take away his title to the refund of the money.

13. Now, the only question is whether under the facts and circumstances of the instant case, the plaintiff is disentitled to get refund by reason of estoppel, waiver, limitation or the like. It has been proved before me, that payment of sales tax was made by mistake which is common to both the parties. The letters dated July 15, 1959 and October 3, 1958 by the defendant to the plaintiff clearly show that both the parties were labouring under the same mistake. There is no question of estoppel in this case because estoppel must be of fact and not of law. The decision in AIR 1916 Nag 61, relied upon by Mr. Sankar Ghose is an authority for the well established principle that representation in order to work as an estoppel, may not generally be a material statement of fact. The same principle was also enunciated in AIR 1948 Nag 110 at p. 116 para 54. "In order to operate as an estoppel the representation must be of fact and not a matter of law." In the instant case, there is no question of estoppel because sales tax was not paid on any representation made by the plaintiff; but the defendant paid sales tax to the State of West Bengal as the defendant was assessed as 'dealer'. The taxing authorities passed the assessment order and required that the defendant should pay as dealer. There was no representation by the plaintiff to make payment of sales tax. Therefore, there is no question of estoppel in this case (see observation of Lord Phillimore in AIR 1927 PC 151 at p. 156, John Agabog Vertannes v. James Golder Robinson)—also AIR 1963 Cal 198. When both the parties are acting under a common misapprehension there could be no estoppel until the position was cleared up. The defendant in the instant case paid sales tax before realisation of money as sales tax from the plaintiff. After the decision of Supreme Court reported in AIR 1958 SC 560, it was made clear beyond all doubts, that sales tax was not payable on such contracts. Before the decision of the Supreme Court the law on this point was not clear and the parties were labouring under the view that sales tax was payable. The plaintiff paid to the defendant after its demand for payment of sales tax. This is a case where both parties were labouring under the same mistake and again for this reason there is no case of estoppel. Estoppel arises when the plaintiff by his act or conduct makes a representation to the defendant that certain state of facts exists which is acted upon by the defendant to his detriment, it is only then that the plaintiff is estopped from setting up a different state of facts (see AIR 1962 SC 1471 at p. 1472). But in the instant case it is the defendant who demanded from the plaintiff that the defendant had already paid sales tax and the same should be paid by plaintiff. It was not a case that the plaintiff was making representation to the defendant that sales tax should be paid and the defendant acted upon any such representation. There was no such representation by the plaintiff at all. Further there was no question of estoppel because the plaintiff was labouring under a mistake of law and fact that such money was due and payable as sales tax. There is no question of waiver in this case, because, immediately after the mistake became known to the plaintiff demand was made by the plaintiff for refund of sales tax. There is no question of limitation in this case, because the suit was instituted within three years from the date of payment by the plaintiff to the defendant. The payment was admittedly made on September 27, 1957. The High Court reopened after the long vacation on November 15, 1960. The Court was closed on November 14, 1960 due to the death of Shri Hem Chandra Naskar, who was then a minister of State of West Bengal. As November 14, 1960 was declared a holiday, the suit was filed on November 15, 1960, the date when the Court reopened after the long vacation.

14. I will now deal with the cases relied upon by Mr. B. K. Ghose. The cases cited by Mr. B. K. Ghose do not help him and only two cases need be referred to in this connection. The judgment of R. Kaushelendra Rao J., reported in AIR 1951 Nag 372 at p. 374, relied upon by Mr. B. K. Ghose, before me, was disapproved by the Supreme Court in AIR 1959 SC 135 at p. 145. It was held by the Supreme Court that the question of equitable consideration cannot be imported when Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act applies.

15. The other case relied upon by Mr. B. K. Ghose is AIR 1955 Cal 626. In this case it was held by P. B. Mukharji J. (as he then was) that, "ignorance of law is not mistake of law. It cannot be the intention of Section 72, that wherever and whenever and however a mistake of law occurs, a claim may be made under Section 72. Deliberate disregard of law is not mistake of law. It is not open to the plaintiff to say that he did not know the effect of Section 175 (3), Government of India Act, 1935. When money was paid voluntarily with full knowledge of all the facts it cannot be recovered on the ground that payment was made under a mistake of law." In the case before P. B. Mukharji J. (as he then was) the Learned Judge did not grant relief either under Sec. 70 or under Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act. This case was decided in the year 1955. In my view the subsequent decision of the Supreme Court in the year 1958 reported in AIR 1959 SC 135, enunciated the law on this point differently. It was held by the Supreme Court that the term "mistake" used in Section 72 of the Contract Act has been used without any qualification or limitation whatever and comprised within its scope a mistake of law as well as a mistake of fact. There is no warrant for ascribing a limited meaning to the word 'mistake' as used therein. There is no conflict between the provisions of Section 72 on the one hand and Ss. 21 and 22 of the Contract Act on the other. The principle is that if one party under mistake whether of fact or law pays to another party money which is not due by contract or otherwise that money must be repaid. The mistake lies in thinking that the money paid was due when in fact it was not due and that mistake, if established, entitled the party paying money to recover back from the party receiving the same."

16. Both P. B. Mukharji, J. (as he then was) and the learned Judges of the Supreme Court, relied on and referred to the judgment of the Privy Council in Siba Prosad's case, 76 Ind App 244 = (AIR 1949 PC 297), but interpreted the principles of law in Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act differently. Unfortunately, the decision in AIR 1955 Cal 626, was not referred to in the judgment of the Supreme Court in AIR 1959 SC 135. However, I am bound to follow the law laid down by the Supreme Court.

17. From the documents disclosed by the defendant, it appears that the defendant was a 'dealer' under the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act, 1941 (Bengal Act VI of 1941) and as such dealer the defendant paid sales tax for the gross turnover during the accounting year. The defendant did not pay sales tax as agent of the plaintiff. There cannot be any liability of the plaintiff Corporation of Calcutta to pay sales tax to the State of West Bengal because the plaintiff Corporation is not a dealer within the meaning of Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act. All that the Corporation did was to enter into agreements with the defendant that if any sales tax was payable for the work then the Corporation will pay the same to the defendant. The decision in (1959) 10 STC 57 (All.) at p. 65, is a clear authority for the proposition that the dealer is not the agent of the customer. The defendant did not collect tax from the plaintiff as agent of the State. A point has been taken by Mr. B. K. Ghose that the State of West Bengal should have been made a party. It is clear that the plaintiff is asking for refund of sales tax from the defendant on the ground that the money was paid by the defendant by mistake. There is no question of any repayment from the State of West Bengal because the plaintiff had not paid to the State of West Bengal. As such the State of West Bengal is not a necessary party in this suit for refund under Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act. The defendant claims that it had paid sales tax relating to the construction contracts and the taxing authorities had realised the same. If that is so, the defendant can take steps to quash the assessment order or such other steps for refund against the State, stating that such tax was paid by mistake. The decision of the Supreme Court reported in (1968) 22 STC 524 (Gill & Company Private Limited v. Commercial Tax Officer, Hyderabad III) is an authority for the proposition that such refund would ordinarily be made by the State. In the premises, I hold that the plaintiff is entitled to refund of payment of Rs. 40,871/- from the defendant.

18. I will answer the Issues raised in this case as hereunder:

Issue No. 1:— Yes.

Issue No. 1 (a):—No. There was no agreement that the defendant would pay sales tax on account of the plaintiff in relation to the contracts in suit. The defendant paid sales tax as dealer and not as agent of the plaintiff.

Issue No. 2 (a):— Yes. The mistake was discovered after the decision of the Supreme Court holding that no sales tax was payable on construction contract.

Issue No. 2 (b):— Yes. The contracts between the parties were construction contracts within the meaning of the decision of the Supreme Court.

Issue No. 3:— Yes.

Issue No. 4:— No. There is no question of estoppel against the plaintiff. There is no question of any liability of the plaintiff to reimburse or indemnify the defendant as the contracts were construction contracts and sales tax was not payable.

Issue No. 5:— No. The State of West Bengal is not a necessary party in this suit.

Issue No. 6:— No. The suit is not barred by the law of limitation.

Issue No. 7:— The plaintiff is entitled to refund of the money paid or advanced, namely, Rs. 40,871/-.

19. At the end of the argument in this case, Mr. Sankar Ghose, the learned counsel appearing for the plaintiff submitted that I should grant to the plaintiff ad interim interest from the date of the institution of the suit till the date of the decree. Whether in the circumstances of a particular case ad interim interest should be granted or not is a matter of discretion and this discretion has to be exercised judicially on the facts and circumstances of each case. This is clear from Section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure. I do not think I may be justified in granting ad interim interest in respect of the sum of Rs. 40,871/- paid by the Corporation to the defendant by mistake of fact and law. In the instant case both the parties were labouring under a mistake in thinking that sales tax was payable. The defendant was assessed as a dealer and the defendant's case is that it paid sales tax after such assessment. The assessing authority also did so in view of the law of sales tax as known and understood by them at the point of time when assessment order was passed. The Supreme Court finally decided in 1958 in Gannon Dunkerley and Co.'s case, AIR 1958 SC 560 that in case of construction contract no sales tax was payable. Before the decision of the Supreme Court the defendant demanded that in view of the contract between the parties the plaintiff must pay sales tax to the defendant which the defendant has paid to the assessing authority and the plaintiff paid the same. After such payment the plaintiff claimed for refund.

20. The suit was contested by the defendant on several points. One of the points urged by the defendant is that because there was manufacture of bricks by the defendant for the construction work, sales tax was payable. This issue is now decided in this suit against the defendant. After the institution of the suit long time has elapsed. Even when the suit appeared in my list and was called on for hearing the plaintiff's solicitor was not ready to go on with the suit and asked for time. The brief of documents was prepared after I had granted time to the plaintiff's solicitor to prepare the same and this was done, when I insisted that the old matters must be heard and no further adjournment would be given. After the suit was instituted the defendant was contesting the suit on the ground, inter alia, that the amount paid by the plaintiff was not refundable.

21. It is true that the plaintiff has succeeded on the point that Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act applies in this case and the plaintiff is entitled to get refund of the sum of Rs. 40,871/- paid by mistake; but that does not mean that the plaintiff should get ad interim interest during the pendency of the suit. Under Section 72, a person to whom money has been paid by mistake must repay it. The section does not say that repayment should be made with interest. There is no question of any interest before filing the suit in this case. The plaintiff cannot get ad interim interest as a matter of course. I cannot disregard the fact that the defendant had parted with its money before receiving payment from the plaintiff labouring under the same mistake. The question of realisation of money paid by the defendant from the State of West Bengal would arise at a later stage, if and when, the defendant would take proper proceedings for recovery of the amount against the Sales Tax Authorities. It may be that the defendant may not get any interest from the State. The defendant could not get the benefit of the money which was paid by plaintiff; because, the defendant has also parted with similar amount by making payment to the taxing authorities. Therefore, I do not think that I will be justified in allowing the plaintiff any ad interim interest during the pendency of this suit.

22. The defendant could not get the benefit of the money because the defendant had to pay sales tax. It may be, that the defendant parted with the money before realisation of the same from the plaintiff, but since the defendant had paid more than Rs. 40,871/-, but did not in effect have the use and benefit of the money to wit, Rs. 40,871/- realised from the plaintiff, I do not think I will be justified in allowing any ad interim interest to the plaintiff during the pendency of the suit in respect of the said sum of Rs. 40,871/-.

23. Mr. Sankar Ghose cited before me, a number of authorities to establish his client's case that I should grant ad interim interest from the date of institution of the suit to the date of the decree. Authorities cited by him are:

AIR 1932 Bom 319 (Parashram v. Secretary of State).

49 Bom LR 296 (Abdul Hussain Mohasinali Bohri v. Fazalbhai Taherali Bohri).

AIR 1919 Cal 144 (Sarajubala Debi Chowdhurani v. Saradanath Bhattacharjee).

AIR 1943 Nag 240 (Yadaorao Ganpat-rao Kadu v. Ramrao Balasaheb Dhote).

AIR 1960 Raj 63 (Ashoka Bus Transport Corporation Bhilwara v. Appellate Tribunal of State Transport Authority).

AIR 1971 SC 422 (Naresh Chandra Sanyal v. Calcutta Stock Exchange Association Ltd.).

24. Under different facts and circumstances which arose in the several cases cited by Mr. Sankar Ghose, the Court in the exercise of its discretion allowed ad interim interest which will appear from the above cases. In my view, the cases cited are no authority for the proposition that under the facts and circumstances of the instant case which I am now trying I am compelled to order payment of ad interim interest, although in my view under the facts of this case the plaintiff should not get ad interim interest. After all the question of payment of ad interim interest is a question of discretion and has to be determined in the light of the facts and circumstances of each particular case. However, since Mr. Shankar Kumar Ghose has cited, so many authorities, I will discuss some of them as hereunder. In AIR 1932 Bom 319 at p. 325 it was argued by the plaintiff's advocate that although interest has not been specifically claimed in the plaint under Section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with Order 7, Rule 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is within the discretion of the Court to award it. The Special Government Pleader said that the matter was not free from difficulty but the learned Judges awarded interest at 6 per cent per annum from the date of the institution of the suit till realisation in exercise of their discretion. Therefore, this case reaffirms that the Court has discretion to grant ad interim interest and under the facts and circumstances of the case the Court did grant it.

25. The next case relied upon by Mr. Ghose is 49 Bom LR 296. This was a suit on a promissory note. No pendente lite interest was allowed by the trial Court because the promissory note did not make any specific mention about interest. There were two promissory notes. The first promissory note did not contain any provision regarding interest and though the second promissory note did contain such a term the plaintiff had not sent the statements of accounts to the defendants as required by Sec. 3 of the Central Provinces and Berar Money Lenders Act. The Court did not allow any interest pendente lite or interest after the date of the decree but has not given any reason for refusing to award it.

26. The learned Judges of the High Court held that the Court below was in error in holding that the plaintiff is not entitled to any interest at all on the promissory note dated June 27, 1935 merely because that promissory note did not make any specific mention about interest. It has ignored the provision of Section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act which required that in a case like this interest shall be calculated at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. The promissory note in this case was in fact a fresh contract or a novation of the old contract. The suit being one for the enforcement of such a contract the latter part of the definition of "money-lender" contained in Section 2 (b) of the Act was not attracted, and the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to interest from the date of the execution of the promissory note till the date of the suit.

27. No reason has been given for disallowing interest pendente lite or interest subsequent to the date of the decree. No doubt, the granting of such interest is in the discretion of the Court but that discretion had to be exercised judicially. Ordinarily, the Court does not disallow interest to a plaintiff in such cases unless he by his conduct renders himself disentitled to the grant of such interest. The only suggestion made by the learned counsel for the defendants is that the plaintiff delayed the filing of the suit and also that instead of suing straightway in the Court at Khamgaon within whose jurisdiction the defendants reside, he wrongly instituted the suit at Nagpur. In my view, interest pendente lite was allowed in this case under entirely different circumstances and this case is again an authority for the proposition that granting of interest pendente lite is in the discretion of the Court. I do not think that the facts of the instant case has any relevance to the facts of the case cited by Mr. Ghose.

28. The next case cited is AIR 1963 Raj 93 at p. 95 (Thakur Umed Singh v. Amolakchand). This is an appeal arising out of a suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered. The Court below disallowed interest but did not give any reason for such disallowance. The learned Judges followed AIR 1952 Raj 159 = ILR (1952) 2 Raj 319 (Chessa Lal v. Mootia) and held that a creditor would be entitled to pendente lite and future interest unless there were reasons why he should be deprived of it. Where the courts below disallow such interest they must indicate the reasons for the conclusion to which they have come, so that the appellate Court may be assured that the discretion which undoubtedly vests in the Courts below in this regard has been exercised judicially and on correct principles.

29. I do not think that this case also helps Mr. Sankar Ghose that I must grant ad interim interest.

30. AIR 1946 Bom 1 at p. 7 reaffirms that under Section 34, it is entirely a matter for the Court's discretion whether to award interest from the date of the filing of the suit where the decree is for payment of money. AIR 1971 SC 422 at p. 429 in my view, does not help the plaintiff in this respect. I do not agree with the submissions of Mr. Ghose that whenever there was a decree for payment of money, ad interim interest has to be granted. It will depend upon the facts of each case and, in my view, this is not a case where I shall grant ad interim interest. However, I shall grant interest on decree. I do not think I shall discuss the large number of authorities on the same point which was pressed by Mr. Ghose as it is not necessary. In the premises, there will be a decree for Rs. 40,871/-, interest on decree at the rate of 6% per annum and costs.

31. There will be no order as to payment of reserved costs. The operation of the decree be stayed for four weeks.

Order accordingly.

M/s. Kokarmal Gurudayal, Petitioner
v. Sagarmal Bengani, Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Case No. 4025 of 1970,
D/- 23-2-1972.

(A) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), (As Amended by Act 4 of 1968), S. 17-B (1) — Time limit within which tenant has to apply for reliefs under Section 17-B (1) — Commencement of — (X-Ref:— Maxims).

Held that the commencement of President's Act 4 of 1968 is August 26, 1967 as mentioned in Sec. 1 (2) thereof and an application under Section 17-B (1) could be made within a period of sixty days only from the August 26, 1967. No other date, has any relevance to the applicability of this section. The maxim "lex non cogit ad impossibilia" does not apply to S. 17-B (1).

The history of this legislation leads to the inevitable conclusion that the legislative authorities were consciously re-enacting the relevant provisions of 1967 Ordinance in the subsequent Acts and Ordinances just to keep alive the rights that were given to a tenant under the 1967 Ordinance.

(Para 43)

The substitution of some date other than the date suggested in Section 1 (2) is not permissible. The purpose of the Act is to give relief against forfeiture to tenants with retrospective effect and it is that purpose which runs through all the other sections of the statute.

(Para 26)

The doctrine of "generalia specialibus non derogant" cannot be applied to the statute in question. AIR 1969 Cal 67 and (1969) 73 Cal WN 736, Overruled. Case Law discussed.

(Para 26)

(B) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (XII of 1956), Ss. 39, 17-B — Application under S. 17-B — "Within a period of 60 days" in S. 17-B (1) — Reference is to period of limitation — S. 5, Limitation Act, applies by virtue of S. 39 of Tenancy Act — (X-Ref:— Limitation Act (1963), Ss. 5 and 29 (2)).

Section 17-B (1) prescribes a period of sixty days from the 26th August, 1967, after which an application under the section cannot be maintained. A provision of this nature cannot but be a period of limitation.

Section 39 of the Tenancy Act has expressly made all the provisions of the Limitation Act, 1908 applicable to the Tenancy Act subject to periods of limitation mentioned in the Tenancy Act itself. This clear invocation to all the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1908, attracts the provisions of Section 5 of that Act to the appropriate provisions of the Tenancy Act including Section 17-B (1). The intention of the legislature has always been that Section 5 could be availed of in suitable cases. Observations to the contrary in A.F.O.D. No. 689 of 1963, D/- 19-3-1969 (Cal.) held obiter, Suit No. 829 of 1966, D/- 13-8-1969 (Cal.) and AIR 1971 Cal 313, Dissent from. Case Law Ref. (Para 62)

(C) Limitation Act (1963), S. 5 — Sufficient cause — Ignorance of law arising from not taking any legal advice on petitioner's rights under S. 17-B, W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (1956), held not sufficient cause within S. 5, Limitation Act. (Para 74)

Inaction of this nature cannot be condoned by a Court of Law by exercising its powers under S. 5 of the Limitation Act. (Para 38)

There may be extenuating circumstances justifying the application of Section 5 of the Limitation Act when a party is ignorant of his rights, but such circumstances are, indeed, rare. For instance, in the instant case if the petitioner had stated that it was under the impression that there was no period of limitation for an application under Section 17-B (1) owing to the impossibility of applying the relevant provisions, the petitioner's case under Section 5 might have deserved careful consideration. A. C. Bhabra, Maunulal Tambi and Rajat Kumar Ghosh, for Petitioner; P. P. Ginwalla, S. Goho and Janwarilal Pugalia, for Respondent.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, J. —

This Rule is directed against an order of the Sixth Subordinate Judge, Alipore, being Order No. 56 of the 10th November, 1970, in Title Suit No. 3 of 1964 (Sagarmal Bengani v. M/s. Pokarmal Gurudayal) rejecting the defendant's application under Section 17-B (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 and another application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act. The facts briefly are as follows:

On January 21, 1964, Sagarmal Bengani filed Title Suit No. 3 of 1964 before the Subordinate Judge, Sixth Court, Alipore against Messrs. Pokarmal Gurudayal for ejectment of the defendant from a godown at premises No. P-3, Brojodayal Saha Road, Cossipore, on the ground of default in payment of rent since April, 1963. On the 27th March, 1965, the Court passed an order under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, striking out the tenant's defence against delivery of possession. On May 5, 1965, the tenant applied for relief against forfeiture under Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act. On May 20, 1965, the application for relief against forfeiture was rejected. On June 26, 1965, the suit was dismissed; but the landlord preferred an appeal to which we would revert a little later.

2. On the August 24, 1965, West Bengal Ordinance No. VI of 1965 was promulgated. Section 17-A (1) of this Ordinance was as follows:—

"Where any decree or order for the recovery of possession of any premises has been made in a suit or proceeding in which the defence against delivery of possession was struck out by an order under sub-section (3) of Section 17, but the possession of such premises has not been recovered from the tenant by the execution of such decree or order, the tenant may make an application to the Court which made such decree or order within a period of sixty days from the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1965, for setting aside such decree or order."

3. This Ordinance was promulgated by the Governor of West Bengal on August 21, 1965 and was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the August 24, 1965. The provisions of this Ordinance were also enacted by the West Bengal Legislature by the Act 29 of 1965. Section 17-A of that Act ran thus:—

"17-A. Power of Court to set aside decree or order for ejectment in certain cases.

(1) Where any decree or order for the recovery of possession of any premises has been made in a suit or proceeding in which the defence against delivery of possession was struck out by an order under sub-section (3) of Section 17, but the possession of such premises has not been recovered from the tenant by the execution of such decree or order, the tenant may make an application to the Court which made such decree or order within a period of sixty days from the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1965, for setting aside such decree or order....."

4. We are not directly concerned in this Rule either with the Ordinance of 1965 or with the Act of 1965; but we have quoted the above provisions merely to show that the legislature has consistently used the same form of expression in all the subsequent enactments we shall refer to later.

5. The landlord, in the instant case, preferred an appeal against the dismissal of the suit. The appeal was marked as Title Appeal No. 1091 of 1965. This Title Appeal was disposed of on November 17, 1965. The Additional District Judge, Seventh Court, Alipore, reversed the judgment of the Trial Court and passed an ejectment decree in favour of the landlord. In 1966, the tenant filed a second appeal being Second Appeal No. 1053 of 1966 in this Court against the judgment and decree of the Appellate Court. On April 20, 1966, a Division Bench of this Court in Civil Rule No. 529 (8) of 1966 directed the tenant to deposit Rs. 11,400.00 on or before the 1st May, 1966, or to continue to deposit Rs. 450.00 every month. According to the tenant, this order has up till now been complied with.

6. On August 26, 1967, the Governor of West Bengal promulgated West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967. By this Ordinance Sections 17-B and 17-C were inserted into the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. In this application we are concerned with Section 17-C, the relevant portions whereof are as follows:—

"Section 17-C (1). Power of Court to set aside decree in cases where defence against delivery of possession struck out. Where a decree for the recovery of possession of any premises was passed before the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967, in a suit in which the defence against delivery of possession was struck out by an order under sub-section (3) of Section 17, but the possession of such premises has not been recovered from the tenant by the execution of such decree, the tenant may, within a period of sixty days from the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967, make an application to the Court which passed such decree to set aside such decree."

7. This Ordinance was published in an Extraordinary issue of the Calcutta Gazette on August 28, 1967 which was, therefore, the date of its commencement. On November 29, 1967, the West Bengal Legislature had a session. Naturally, Ordinance No. VI of 1967, was to cease on January 9, 1968. That is why, on the 8th January 1968, the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Second Ordinance, 1968 (West Bengal Ordinance No. II of 1968) was promulgated as the Legislature was not in session. It is interesting to observe the language of the relevant portions of Section 17-C of this Ordinance. These are as follows:—

"17-C (1). Where a decree for the recovery of possession of any premises was passed before the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967,—(West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967), in a suit in which the defence against delivery of possession was struck out by an order under sub-section tion (3) of Section 17, but the possession of such premises has not been recovered from the tenant by the execution of such decree, the tenant may, within a period of sixty days from the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967, make an application to the Court which passed such decree to set aside such decree."

8. We intend to emphasize that in this Ordinance of 1968 the same right which was given to the tenant by the Ordinance of 1967 was being repeated. The Legislature was fully conscious of the fact that the period of sixty days from the commencement of the Ordinance of 1967 had expired long before the promulgation of the Ordinance of 1968 but had not thought it fit to make any changes in the appropriate provisions of Section 17-C of the 1968 Ordinance.

9. On March 26, 1968, the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968 was enacted. We quote below the relevant provisions of Section 17-B of this Act:

"17-B. (1) Power of Court to set aside decree in cases where defence against delivery of possession struck out. Where a decree for the recovery of possession of any premises was passed before the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968, in a suit in which the defence against delivery of possession was struck out by an order under sub-section (3) of Section 17, but the possession of such premises has not been recovered from the tenant by the execution of such decree, the tenant may, within a period of sixty days of such commencement, make an application to the Court which passed such decree to set aside such decree."

10. In Section 1 (2) of this Act it is specifically provided that the Act "shall be deemed to have come into force on the 26th day of August, 1967". This was the date of commencement of Ordinance No. VI of 1967.

11. It is clear, therefore that, again and again, the legislature is trying to keep alive the right conferred on a tenant by the 1967 Ordinance and was not giving him a higher or an extended right. Incidentally, Section 6 of the Amendment Act of 1968 runs thus:—

"6 (1). The West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Second Ordinance, 1968 is hereby repealed.

(2) Notwithstanding such repeal, anything done or any action taken (including any order made, proceeding commenced, obligation or liability incurred), or deemed to have been done or taken, under the principal Act as amended by the said Ordinance shall continue to be in force and shall be deemed to have been done, taken, made, commenced or incurred, as the case may be, under the principal Act as amended by this Act."

12. There were similar provisions in Section 7 of the Second Ordinance of 1968 with respect to Ordinance No. VI of 1967. The Amendment Act of 1968 was a President's Act. It was President's Act No. 4 of 1968. That is why, after the termination of President's Rule the West Bengal Legislature under the provisions of Article 357 (2) of the Constitution had to pass the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1969 which the President assented to on the 31st October, 1969. Section 17-B (1) of this Act reads thus:

13. Once again, the Legislature is sticking to the date of commencement of Ordinance No. VI of 1967, namely, the 26th August, 1967. And owing to the provisions of Article 357 (2) itself there is no provision in the 1969 Act for "Repeal and Saving."

14. These are the statutory provisions we have to consider and construe in the present Rule. Coming back to the facts of the case it is alleged in paragraph 13 of the petition that on the 25th February, 1969, the petitioner's second appeal appeared in the list for hearing before P. N. Mookerjee and S. K. Chakraborty, JJ. and was adjourned till the reopening of the Court after the Easter vacation.

15. In paragraph 14 of the petition it is stated that the petitioner thereafter engaged Mr. Arun Kumar Dutt (Senior) as the petitioner's senior advocate in the second appeal. On the 9th April, 1969, a conference was held with the said senior advocate. At this conference the petitioner's partner Gurdial Berlia was present. Mr. A. K. Dutt was of opinion that it was necessary for the petitioner to file in the trial Court an application under Section 17-B (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968 for setting aside the order of March 27, 1965, by which the petitioner's defence against recovery of possession was directed to be struck out and for other necessary reliefs. Mr. A. K. Dutt, says the petitioner, was also of the view that the petitioner ought to, in the special facts and circumstances of the case, make an application to the trial Court for the aforesaid relief including a prayer for condonation of delay.

16. Two days thereafter on April 11, 1969, the petitioner made an application to the trial Court under Section 17-B (1) of the said Act and also an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act. On May 7, 1969 the second appeal was dismissed. On November 10, 1970, the trial Court rejected the application under Section 17-B (1) and under Section 5. On December 21, 1970, the present rule was issued.

17. The first question to be decided in this Rule is the time within which a tenant had to apply for reliefs under Section 17-B (1). According to Mr. Bhabra, learned counsel for the petitioner, there is no time limit at all for making this application provided that it is made before a tenant is evicted by execution proceedings. Learned counsel says that the period of sixty days from the date of commencement of the Amendment Act, 1968, that is, August 26, 1967, within which an application had to be made under Section 17-B (1), was a provision impossible of being carried into effect and the Court should take no notice of it. As the time limit is not a matter of jurisdiction, the Court, submits Mr. Bhabra, can give relief under Section 17-B (1) when the other conditions prescribed by the section are satisfied.

18. Our attention has been drawn to two decisions of this Court on Section 17-B. In both the decisions it has been held that for certain purposes the date of commencement of President's Act No. 4 of 1968 is not the 26th August, 1967 as provided in sub-section (2) of Section 1; but the 26th March, 1968, when the President gave his assent to the Act. The two learned Judges who delivered these two judgments reached the same conclusion; but their Lordships' reasonings were not the same. Both Mr. Bhabra for the petitioner and Mr. Ginwalla appearing for the opposite party before us, have submitted to us that, these two decisions cannot be accepted as correct. Mr. Bhabra's contention is that there is no time limit for making an application under Section 17-B (1). Mr. Ginwalla's contention is that the time limit is sixty days from the date of commencement which is, as prescribed in sub-section (2) of Section 1 of the President's Act 4 of 1968, the 26th August, 1967.

19. The first decision of this Court we have been referred to, is the decision of Bijayesh Mukherji, J. in Benu Roy v. Manindra Nath Chatterjee, 73 Cal WN 10. The learned Judge has principally relied on a passage in Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes 10th Edition, at page 409. In this passage it is stated: "..... where a particular day is named for its commencement (that is the commencement of an Act), but the Royal assent is not given until a later day, the Act would come into operation only on the later day." This passage rests on footnote (p) which bears Burn v. Carvalho, (1834) 4 Nev and M 893 S. 9, Newspaper Libel Act, 1881 (c. 60) required printers to make certain returns before July 31, 1881, yet it was not passed till the following August 27."

20. Mr. Bhabra showed to us that this passage had been omitted in the 12th Edition of Maxwell's book. The reason for this omission, says Mr. Bhabra, is that it cannot be sustained by the authority of (1834) 4 Nev and M 893. This case decided that as the language of Section 30 of the Civil Procedure Act, 1833 was "prospective only" it could not apply to any proceeding which took place before the Act was passed. The Court also made a comparison between the language of Section 30 and that of Section 21, which was sufficiently comprehensive to include all actions brought by executors and administrators whether before or after the passing of the Act: vide Craies on "Statute Law", 7th Edition, page 385, footnote 18.

21. It is clear therefore, that the judgment of Bijayesh Mukherji, J. pronounced primarily on the above passage in the 10th Edition of Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes cannot be upheld by us. Moreover, Mukherji, J.'s attention, it appears, was not specifically drawn to the fact that the date of commencement of the Act is necessary for the purpose of determining which of the decrees were passed before that date. In other words, the significance of the word 'such' before the word 'commencement' and before the word 'decree' in Section 17-B (1) was not emphasized before Mukherji, J. The vulnerable decrees were decrees made before the commencement of the Act, that is, the August 26, 1967. And the application had to be made within sixty days of the August 26, 1967.

22. The result of the judgment of Bijayesh Mukherji, J. appears to be that the date of commencement for the decree is the August 26, 1967; but its date of commencement for an application under Section 17-B (1) is the March 26, 1968. Such a construction, if we may say so with great respect, causes violence to the language used in Section 17-B (1). It causes violence to "such commencement" and "such decree". Then again, in the English Case of (1834) 4 Nev and M 893, Section 44 of the Act enacted that "this Statute shall commence and take effect on the first day of June 1883". In other words, the date of commencement of this Statute was prospective. In our case the date of commencement is retrospective. For all these reasons, we are unable to follow the judgment of Bijayesh Mukherji, J.

23. The next judgment is the judgment of Alak Gupta, J. in Md. Yusuf v. Golam Jilani, (1969) 73 Cal WN 736. Gupta, J. points out that the reasoning of Bijayesh Mukherji, J., based on the case of (1834) 4 Nev and M 893, cannot be supported. But his Lordship also is of the view that for purpose of Sec. 17-B the date of commencement of President's Act 4 of 1968 is the March 26, 1968. His Lordship has given his reasons in paragraphs 6 and 8 of the judgment. These paragraphs have been summarised in the head note as follows:—

"Whenever in the same Statute there is a particular enactment, such as that in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, President's Act 4 of 1968, published and made known to the public, for the first time, on March 26, 1968, and introducing in the parent Act Section 17-A, the language of which is clearly prospective, and there is also a general enactment, such as Section 1 (2) prescribing that the aforesaid (Amendment) Act shall be deemed to have come into force on August 26, 1967, and the general enactment, taken in its most comprehensive sense, would overrule the special enactment, the particular enactment must be operative, and the general enactment must be taken to affect only the other parts of the Statute to which it may properly apply. So considered, the commencement of the 1968 (Amendment) Act for the purpose of Section 17-A must be taken to be March 26, 1968, when the said Act was published, the aforesaid section being thus saved from being entirely nugatory."

Alak Gupta, J. therefore, has applied the doctrine of generalia specialibus non derogant to the relevant provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968 and has held, inter alia, that an application under Section 17-A may be made within a period of thirty days of the 26th March, 1968.

24. The doctrine of generalia specialibus non derogant has been fully explained in the case of the Commr. of Income Tax, Patiala v. Shahzada Nand & Sons, AIR 1966 SC 1342 at p 1347. The Supreme Court says that the maxim means that when there is a conflict between a general and a special provision, the latter shall prevail. The Supreme Court quotes in this connection Craies on Statute Laws, 5th Edition, at page 205. The passage runs thus:—

"The Rule is, that whenever there is a particular enactment and a general enactment in the same statute, and the latter, taken in its most comprehensive sense, would overrule the former, the particular enactment must be operative, and the general enactment must be taken to affect only the other parts of the statute to which it may properly apply."

25. The Supreme Court points out that this Rule of construction is not of universal application. It is subject to the condition that there is nothing in the general provision, express or implied, indicating an intention to the contrary; see Maxwell on "Interpretation of Statutes," 11th Edition, at pp. 168 to 169. The Supreme Court then proceeds to say that when the words of the section are clear, but its scope is sought to be curtailed by construction, the approach suggested by Lord Coke in re: Heydon's case, (1584) 3 Co. Rep 7a, yields better results. The Supreme Court has said:

"To arrive at the real meaning, it is always necessary to get an exact conception of the aim, scope and object of the whole Act: to consider, according to Lord Coke: (1) what was the law before the Act was passed; (2) what was the mischief or defect for which the law had not provided; (3) what remedy Parliament has appointed; and (4) the reason for the remedy."

26. We are of the view that this doctrine of generalia specialibus non derogant cannot be applied to the statute we have been called upon to construe. There is no general provision and special provision on the same subject. In Section 1 (2) it is apparent that the legislature wanted to make the statute retrospective. Therefore, the word 'commencement' used in the sections that follow Section 1 (2) of President's Act 4 of 1968 must have the meaning that can be derived for it from Section 1 (2). It seems to us that substitution of some date other than the date suggested in Section 1 (2) is not permissible. The purpose of the Act is to give relief against forfeiture to tenants with retrospective effect and it is that purpose which runs through all the other sections of the statute.

27. Let us, in this connection, refer to a few cases. In Sree Bank Ltd. v. Sarkar Dutt Roy & Co., AIR 1966 SC 1953, at page 1965 (paragraph 38) Raghubar Dayal, J., observes:—

"It is not necessary for the retrospective operation of the provision of an Act that it must be stated that its provisions would be deemed to have always existed. That is one mode and may be an effective mode of providing that the provisions would have retrospective effect. Retrospective effect of an enactment can also be gathered from its language and the object and intent of the legislature in enacting it."

28. In Sahabuddin v. Mohan Lal, AIR 1951 All 227 at p 228 (paragraph 2), it is stated:

"Reliance was placed on certain provisions of the United Provinces (Temporary) Control of Rent & Eviction Act... and it was urged that the decree was no longer executable. This Act received the assent of the Governor-General on 28-2-1947 and was published in the U. P. Gazette... on 1-3-1947. Sub-section (3) of Section 1, however, provides that the Act must be deemed to have come into force on 1-10-1946. The result, therefore, is that though the Act was passed in the year 1947 it was given retrospective effect from 1-10-1946. The compromise decree being dated 8-11-1946, it must be deemed to have been passed after the Act came into force."

29. This judgment was followed in Radhey Lal v. Lareti, AIR 1954 All 150 at p 151 (para. 9). Both the judgments of Allahabad High Court were on statutes that wanted to give relief to tenants retrospectively.

30. Then again, Jessel, M. R. in Quilter v. Mapleson, (1882) 9 QBD 672 at p 674, has observed:

"The question whether an Act of Parliament is retrospective in its operation must be determined by the provisions of the Act itself, bearing in mind that a statute is not to be construed retrospectively, unless it is clear that such was the intention of the legislature....."

31. We have cited the decisions in the foregoing paragraphs to indicate the various circumstances in which a statute is given retrospective operation. In our case the express provision in Section 1 (2) of President's Act 4 of 1968 is that the statute is retrospective. In other words, it explicitly intends to give relief to a tenant retrospectively. In these premises, we find it difficult to follow the judgment of Alak Gupta, J., in (1969) 73 Cal WN 736.

32. As we have said counsel for both the parties before us are agreed that they cannot rely either on the judgment of Bijayesh Mukherji, J. or on the judgment of Alak Gupta, J. to support the proposition that President's Act 4 of 1968 came into operation on the 26th March, 1968.

33. In view of this admitted position Mr. Bhabra for the petitioner has argued that if the Act did not come into operation on the 26th March, 1968, then the provisions of Section 17-B became impossible of being given effect to. In these circumstances, the only conclusion is, according to Mr. Bhabra, that for an application under Section 17-B there is no period of limitation at all. Mr. Bhabra relies on the maxims of (a) Lex non inditit aliquid impossibilia (the law intends not anything impossible) and (b) Lex non cogit ad impossibilia (the law does not compel the impossible). These maxims have been explained in Black on "Interpretation of Laws", 2nd Edition at pages 119 to 120. A statute is never to be understood as requiring an impossibility, if such a result can be avoided by any fair and reasonable construction. The law itself and the administration of it, must yield to that to which everything must bend — to necessity. The law, in its most positive and peremptory injunctions, is understood to disclaim as it does in its general aphorisms, all intention of compelling them to impossibilities; and the administration of law must adopt that general exception in the consideration of all particular cases. The law is not so unreasonable as to require the performance of impossibilities as a condition to the assertion of acknowledged rights..... 'Impossibility' is defined in law as that which, in the constitution and course of nature or of the law, no man can do or perform. An Act is said to be 'physically' impossible when it is contrary to the course of nature; and such an impossibility may be either absolute, when it is impossible in any and every case, as involving a reversal of the order of nature, or it may be relative, when it arises from the circumstances of the particular case, as for example, for A to make a payment to B, the latter being dead. This is sometimes called 'impossibility in fact'. To this class belongs also what is called 'practical' impossibility, where the Act can indeed be done, but only at an excessive or unreasonable expenditure of time, labour, or money. Again, an Act is said to be 'legally' impossible, when a recognised law or rule of law makes it impossible, as for a minor to make a valid will; and this class of Acts must not be confounded with those which are possible, but forbidden by law, as to commit a crime. Lastly, an Act is sometimes said to be 'logically' impossible when it is contrary to the nature of the transaction or involves a contradiction of terms; for instance, when A gifts property to B expressly for the latter's own benefit, but on condition that he shall transfer it to C.

34. Counsel for the petitioner has strongly relied on the above principles and has urged that the presumption against impossibility should be invoked for a proper construction of Section 17-B. And the provision therein that the application under the section has to be made within sixty days of the August 26, 1967, (when the Act itself was assented to on the March 26, 1968) should be construed to be a logical impossibility.

35. Learned counsel also relied on Allen in 'Law in the Making', 7th Edition, at page 462, where the same principles have been briefly discussed. Allen says: "A Statutory rule may be perfectly reasonable and practicable in its general application, but in a particular instance, owing to inevitable circumstances, it may be impossible for an individual to comply with it. The maxim Lex non cogit ad impossibilia then applies. A Statute will not be construed as imposing on an individual a duty which it was not reasonably possible for him to perform."

36. Mr. Bhabra also relied on the observation of Lord Denman, C. J. in Green v. Wood, (1845) 115 ER 455 at page 458, which reads:

"We are bound to give to the words of the legislature all possible meaning which is consistent with the clear language used. But, if we find language used which is incapable of a meaning, we cannot supply one....."

37. Our attention was also drawn to Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edition, at page 326, which says: "Enactments which impose duties upon conditions are, when these are not construed as conditions precedent to the exercise of a jurisdiction, subject to the maxim that Lex non cogit ad impossibilia. They are understood as dispensing with the performance of what is prescribed when performance of it is impossible."

38. The case of Harding v. Price, (1948) 1 KB 695, was then cited. The facts were that a trailer attached to a lorry collided with and damaged a stationary car while passing it. It was found as a fact that the driver of the lorry because of the noise the trailer was making did not know of the accident. He therefore did not stop or report the accident to the police as required by Section 22 of the Road Traffic Act, 1930. The Court has held that if a statute contained an absolute prohibition against the doing of an act, as a general rule mens rea was not a constituent of the offence; but there was for this purpose a difference between a statutory provision prohibiting an act and one imposing a duty to do something on the happening of an event. The driver could not report something of which he had no knowledge, and therefore he was not guilty of the offence.

39. The next case which Mr. Bhabra cited was the case of the Queen v. The Justices of Leicestershire, (1850) 117 ER 391. After an order in bastardy had been made, the putative father, intending to appeal, entered into a recognizance, according to stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c 10, s 3, and, on the same day, sent notice of his having done so by post to the woman. When the appeal came on to be tried, it was proved that the woman had died before the notice to her was posted; and the Sessions being of opinion that a condition imposed by stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c 10, s 3, as preliminary to an appeal had not been complied with, refused to hear the appeal. It was held, on demurrer to the return to a mandamus to enter continuance and hear the appeal, that performance of the condition imposed by law having by the act of God become impossible, its performance was excused; and a peremptory mandamus was awarded.

40. In the instant case these authorities are not apposite. We have already indicated that the history of the legislation, we are dealing with, does not suggest that the legislature was prescribing an impossibility. In fact, the legislature never intended to confer any right other than the right given by Ordinance No. VI of 1967. By this Ordinance the legislature introduced various sections into the principal Act including Section 17-C which has now become Section 17-B. The legislature's intention was to produce a situation in which the West Bengal Tenancy Act would contain these new provision as if the 1967 Ordinance was an Act.

41. A Special Bench of this Court in Tarak Chandra v. Ratanlal Ghosal, 61 Cal WN 263 = (AIR 1957 Cal 257 (SB)), has elaborately discussed what happens when a temporary Act is repealed. It was laid down that the general rule was that unless it contained some special provisions to the contrary, a temporary Act ceased to have any further effect after it had expired. The Special Bench said that no proceedings could be taken under it any longer. And proceedings already taken and pending also terminated automatically as soon as the temporary Act expired. The Special Bench was considering the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 which was limited in duration up to the 31st March, 1956. Before the judgment was delivered the West Bengal Legislature introduced new provisions for "Repeal and Savings" by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1956. The expressions used in the new provisions were subjected to severe criticism and Chakravarti, C. J. at Page 292, after coming to the conclusion that the new provisions had saved pending proceedings, observed:

"I am sensible that the construction I am adopting does not lie on the surface of the section and indeed involves some strain on its language. But the language is not wholly incapable of bearing the construction....."

42. It seems to us that this is the reason why the provisions, inter alia, of Section 17-B in the same form as they were in the West Bengal Ordinance No. VI of 1967 have been introduced again and again in the enactments that followed in addition to the saving provisions we have referred to. The legislative authorities were anxious that the right given to a tenant under Ordinance No. VI of 1967 and the proceedings commenced thereunder should not die with the expiry of the Ordinance. And they never intended to give to the tenant a higher or a larger or greater right.

43. The date of commencement of the West Bengal Ordinance No. VI of 1967 is the 26th August, 1967. The application under Section 17-C (which became Section 17-B in the later Statutes) had to be made within a period of 60 days from the commencement of this Ordinance. On November 29, 1967, the West Bengal Legislature had a session; but the Ordinance of 1967 was not converted into an Act. On January 9, 1968, the Ordinance of 1967 was to expire. That is why, a day earlier on January 8, 1968, another Ordinance was promulgated and it was called "The West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Second Ordinance, 1968. (West Bengal Ordinance No. II of 1968); but this Ordinance did not make any changes as to the provisions for making an application under the relevant section. The Ordinance of 1968 was followed by President's Act No. 4 of 1968 which was known as the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968. Section 17-B of this Act is a repetition of the provisions of Section 17-C of Ordinance No. VI of 1967. Moreover, sub-section (2) of Sec. 1 of this Act makes it abundantly clear that the Act "shall be deemed to have come into force on the 26th day of August, 1967" which is the date of commencement of Ordinance No. VI of 1967. Lastly, we have the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act of 1969 which is an Act to re-enact the provisions of President's Act 4 of 1968; but the 1969 Act also does not introduce any changes either in Section 1 (2) or in Section 17-B. The history of this legislation, therefore, leads us to the inevitable conclusion that the legislative authorities were consciously re-enacting the relevant provisions of 1967 Ordinance in the subsequent Acts and Ordinances just to keep alive the rights that were given to a tenant under the 1967 Ordinance. We are, therefore, of opinion that the commencement of President's Act 4 of 1968 accordingly is August 26, 1967 as mentioned in Section 1 (2) thereof and that an application under Section 17-B (1) could be made within a period of sixty days only from the August 26, 1967. No other date, in our view, has any relevance to the applicability of this section. We do not also agree that the maxim "Lex non cogit ad impossibilia" applies to S. 17-B (1).

44. The next question that arises for our consideration is whether the reference to sixty days in Section 17-B (1) is a period of limitation. If it is a period of limitation, then the provisions in Section 5 of the Limitation Act or provisions analogous thereto may be invoked to save an application made beyond that period. Mr. Ginwalla for the opposite party contends that this is not a period of limitation. His point is that limitation merely bars the remedy and not the right. Section 17-B, according to him, does not confer an unlimited right which is barred by limitation. The only right, says learned counsel, which Section 17-B confers, is a limited right exercisable within a certain period. In Section 17-B (1) Mr. Ginwalla points out, the expression "within a period of sixty days from such commencement" is sandwiched between the words "may" and "make". In all the Acts and Ordinances to which our attention has been drawn in this Rule the same juxtaposition of words, occurs.

45. Mr. Ginwalla drew our attention to the differences between the language used in Section 17-A and Section 17-B on the one hand and Section 17 (2B) on the other. The language in Sections 17-A and 17-B are almost the same. But Section 17 (2B) opens with the words "no application for extension of time for the deposit or payment of any amount under clause (a) of sub-section (2A) shall be entertained unless it is made before the expiry of the time specified therefor in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2),.....". According to Mr. Ginwalla this expression prescribes a period of limitation; but when a period is sandwiched between an auxiliary verb and a verb (like "may" and "make") it is not a period of limitation. The adverbial clause "within a period of sixty days of such commencement" only limits the action of the verb. From this point of view Section 17-B (1) merely confers a limited right and as soon the period passes away, says Mr. Ginwalla, the right disappears or is exhausted.

46. Now, Section 39 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, is as follows:—

"Subject to the provisions in this Act relating to limitation, all the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, shall apply to suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act."

47. One of the sections of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 is Section 5 which runs thus:

"Any appeal or application for a review of judgment or for leave to appeal or any other application to which this section may be made applicable by or under any enactment for the time being in force may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal or making the application within such period."

"Explanation— The fact that the appellant or applicant was misled by an order, practice or judgment of the High Court in ascertaining or computing the prescribed period of limitation may be sufficient cause within the meaning of this section."

48. Mr. Ginwalla's argument before us is that Section 17-B (1) does not prescribe any period of limitation; it merely gives a right which subsists for a limited period which may be aptly called a 'limited right.' Assuming, says Mr. Ginwalla, this is a period of limitation. Section 5 of the Limitation Act has no application to it because the Tenancy Act itself prescribes the period for the making of an application under Section 17-B. Mr. Ginwalla has drawn our attention to Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, 1963 which says, inter alia, that when any special or local law prescribes a period of limitation different from the period prescribed in the Limitation Act the provisions of Sections 4 to 24 shall apply in so far as, and to the extent to which, these provisions are not expressly excluded by such special or local law. Mr. Ginwalla submitted that if the intention of the framers of the Tenancy Act was to attract to its provisions, Section 5 of the Limitation Act, they would not have introduced Section 39 into their own Act. The provisions of Section 39, according to Mr. Ginwalla, expressly excludes the operation of Sections 4 to 24 of the Limitation Act.

49. We shall deal with this argument of Mr. Ginwalla at the appropriate time. But at the moment we only intend, incidentally, to point out that Section 39 of the Tenancy Act speaks of the provisions not of the Limitation Act of 1963 but of the Limitation Act of 1908. And in the latter Act Section 5 was not included in Section 29 (2).

50. Our attention was also drawn to an unreported judgment of A. N. Ray, J. and Bagchi, J. in National Traders v. Dr. Lalit Mohan Roy, (A. F. O. D. No. 689 of 1963) decided on 19-3-1969 (Cal). In this judgment it has been stated that Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an application under Section 17 (2-A) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Ray, J. has inter alia, observed: "Section 5 of the Limitation Act relates to an extension of time in matters dealt with by the Limitation Act. These provisions (that is the provisions of the Tenancy Act) do not come within the purview of the Limitation Act." These observations appear to be obiter dicta. At page 31 of the judgment of Bagchi, J. we find that the Learned Judge has stated:

"To understand the meaning of the expression 'the Court' in the provisions of the sections and sub-sections we have discussed, we have analysed and considered all such sections and sub-sections and we have come to this conclusion that the expression 'the Court' in the sections and sub-sections, we have analysed and considered, relates to the Court, not of appeal, but of first instance."

51. The position, therefore, is that Ray and Bagchi, JJ. were of opinion that an application under Section 17 (2-A) was not maintainable before the Appeal Court but had to be made before the Trial Court. After arriving at this conclusion the Learned Judges proceeded to make observations on the applicability of the Limitation Act. It is clear, therefore, that anything said in this judgment about limitation is obiter dictum. We may, in this connection, refer to the Privy Council's judgment in Shankarlal v. Hira Lal, AIR 1950 PC 80. The Privy Council has said that if the Court holds that the suit is not maintainable by reason of failure to comply with notice under Section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, findings given on merits are obiter and do not support the plea of res judicata either in favour of or against a party. Allen in his "Law in the Making" at page 261 has quoted the observations of Lord Sterndale, M. R. in Slack v. Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society, (1923) 1 Ch 431 (CA). These observations are as follows:—

"Dicta are of different kinds and of varying degrees of weight. Sometimes they may be called almost casual expressions of opinion upon a point which has not been raised in the case, and is not really present to the judge's mind. Such dicta, though entitled to the respect due to the speaker, may fairly be disregarded by judges before whom the point has been raised and argued in a way to bring it under fuller consideration. Some dicta, however, are of a different kind; they are, although not necessary for the decision of the case, deliberate expressions of opinion given after consideration upon a point clearly brought and argued before the Court. It is open, no doubt, to other judges to give decisions contrary to such dicta, but much greater weight attaches to them than to the former class."

52. According to Mr. Bhabra, the Division Bench's observations on limitation in National Traders case, A. F. O. D. No. 689 of 1963, D/- 19-3-1969 (Cal), are dicta of the former kind as it does not appear from the judgment that all relevant matters were placed before the learned Judges concerned. There is, for instance, no reference to any arguments advanced on the basis of Section 39 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. In our view whether the dicta are of the former or the latter kind they are not binding on us and we are free to decide to the contrary if we are convinced that Section 5 of the Limitation Act applies to Section 17-B of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956.

53. What, after all, is the Law of Limitation? A Law of Limitation limits the time after which a suit, or other proceedings cannot be maintained in any Court of Justice. In other words, a Law of Limitation limits or prescribes a time at the end of which persons liable to sue shall become exempt from answering therein: vide U. N. Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription, 6th Edition at page 1.

54. Now, Section 17-B (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956

prescribes a period of sixty days from the 26th August, 1967, after which an application under the section cannot be maintained. It seems to us that a provision of this nature cannot but be a period of limitation. The distinction which Mr. Ginnwalla drew between the languages used in Sections 17 (2A) and 17 (2B) on the one hand and the language of Section 17-B (1) on the other appears to be more verbal than substantive. These are merely ways of describing the same thing differently. In this context we have to appreciate the provisions of Section 39 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. This section applies the whole of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 to the Tenancy Act subject to the provisions in the Tenancy Act relating to limitation. The provisions in the Indian Limitation Act are, broadly speaking, of two types. There are provisions prescribing periods within which suits or proceedings are to be instituted. Secondly, there are also provisions regarding the computation of such periods including those relating to enlargements of such periods in appropriate cases.

55. We have already referred to Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, 1963 on which Mr. Ginnwalla had relied. The effect of these provisions is that Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act would apply to a special or local law unless expressly excluded by such law. Before Section 5 was brought within the purview of Section 29 (2), the expression "expressly excluded" was construed in several decisions. For instance, in Sati Prosad v. Gobinda Chandra, AIR 1929 Cal 325 at p 327, Cuming, J. (sitting with Mallik, J.) has observed: "By the expression 'expressly' I think it is meant that express reference is made to the specific section in the Act; and that unless such reference is made to the section and by that reference they are expressly excluded, then they would apply." Two other Calcutta cases support the same view. In District Board Chittagong v. Emdadal Hoque, AIR 1940 Cal 305, Henderson, J. had to consider whether the provisions of Section 146 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act, 1885 excluded the application of Section 15 (2) of the Limitation Act. The wording of the relevant portion of Section 146 was as follows:—

"Every such action shall be commenced within three months next after the accrual of the cause of action and not afterwards."

56. It was argued before the learned Judge that the words "and not afterwards" amounted to express exclusion. Henderson, J. has followed the Division Bench's decision in AIR 1929 Cal 325 (supra) and has held that these words do not constitute express exclusion and Section 15 (2) of the Limitation Act applied to Section 146 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act.

57. Biswas, J. took the same view with reference to the relevant provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act in Comms. of Pabna Municipality v. Nirode Sundari, AIR 1942 Cal 544.

58. The High Court at Pepsu in Mukandi Ram v. Executive Engineer, Sangrur Circle, AIR 1956 Pepsu 40 has also taken the same view. In para 8 of the judgment at p. 43 it has been observed with reference to Section 29 of the Limitation Act that the exclusion must be by express words, that is by express reference to the section and not exclusion as a result of logical process of reasoning.

59. It may be noted that Sec. 39 of the Tenancy Act has stated that all the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 shall apply to suits, appeals and proceedings under the Tenancy Act subject to the provisions in the Tenancy Act relating to limitation. Section 29 (2) of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 ran thus:

"Where any special or local law prescribes for any suit, appeal or application a period of limitation different from the period prescribed therefor by the first Schedule the provisions of Section 3 shall apply, as if such period were prescribed therefor in that Schedule, and for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law—

(a) the provisions contained in Sec. 4, Sections 9 to 18, and Section 22 shall apply only in so far as, and to the extent to which, they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law; and

(b) the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply."

60. Now, clause (b) of Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, 1908, expressly provided that apart from the provisions mentioned in clause (a) "the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply." The expression "the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply" in Section 29 (2) (b) of the Limitation Act, 1908, has been construed to mean that the remaining provisions of the Act shall not apply of their own force unless they are expressly made applicable by the special or local Act: vide Madhorao v. Balaji, AIR 1926 Nag 236.

61. Under the provisions of Section 8 (1) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, reference to the Limitation Act, 1908 in the Tenancy Act is to be read as reference to the Limitation Act, 1963; vide Ram Prosad v. Bijoy Kumar, 69 Cal WN 921 = (AIR 1966 Cal 488). Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, 1963, provides:

"Where any special or local law prescribes for any suit, appeal or application, a period of limitation different from the period prescribed by the Schedule, the provisions of Section 3 shall apply as if such periods were the periods prescribed by the Schedule and for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law, the provisions contained in Sections 4 to 24 inclusive shall apply only in so far as, and to the extent to which they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law."

62. Far from express exclusion of above sections, in our case, Section 39 of the Tenancy Act has expressly made all the provisions of the Limitation Act, 1908 applicable to the Tenancy Act subject to periods of limitation mentioned in the Tenancy Act itself. This clear invocation to all the provisions of the Limitation Act of 1908, in our opinion, attracts the provisions of Section 5 of that Act to the appropriate provisions of the Tenancy Act including Section 17-B (1). The intention of the legislature, it seems to us, has always been that Section 5 could be availed of in suitable cases.

63. My learned brother has taken the same view with reference to other sub-sections of Section 17 in Mrs. Gouri Bose v. Sukumar Ghose, (1971) 75 Cal WN 342.

64. There is another judgment of S. C. Ghose, J. in Rajputana Trading Co. Private Ltd. v. Malaya Trading Agency, AIR 1971 Cal 313. Ghose, J. is of opinion that the provisions "relating to limitation" contained in Section 17 of the West Bengal Tenancy Act, 1956 are not contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act and Section 5 can, in proper cases, be applied to Section 17 of the Tenancy Act. But Ghose, J. felt bound by a judgment of R. M. Datta, J. in Suit No. 829 of 1966 (Cal) (Jatindra Nath Samanta v. M/s. Rash Behari Dutta & Co.) and held that Section 5 was not attracted to an application for extension of time to deposit rent under Section 17 (2A) of the Tenancy Act, the view of R. M. Datta, J., as we have already indicated, we are unable to accept.

65. Let us now examine whether the petitioner has shown sufficient cause for condoning the delay in making its application under Section 17-B (1). We have already referred to the statements in paragraph 14 of the petition. The sum and substance of the paragraph is that the petitioner on April 9, 1969, was for the first time advised by Mr. A. K. Dutta, senior advocate, that an application under Section 17-B should be made and, on the April 11, 1969, the petitioner applied to the Trial Court under Section 17-B as also under Section 5 of the Limitation Act. In Paragraph 15 of the petition it is stated that the application under Section 17-B could not be made within time owing to "bona fide misapprehension of the legal position and the facts and circumstances as aforesaid."

66. Our task in this application is to decide whether these statements constitute "sufficient cause" within the meaning of Section 5 of the Limitation Act. Mr. Bhabra for the petitioner, submits that Section 17-B is worded in an abstruse manner. It is not a case of the litigant's negligence but a case of default owing to cumbersome wording of the statute. Reliance is placed on the Supreme Court's observations in Ramlal v. Rewa Coal Fields Ltd., AIR 1962 SC 361. In para 7 of its judgment at p. 363 the Supreme Court observes:

"In construing Section 5 it is relevant to bear in mind two important considerations. The first consideration is that the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for making an appeal gives rise to a right in favour of the decree-holder to treat the decree as binding between the parties. In other words, when the period of limitation prescribed has expired the decree-holder has obtained a benefit under the Law of Limitation to treat the decree as beyond challenge, and this legal right which has accrued to the decree-holder by lapse of time should not be light-heartedly disturbed. The other consideration which cannot be ignored is that if sufficient cause for excusing delay is shown discretion is given to the Court to condone delay and admit the appeal. This discretion has been deliberately conferred on the Court in order that judicial power and discretion in that behalf should be exercised to advance substantial justice."

67. These principles are well-settled. And Mr. Bhabra's contention is that in the instant case there has been no negligence, no inaction, no abence of bona fides on the part of the petitioner. The language of the statute is not clear and that would be the justification, according to Mr. Bhabra, for condoning the delay in making the application. When a statute is doubtful, says Mr. Bhabra, the doctrine of ignorantia juris neminem excusat does not apply.

68. In support of his proposition learned counsel cited several authorities. In Earl Beauchamp v. Winn, (1873) 6 HL (English and Irish Appeals) 223 at p. 234, it has been held that the rule ignorantia juris neminem excusat applies where the alleged ignorance is that of a well-known rule of law, but not where it is that of a matter of law arising upon the doubtful construction of a grant. In the latter case it is not decisively a ground for refusing relief. This case is not an authority on the principles enacted in Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act. It is a case of private rights arising out of a Deed of Grant and both parties were under a mistake. Equitable relief was sought against mutual mistake and the Court said that where, in the making of an agreement between two parties, there has been a mutual mistake as to their rights, occasioning an injury to one of them, the rule of equity is in favour of interposing to grant relief.

69. The next case of Mr. Bhabra is the case of Seaton v. Seaton, (1888) 13 AC 61. This is also a decision of the House of Lords. In this case the construction of certain provisions of the Infants' Settlement Act, 1855 had arisen and Lord FitzGerald at pages 77 to 78 has explained the maxim ignorantia juris non excusat. Lord FitzGerald has said that the true meaning of the maxim is that parties cannot excuse themselves from liability from all civil or criminal consequences of their acts by alleging ignorance of the law, but there is no presumption that the parties must be taken to know all the legal consequences of their acts, and especially where difficult questions of law, or of the practice of the Court are involved.

70. Whether or not the doctrine of ignorantia juris non excusat applies depends therefore to a certain extent on how simple the law is. If, for instance, the law which is violated involves difficult questions of construction or of the practice of the Court ignorance of law may be excused. In our case we do not find the complications envisaged by the House of Lords. Here, there were only two possible arguments. One argument was that the application under S. 17-B had to be made within sixty days of the 26th August 1967. The other argument was that the application had to be made within sixty days of the 26th March, 1968; but the tenant, in the instant case, did not come with his application within any of these periods. And Mr. Bhabra's contention that there is no period of limitation appears to us to be untenable. Moreover, neither in Paragraph 14 nor in Paragraph 15 of the petition is it stated that the petitioner was under a misapprehension as to the date within which an application under Section 17-B (1) was to be made. On the contrary, the clear trend of these paragraphs is that the petitioner was all along wholly ignorant of the rights conferred on a tenant by Section 17-B.

71. Mr. Bhabra also referred us to an obiter dictum of Pickford, J. in Gregory v. Torquay Corporation, (1911) 2 KB 556 at p. 559. The dictum is: "If a statute conferred a new right of action and also prescribed a limited time within which that right of action might be enforced, it may be that it could not be properly called a statute of limitations."

72. In the instant case this dictum need not be considered by us. We are clearly of opinion, for reasons stated above, that the Legislature's intention was that all applications under Section 17-B (1) should be made within sixty days of the 26th August, 1967. But if the petitioner's case is that its delay in making the application should be condoned inasmuch as the petitioner was under the impression that the "period of sixty days from such commencement" was not a period of limitation, the petitioner should have made a specific statement to this effect while giving his reasons for not making the application within time. No such statement has been made either in Paragraph 14 or in Paragraph 15 of the petition.

73. The position, therefore, is that the petitioner's explanation for delay in making the application under Section 17-B (1) is "bona fide misapprehension of legal position" and this misapprehension, according to the petitioner, was removed by the opinion of Mr. A. K. Dutt which the petitioner obtained on April 9, 1969. This is not a case of mistake of law arising out of wrong legal advice but a case of ignorance of law arising from not taking any legal advice on the petitioner's rights under Section 17-B till the April 9, 1969. The question is whether this is a sufficient cause within the meaning of Section 5 of the Limitation Act.

74. The Bombay High Court in Sitaram v. M. N. Nagrahna, AIR 1954 Bom 537, has discussed to some extent the problem we have been called upon to resolve in this case. The Bombay High Court says that there is a distinction between ignorance of law and mistake of law. Ignorance of law is ignorance of the rights of a party which the law confers upon him. Mistake of law is mistake in establishing those rights by, for instance, going to one forum instead of another. The party knows his rights, he wants to assert them, and establish them, but through mistake in understanding the provisions of the law goes to a wrong forum instead of going to the forum which the law has set up for the determination of his rights. In cases where there is a mistake of law, the Courts have almost uniformly taken the view that the time taken up by asserting the right in a wrong Court or wrong forum should be excused and the Courts have largely been influenced by the principle underlying Section 14 of the Limitation Act; but ignorance of law has been held to be not only no excuse but also no sufficient cause for failing to assert a party's rights in the forum established by law. The Bombay High Court is of opinion that the words "sufficient cause" in Section 5 of the Limitation Act should receive a liberal construction so as to advance substantial justice when neither negligence nor inaction nor want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant. Therefore, if a party be guilty of negligence or bad faith, no relief can be given under Section 5 of the Limitation Act. He should not also be guilty of inaction. And when a party does not choose to bestir himself because he is ignorant of his rights, he is clearly in law guilty of inaction.

75. Now, what are the facts of this case. The petitioner before us took part in all kinds of proceedings in the Trial Court, before the Additional District Judge, Seventh Court, Alipore as also in a second appeal to this Court. The petitioner even made an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court when its second appeal was dismissed; but there was total inaction on its part so far as an application under Section 17-B (1) was concerned owing to ignorance of its rights under that section. And inaction of this nature cannot be condoned by a Court of law by exercising its powers under Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act.

76. Mr. Bhabra, learned counsel for the petitioner, submits that it is true that mere ignorance of the law cannot be recognised as a sufficient reason for delay under Section 5 of the Limitation Act. But this rule of law, says Mr. Bhabra, has also its limitations. In Sitaram v. Nimba, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 320, A obtained a decree against B as the heir and legal representative of his deceased uncle C. The decree directed that the amount adjudged should be recovered from C's assets in the hands of B. In execution of this decree certain property was attached. B claimed this property as his own and sought to remove the attachment, but the Court passed an order confirming the attachment on November 20, 1880. In 1881 B filed a regular suit to set aside this order. The suit was dismissed in 1885, as barred by Section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Thereupon B filed an appeal from the order in execution made on the 20th November, 1880. This appeal was rejected as time-barred. The Bombay High Court has held that the time spent in the actual proceedings in the suit to set aside the order in execution might be deducted in computing the delay that occurred before the appeal was filed. But the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the time that intervened between the date of the order appealed against and the date of filing the suit inasmuch as mere ignorance of law was not an excuse for the delay for that would be putting a premium on ignorance.

77. Mr. Bhabra contends that the above case is a case of "mere ignorance" and the principle laid down therein has no general application. He has cited the case of Dadabhai Jamsetji v. Maneksha Sorabji, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 552, which says that the presentation of an appeal to a wrong Court under a bona fide mistake may be "sufficient cause" within the meaning of Section 5 of the Limitation Act. Learned counsel has also referred to the case of Krishna Mohan Ghosh v. Surapati Banerjee, AIR 1925 Cal 684 (1). In this case the appellant was an ignorant milkman without any previous experience of litigation and pleaded ignorance of his duty to substitute the legal representative of the deceased respondent though he was warned of the respondent's death. The Calcutta High Court has held that in the circumstances of the case, the delay was bona fide and that sufficient cause was shown within the meaning of Section 5. Apart from the fact that this was a case of bona fide mistake not arising out of any laches or negligence, it is to be observed that here there was no question of asserting any right but merely the duty of substituting the legal representative of a deceased respondent.

78. To sum up the position we may observe that there may be extenuating circumstances justifying the application of Section 5 of the Limitation Act when a party is ignorant of his rights; but such circumstances are, indeed, rare. For instance, in the present case if the petitioner had stated that it was under the impression that there was no period of limitation for an application under Section 17-B (1) owing to the impossibility of applying the relevant provisions, the petitioner's case under Section 5 might have deserved careful consideration; but as we have pointed out, the only ground appears to be that the lawyers who were conducting the petitioner's case before the trial Court, the first appeal Court and the second appeal Court never advised the petitioner as to its rights under Section 17-B until the petitioner came to Mr. A. K. Dutt. A plea of this nature, is, in our opinion, a plea of mere ignorance of law arising out of the petitioner's neglect or failure to seek proper legal advice. On this plea we would not be justified in excusing the petitioner's delay under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.

79. In the result, this Rule is discharged. The interim order is vacated. There will be no order as to costs.

Where the defendant both in the written statement and in his petition of objection to application under Section 17 (3) denies the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and himself the Court is bound to decide that issue first before passing an order under sub-section (3). This is, so notwithstanding the fact that the defendant did not raise the dispute by way of an application under Section 17 (2). ORDER.— This Rule is directed against order No. 58 dated February 2, 1971, passed by the learned Munsif, Second Court, Midnapur, in a proceeding under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. By the said order the learned Munsif struck out the defence of the petitioner against delivery of possession.

2. The opposite party filed the suit for ejectment against the petitioner on the ground of default in payment of rent and also on the ground of reasonable requirement. It was alleged by the opposite party that the petitioner failed to pay rent since September 1966. Further, it was alleged by the opposite party that the deposit of rent made by the petitioner with the Rent Controller since November, 1967 and also the deposit made by the petitioner in Court after entering appearance in the suit, were all invalid deposits. The petitioner did not make any application under Section 17 (2) of the Act.

3. The defence of the petitioner was, that he paid rent to the husband of the opposite party upto October 1967, but no receipt was granted by him. Since November 1967, the petitioner had been depositing rent with the Rent Controller as the husband of the opposite party refused to accept rent remitted by him by postal money-order. The petitioner denied that he was a defaulter as alleged by the opposite party. The further defence of the petitioner was that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the opposite party and the petitioner. The case that was made out by the petitioner in his written statement was that the plaintiff's husband Bhupendra Nath Karmakar executed an agreement of tenancy describing him as the landlord of the suit premises and collected rent from the petitioner. The petitioner denied that the deposits made by him with the Rent Controller were invalid deposits.

4. The opposite party made an application under Section 17 (3) praying for striking out the defence of the petitioner against delivery of possession. The petitioner opposed the said application by filing a petition of objection thereto. In his petition of objection, the petitioner challenged the ownership of the opposite party in respect of the suit premises and denied the relationship of landlord and tenant between the opposite party and the petitioner. The petitioner also denied that he was a defaulter in payment of rent as alleged by the opposite party.

5. At the hearing of the application under Section 17 (3), the opposite party examined her husband Bhupendra Nath Karmakar. Bhupendra Nath Karmakar in his evidence admitted that the written agreement was signed by him on September 22, 1963. That agreement is an agreement of tenancy and Bhupendra Nath Karmakar was described as the landlord. The witness further stated that there was no other agreement except the said agreement which he signed.

6. The learned Munsif came to the findings that the petitioner was a defaulter in payment of rent and that the deposits made by the petitioner with the Rent Controller were invalid deposits. Upon these findings, the learned Munsif struck out the defence of the petitioner against delivery of possession. The learned Munsif was of the view that the plea of absence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties could not be agitated by the petitioner in the proceeding under Section 17 (3) inasmuch as the petitioner did not raise that defence by an application under Section 17 (2) of the Act.

7. The only point that was argued by Mr. Ghosh, the learned Advocate for the petitioner is, that the learned Munsif should have considered the defence of the petitioner that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the opposite party and the petitioner. It has been already stated that the petitioner has specifically taken that defence in his written statement. In the petition of objection to the application under Section 17 (3), the petitioner has also taken that defence by way of objection to the plaintiff's application under Section 17 (3). Mr. Ghosh drew my attention to Order No. 39, dated June 19, 1970, passed by the learned Munsif. By that order the learned Munsif overruled the contention made on behalf of the petitioner that before hearing the application under Section 17 (3), the learned Munsif should dispose of the dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the opposite party and the petitioner. The sole reason given by the learned Munsif for overruling the said contention was that the said dispute should have been raised by an application under Section 17 (2) within the prescribed period.

8. Section 17 uses the expression 'any dispute as to the amount of rent'. In a Bench decision in Biswanath Roy v. Annapurna Roy, (1961) 65 Cal WN 149, P. N. Mookerjee, J. held that any kind of dispute which affects the amount of rent payable by the tenant including a dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, will be a dispute under or within the contemplation of Section 17 (2). It has also been held in that decision that the dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties does affect the question of rent, payable by a tenant to a particular landlord, and in that view of the matter, in a case, where such a dispute has been raised, unless and until the Court has decided and determined that dispute and made an appropriate order under Section 17 (2), no question of striking out of the defence against delivery of possession under Section 17 (3) can arise, provided, of course, that the said dispute is a bona fide one, as, otherwise the said sub-section (2) would not be attracted.

9. Strong reliance was placed on this decision by Mr. Basu, the learned Advocate for the opposite party. It was contended by Mr. Basu that in view of the said decision, the tenant has to raise the dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant by an application under Section 17 (2) and not otherwise. I am unable to accept this contention of Mr. Basu. All that has been laid down in that decision is that before striking out the defence against delivery of possession the Court should dispose of the dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. It may be that the dispute can be raised by, or in connection with, an application under Section 17 (2) of the Act. But it cannot be said that it has been laid down in that decision that the dispute has to be raised only by an application under Section 17 (2).

10. In a later Bench decision in Aloka Ghosh v. Inspector-General of Police, West Bengal, (1962) 66 Cal WN 302, P. N. Mookerjee, J. expressed the view that the question as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties may be either decided at the stage of the Section 17 (3) application, only prima facie and for purposes of the proceeding under Section 17 (3), leaving it open for a final decision at the time of hearing of the suit, or the Court may take up the issue upon that question along with the application under Section 17 (3) and decide the two together fully so that the decision on that issue will be final for purposes of the suit also.

11. In the instant case, the petitioner has denied the relationship of landlord and tenant and, as aforesaid, he has raised the defence both in the written statement as also in his petition of objection to the application under Section 17 (3). From the pleadings of the parties an issue arises as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. The implied effect of this denial of relationship is, that according to the petitioner the provision of the Act does not apply to the facts and circumstances of the case and that the Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree for eviction against the petitioner. In order to proceed further in the matter the Court must first of all decide whether there is relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. In case the Court finds that there is no such relationship between the parties, the Court will not have any jurisdiction to pass a decree for ejection. Therefore, in my opinion, it is incumbent upon the Court to first of all decide the issue as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant. The Court cannot either strike out the defence against delivery of possession or decree the suit without deciding the said issue as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant.

12. The view which I take finds support from a Bench decision of this Court in Tirthapati Sen v. Paresh Nath Sen, ILR (1967) 1 Cal 449. In that decision it has been held by A. C. Sen, J. that there is nothing in the Act which prevents the Court from first deciding the issue in the suit as to whether the defendant is the tenant of the plaintiff and thereafter, deciding the plaintiff's application under Section 17 (3) or from deciding both together; that in either case the Court cannot strike out the defence against delivery of possession on the ground that the defendant did not apply under Section 17 (2) within the prescribed time, even if the said issue is decided in favour of the tenant, and that moreover, the time prescribed for raising the dispute by the defendant under Section 17 (2) has no application to the plea taken by the defendant that he is not the tenant by way of objection to an application by the plaintiff under Section 17 (3). Most respectfully I agree with the aforesaid Bench decision. The learned Munsif was not justified in not considering the contention of the petitioner regarding the dispute as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant even at the time of hearing of the application under Section 17 (3). Before passing an order under Section 17 (3) the Court has to determine whether there is any such relationship, particularly in a case where such relationship has been denied. In my opinion, the learned Munsif acted illegally and with material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction in not considering the contention of the petitioner and deciding the dispute before striking out the defence of the petitioner against delivery of possession.

13. In the result, the order of the learned Munsif is set aside. The case is sent back to the learned Munsif and he is directed to first of all decide the issue as to the existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the opposite party and the petitioner and thereafter to dispose of the application of the opposite party under Section 17 (3). The Rule is made absolute. There will be no order as to costs in the Rule.

Case remanded.

ORDER:— This Rule is directed against an order striking out the defence of the defendant petitioner under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the Act).

2. A suit has been filed by the plaintiff (alleging that she is the owner by purchase of premises No. 13 Gangadhar Babu Lane Calcutta) for ejectment of the defendant who is in occupation of one ground floor room of the above premises at a monthly rental of Rs. 50/- as a tenant on the ground of default of payment of rent since May 1966 and on the further ground that the room is reasonably required by the plaintiff for building and rebuilding purposes and also for her own use and occupation. The defendant petitioner appeared and since then he is contesting the suit by filing written statement. He has also deposited rents for May 1966, October 1966 and July, 1969 within one month from the date of service of summons with an application under S. 17 (1) of the Act, with permission of the Court, together with statutory interest for the arrears.

3. On 19-6-70 the plaintiff has filed an application under Section 17 (3) of the Act for striking out the defence of the present petitioner against delivery of possession on the allegation that he has not paid any amount whatsoever on account of arrears of rent and also that he has not deposited the current rent. In the written statement one of the objections taken is that there is no relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the present petitioner which was also repeated in the objection filed by the present petitioner to oppose the application under Section 17 (3) of the Act. The trial Court found that the deposits already made with the permission of the Court were valid deposits but since he has neither deposited arrears of rent after May, 1966 nor has filed any application under Section 17 (2) raising any dispute as to arrears for the said months, although "it may be said that he has deposited, as stated by him in his written statement, all rents upto June, 1969 excepting May, 1966 to the credit of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest named Bilayet Hossain in the office of the Rent Controller," the trial Court refused to give any relief and struck out the written defence. This is how the petitioner felt aggrieved and obtained the present Rule.

4. Mr. Mukherjee says that it was the duty of the trial Court to decide the question raised by the petitioner both in his written statement and written objection against the application under Section 17 (3) of the Act relating to the absence of relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the petitioner before any order could be passed under Section 17 (3) on the application. Reliance is placed on a decision of this Court reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 149 (Biswanath Roy v. Annapurna Roy). Mr. Roy Choudhury appearing on behalf of the opposite party in repelling such contention, submits, in the first place, that having once admitted payment of rent in the name of the plaintiff under Section 17 (1) of the Act, the defendant petitioner was estopped from challenging the title of the plaintiff as his landlord. It is said that such deposit with an application under Section 17 (1) of the Act is a clear admission on the part of the tenant defendant that the plaintiff is his landlord.

5. In the second place his argument is that not having raised any dispute under Section 17 (2) of the Act, in any event, the defendant tenant is disentitled to raise any objection as to absence of relationship of landlord and tenant on an application made by the plaintiff under Section 17 (3) of the Act. In aid of his contention he relies on a Bench decision of this Court reported in ILR (1967) 1 Cal 449 (Tirthapati Sen v. Pares Nath Sen).

6. As regards the first contention I do not think that the question of estoppel or admission arises at all, for in spite of depositing the rent under Section 17 (1) of the Act, the defendant, under the Statute, is entitled to raise a dispute under Section 17 (2) of the Act within the time specified therein for determination of the amount of rent. It is now well-settled that the dispute will include amongst other things the question of absence of relationship of landlord and tenant. Such deposit of rent under Section 17 (1) again cannot operate as an admission within the meaning of Section 17 of the Indian Evidence Act for the amount supposed to be deposited in Court is not rent but "an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid,.....". This apart, for very same reason, that in spite of such deposit he is entitled to raise a dispute, clearly shows, that these deposits under Section 17 (1) cannot be used as an admission on the part of the tenant that the plaintiff is necessarily his landlord.

7. As regards the second contention of Mr. Roy Choudhury, it is clear from the decision in Tirthapati Sen's case (supra) that even on an application under Section 17 (3), it is the duty, nevertheless, of the Court to decide the issue as to whether there is the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, if it is raised. Mr. Roy Choudhury however submits that even so, the issue was not pressed but from the judgment itself there is nothing to indicate, although there is the written objection of the defendant, that the defendant did not press this issue at the hearing of the application.

8. Accordingly, both the contentions of Mr. Roy Choudhury fails. This, apart, it appears that the trial Court did not enter into the question as to whether the deposits of rent upto 1969 with the Rent Controller were valid deposits, though made in the name of Bilayet Hossain. In fact, there is nothing also to indicate from the judgment upon what materials the Court concluded that the tenant defendant was in arrears since May, 1966. Considering all these, it must be held that the order passed by the trial Court suffers from serious infirmities and cannot therefore be sustained as valid.

9. Accordingly, I set aside the order complained of and make the Rule absolute. The matter will now go back to the trial Court for a fresh decision of Section 17 (3) application in accordance with law and in the light of the observations made above.

10. There will be no order for costs. Let the records go down to the Court below without delay.

ANIL KUMAR SINHA, J.

Rabindra Nath Sinha Roy, Petitioner v. The Divisional Commissioner, Burdwan Division, at Chinsura and others, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 580 of 1970, D/- 9-12-1971.

Index Note: (A) West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 4 (2-A) (a) — Quarrying sand — Provision cannot apply where sands found on surface land during excavation of tank were allowed by owner to be removed by licensee for business purpose since there is no quarrying of sand in such case. (Para 7)

Kishore Mukherjee, Saktipada Mukherjee and Chitra Ranjan Mitra, for Petitioner; Aditya Narayan Roy, for Opposite Parties Nos. 1 to 3.

ORDER:— This Rule is directed against an order passed by the Divisional Commissioner in appeal modifying the order of the Additional District Magistrate, Estates Acquisition, Hooghly, imposing upon the petitioner fine for removing sands from his land.

2. The petitioner claims to be the owner of certain plots of land on a portion of which, it is alleged, he was under dire necessity of digging a tank. In course of excavation some sands came out which were kept on his own land not for the purpose of either selling or making any profit. Even then a case was started against the petitioner under sub-sections (2-A) and (2-B) of Section 4 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1956, which was introduced by amendment by West Bengal Land Reforms (Amendment) Act, 1966. The Additional District Magistrate, Estate Acquisition, who heard the case, imposed a fine of Rs. 1,500/-, but this fine of Rs. 1,500/- was reduced to Rs. 1,000/- on appeal before the Divisional Commissioner.

3. It appears that the Additional District Magistrate did not take any evidence of the parties, but merely on the report of the J.L.R.O. or other information received from sources which are also not disclosed, he was satisfied that the petitioner contravened the provisions of sub-section (2-A) of Section 4 of the Act by permitting another person to quarry sand from his holding for commercial purpose. I fail to see how without any evidence the Additional District Magistrate, who is under an obligation to act judicially, could have proceeded to decide the matter only on a report of the J.L.R.O. even without examining him. I also do not find any other evidence or the particulars of information stated to have been received by the Magistrate in deciding the case. In fact Mr. Roy, the learned Advocate for the opposite parties, very fairly submits before me that excepting the report of the J.L.R.O. he also does not find any evidence adduced for establishing the offence of the petitioner. It is one of the fundamental concepts of well established judicial procedure that finding arrived at by authorities acting judicially or quasi-judicially, must be based on some evidence. Here in the instant case, the report of the J.L.R.O. without examining him was clearly inadmissible and cannot be considered as evidence on record.

4. Although such is the position, the appellate authority did not consider this aspect of the matter at all, but it equally proceeded to penalise the petitioner without any evidence to show that the petitioner committed any offence within the meaning of sub-section (2-A) of Section 4 of the Act. It may be that he reduced the fine of Rs. 1,000/-, but that again was based not on any evidence, but purely on surmises and suspicions and his finding is "that during the alleged excavation of tank on those plots of land for whatever purposes it may be sands were found under the surface land and the appellant allowed the licensee Sri Rafique Sarkar to extract sand and to remove the same for business purpose without previous permission from the State Government under sub-section (2-A) of Section 4 of the Act." I think, to say the least of it, the appellate authority which was required to decide the question of fact, ought to have applied its mind to see whether there was any evidence adduced on behalf of the prosecution who was under a duty to establish its case against the petitioner by adducing sufficient and proper evidence. On the other hand, it appears that the appellate authority cast the onus upon the petitioner to prove that he was not guilty of the offence with which he was charged. It is stated that the appellant also could not conclusively prove that the sands extracted from the said plots of land were removed for his own use and were not permitted to be removed by any other person for any other purpose. I think both the Additional District Magistrate and the appellate authority utterly failed to make a judicial approach in taking its decision against the petitioner as they did so without any regard even to the elementary principle on burden of proof of criminal offence which lies heavily on the prosecution. In this view of the matter which I have taken, it is sufficient to dispose of this Rule.

5. But Mr. Mukherjee also has raised question involving construction of the sub-sections (2-A) and (2-B) of the Act. Sub-section (2-A) of Section 4 provides:

"(a) raiyat intending to quarry sand, or permit any person to quarry sand, from his holding.

(b) dig or use or permit any person to dig or use earth or clay of his holding for the manufacture of bricks or tiles, for any purpose, other than his own use shall make an application in Form AI for a permit for such quarrying or digging or use to the Additional District Magistrate through the Junior Land Reforms Officer of the area. A copy of the application shall be sent at the same time to the Sub-divisional Land Reforms Officer and to the Additional District Magistrate."

6. Sub-section (2-B) provides after amendment that "in case of offence being committed under sub-section (2-A) a fine not exceeding Rs. 2,000/- and where the breach is a continuing one a further fine not exceeding Rs. 50/- for each day is imposed.

7. On a fair reading of sub-section (2-A) it seems clear, there is thus distinction between clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (2-A) as the first clause concerns quarrying sand and the second clause deals with digging of earth or clay. The question, therefore, is in the instant case, whether the petitioner can at all be convicted for quarrying sand which is the case of the prosecution. It is found by the Divisional Commissioner that the petitioner was excavating the tank, but the reasons which led the Commissioner to hold that even then the petitioner was guilty of the offence, were that the sands were found on the surface land and the appellant allowed the licensee to extract sand and to remove the same for business purpose. I fail to see how this is so. If in course of excavating a tank some sands come out, as they must in almost all cases from the surface of the earth, clearly, that cannot mean quarrying of sand or permitting any person to quarry sand from one's own holding. If that construction is put to this section the result, in my view, would be disastrous. Digging or excavating tank become completely prohibited or at least such excavation of tank cannot be undertaken without previous permission of the State Government. In my view, that is neither the provision nor such can be the Intention of the legislature. It seems therefore clear that on the case made out against the petitioner, sub-section (2-A) of Section 4 or for the matter of that sub-section (2-B) which provides for imposition of fine, cannot have any application to the case of the petitioner. Considering the matter from both the aspects, it must be held that the impugned orders suffer from serious infirmities and must be struck down as invalid.

8. Accordingly, I set aside the orders and the Rule is made absolute. Fines, if paid, must be refunded to the petitioner.

9. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

Nurul Hoda and others, Appellants v. Amir Hasan and another, Respondents.

Appeal No. 112 of 1964, Suit No. 260 of 1945, D/- 31-7-1972.

Index Note:— (A) Letters Patent (Cal.), CL 15 — "Judgment" — Tests stated — An order setting aside abatement under O. 22, R. 9, Civil P. C. is not a 'judgment', as it does not relate to the merits of the dispute, but only a step towards final adjudication of the dispute and as such is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of CL 15 of the Letters Patent — (X-Ref:— Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 9). (Para 10)

Brief Note:— (A) The following tests should be applied in considering whether a particular order amounts to a 'judgment' or not, namely. (i) whether the order in question puts an end to the proceeding so far as the Court dealing with it is concerned, in which the order was sought and made, (ii) the order must involve determination of some right or liability affecting the merits, (iii) an adjudication or a decision, which is not anything more than a step towards obtaining the final adjudication on the merits of the dispute in the proceeding is not judgment within the meaning of Letters Patent, (iv) where the decision involves an adjudication on the question of limitation or jurisdiction of the Court, in certain cases, such decisions would amount to 'judgment'. (Para 7)

Applying the above tests to an order setting aside an abatement under O. 22, R. 9, Civil P. C., the order in question does not relate to the merits of the dispute. It is certainly a decision which affects the proceedings of the dispute but it is not a decision which affects the merits of the dispute, though the order in question puts an end to the particular application in which the order was sought for and obtained. In the aforesaid view of the matter it cannot be said that an order setting aside an abatement is a 'judgment' within the meaning of CL 15 of the Letters Patent. (Para 7)

A decision setting aside an abatement or refusing to set aside the abatement upon a particular view whether sufficient cause had been made out or not does not involve any question of jurisdiction, AIR 1957 Cal 727, Distinguished. (Para 8)

Nor does the order in question involve any question of limitation as such. Under the law of limitation time has been provided for making an application for bringing the heirs of the deceased defendant on record and time again has been provided for setting aside of the abatement by the Court on sufficient cause being shown. If, in a particular case, a Court sets aside abatement it does not in any way affect any right accrued to the defendant by virtue of the law of limitation. P. K. Das with Jayanta Mitra, for Appellants; B. K. Ghose with P. K. Roy and P. Khastgir, for Respondents.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.: On 16th February, 1945 suit No. 260 of 1945 was filed by the plaintiff, inter-alia, for a declaration that the partnership business of Haji Qudabux Mohammed Ibrahim stood dissolved on and from 16th February, 1945, in the alternative, for dissolution of the said partnership, for appointment of Receiver, accounts, enquiries, injunction and other reliefs. Messrs. N. C. Bural & Pyne were the Solicitors for the plaintiff at the time of the filing of this suit. On 6th of March, 1945 by an order in the said suit, the defendant, Zahir Hasan was appointed Receiver over the said partnership business. On 29th March, 1945 another suit being suit No. 507 of 1945 was filed by Nurul Hasan against his mother, brothers and sisters, inter alia, for partition and allotment in severalty of the properties and estates of Shaik Mohammed Ibrahim, since deceased. On 22nd May, 1945 by an order in suit No. 507 of 1945, Mr. P. K. Sen, Barrister-at-Law, was appointed Receiver of the estate and effects left by Shaik Mohammed Ibrahim, since deceased, including the said business and Zahir Hasan was thus discharged from further acting as Receiver of the said partnership firm. On 30th August, 1960 M/s. Pyne & Pyne became the plaintiff's Solicitors on dissolution of M/s. N. C. Bural & Pyne. On 23rd August, 1961 in suit No. 507 of 1945 the plaintiff obtained change from Messrs. Pyne & Pyne to Messrs. P. D. Himatsinka & Co. On 27th of September, 1961 when Mallick, J. was delivering judgment in suit No. 507 of 1945, Amir Hasan submitted certain alleged terms of settlement for being recorded, thereupon the learned Judge was pleased to adjourn delivering judgment to enable the said Amir Hasan to make application in the said suit for recording the terms of settlement. On 18th of April, 1962 the application made by Amir Hasan for recording the alleged terms of settlement was dismissed. On 11th May, 1962 Mallick, J. delivered the judgment in suit No. 507 of 1945, inter alia, declaring the shares of the sons and daughters of Sheikh Mohammed Ibrahim, since deceased, in the estate of the said deceased and directing a reference to ascertain the estate and effects of Sk. Mohammed Ibrahim. On 7th December, 1962 Nurul Hasan being defendant in suit No. 260 of 1945, died. Some time thereafter the plaintiff applied for and obtained an order of substitution dated 11th March, 1963 in appeal proceeding arising out of suit No. 507 of 1945. By 7th March, 1963, time to make application for substitution of the heirs of the deceased, defendant No. 1, expired. On 23rd March, 1963 the plaintiff instructed Messrs. P. D. Himatsinka & Co. to obtain change from Messrs. Pyne & Pyne. On 3rd April, 1963 Messrs. P. D. Himatsinka & Co. sent a Warrant of Attorney for consent signature of Messrs. Pyne & Pyne. On 5th April, 1963, Messrs. P. D. Himatsinka & Co. received back the said Warrant from Messrs. Pyne & Pyne with their consent signature. On 11th April, 1963 cause papers relating to the above suit were sent by Messrs. Pyne & Pyne to Messrs. P. D. Himatsinka & Co. On 6th of May, 1963 summons was taken out for the present application. On 27th June, 1963 an order was passed by A. N. Ray, J. setting aside the abatement, recording the death of Nurul Hasan and ordering amendment of the plaint by substitution of the names of the heirs and legal representatives of Nurul Hasan in the cause title of the plaint. The learned Judge did not give any reason in the order. On 29th April 1964 appeal No. 112 of 1964 was filed against the said order of A. N. Ray, J. dated 27th June 1963. The said appeal came up for hearing before a Division Bench of this Court consisting of Sinha, J. (as his Lordship then was) and A. C. Sen, J. A preliminary point arose in the said appeal, namely, whether an appeal lay against an order setting aside an abatement under Order 22, Rule 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In view of the conflict of decisions of this Court, Sinha, J. felt that this was a matter which should be decided by a Full Bench. In the premises under Chapter XXXI-A, Rule 1 of the Original Side of this Court, the appeal has been referred to this Full Bench.

2. Under the Code of Civil Procedure read with the Limitation Act by 7th March, 1963 the suit had abated against the deceased defendant. The plaintiff had 60 days from that date to make an application for setting aside the abatement by making out sufficient cause. The plaintiff had applied in time for setting aside the abatement in this case. It is, however, disputed that he had made out sufficient cause. That is a contention on the merits. The trial Court has set aside the abatement. The short question is, does an appeal lie from such an order? There is no dispute that under the Code there is no appeal provided. Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, 1865 provides appeal from "judgment". The question therefore, is can the order of the trial Judge in this case be described as "judgment" in terms of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent of 1865?

3. Innumerable decisions were cited at the Bar, dealing with the question whether a particular order is a "judgment" or not. It is not necessary to deal or discuss all of them here. Sometimes experience, sometimes logic has led the courts to take one or the other view. It will, however, be necessary to deal with three Supreme Court decisions, two of which deal with the meaning of the expression "judgment" in clauses of the Letters Patent of the High Courts and the other with the question of the nature of the order setting aside abatement. Counsel for the appellant relied very strongly on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Asrumati Devi v. Kumar Rupendra Deb, AIR 1953 SC 198. There the Supreme Court was considering the question whether an order for transfer of a suit under Cl. 13 of the Letters Patent, is a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 15. By Cl. 13 of the said Letters Patent the High Court had power to remove certain suits pending in courts within its jurisdiction to the High Court. It was held by the Supreme Court that such an order neither affected the merits of the controversy between the parties in the suit itself, nor did it terminate or dispose of the suit on any ground. An order for transfer, it was further observed, could not be placed in the same category as an order rejecting a plaint or one dismissing a suit on a preliminary ground.

4. Under clause 12 of the Letters Patent the High Court has jurisdiction to grant leave to file suit in the High Court, if part of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of the High Court. The High Court has right to revoke or rescind the leave granted. The Supreme Court held that there was a difference between an order refusing to rescind leave granted under clause 12 of the Letters Patent and the one under clause 13 directing the removal of a suit from one Court to another, and there was no good reason to hold that the principle applicable to one applied to the other also. The meaning of the expression 'judgment' was construed in the case of Justice of the Peace for Calcutta v. Oriental Gas Co., 8 Beng LR 433, and the Supreme Court in the aforesaid case of AIR 1953 SC 198 (supra) quoted the observations of the Chief Justice Sir Richard Couch to the following effect:

"We think that 'judgment' in Cl. 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability. It may be either final or preliminary, or interlocutory, the difference between them being that a final judgment determines the whole cause or suit, and a preliminary or interlocutory judgment determines only a part of it, leaving other matters to be determined".

"It cannot be said, therefore, that according to Sir Richard Couch every judicial pronouncement on a right or liability between the parties is to be regarded as a 'judgment' for in that case there would be any number of judgments in the course of a suit or proceeding, each one of which could be challenged by way of appeal. The judgment must be the final pronouncement which puts an end to the proceeding so far as the Court dealing with it is concerned. It certainly involves the determination of some right or liability, though it may not be necessary that there must be a decision on the merits. This view, which is implied in the observation of Sir Richard Couch, C. J., quoted above, has been really made the basis of the definition of 'judgment' by Sir Arnold White, C. J. in the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court to which reference has been made, vide (1912) ILR 35 Mad 1 (FB). According to White, C. J. to find out whether an order is a 'judgment' or not, we have to look to its effect upon the particular suit or proceeding in which it is made. If its effect is to terminate the suit or proceeding, the decision would be a 'judgment' but not otherwise. As this definition covers not only decisions in suit or actions but 'orders' in other proceedings as well which start with applications, it may be said that any final order passed on an application in the course of a suit, e.g., granting or refusing a party's prayer for adjournment of a suit or for examination of a witness, would also come within the definition. This seems to be the reason why the learned Chief Justice qualifies the general proposition laid down above by stating that:—

"an adjudication on an application, which is nothing more than a step towards obtaining a final adjudication in the suit, is not a judgment within the meaning of Letters Patent". The Supreme Court indicated that the Supreme Court was not giving an exhaustive definition of the word 'judgment'.

5. The question, therefore, is, does not the order of the learned trial judge in this case involve determination of some right or liability though such determination may not be a decision on the merits. In this case, the merits of the controversy in the suit remain unaffected by the order in question. The order in question, however, affects the right of the plaintiff to proceed with the suit. The controversy in the suit and the points in dispute therein remain unaffected by the order in question. No right or liability of the party in respect of the points in dispute in the suit are touched by the order setting aside the abatement. Counsel for the appellant, however, contended that the order in question affected the plaintiff's right to proceed with the suit and the defendant's right to stop further prosecution of the suit. So far as the controversy whether the suit had abated or not had been finally adjudicated by the said order. Therefore, it was contended, that the order in question was a 'judgment' because it was the final pronouncement which had put an end to the application for setting aside the abatement and involved determination of the right of the defendants to stop prosecution of the suit any further. Before the question is further examined, it is necessary to refer to another decision of the Supreme Court upon which reliance was placed, namely, the decision in the case of Radhey Shyam v. Shyam Behari Singh, AIR 1971 SC 2337. There the Supreme Court was considering clause 10 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court, which was similarly worded. The respondent in that case had obtained a decree for Rs. 9,000/-. In execution proceedings taken out by him, the appellant's one fourth share in a house was put up for sale and a proclamation setting out the date and hour when the sale would be held was duly issued. The sale, however, was postponed to July 30, 1956 at the instance of the appellant and on his offering to pay a part of the decretal amount. At the auction sale held on the adjourned date the respondent himself purchased the said one fourth share of the appellant for Rs. 8,000/-. The appellant filed an application for setting aside that sale under Order XXI, Rule 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that contrary to the provisions of Rule 69 of that Order, the notice relating to the adjourned auction sale did not set out the hour when the auction would be held though the original proclamation under which the auction sale was to be held on the earlier date specified both the hour and the date. The appellant contended that the failure to mention the hour contravened Order XXI, Rule 69 and that such a contravention was a material irregularity which vitiated the sale. The objection was overruled by the execution Court. The appellant thereupon filed an appeal in the High Court where a learned single Judge upheld the objection holding that the failure to set out the hour amounted to a material irregularity, in consequence whereof the appellant had been prejudicated by the sale having fetched too low a value. On this finding the learned Judge allowed the appeal and set aside the auction sale. Aggrieved by the said order, the respondent filed a Letters Patent Appeal under Cl 10 of the Letters Patent of the Allahabad High Court. A Division Bench of the High Court reversed the order passed by the learned single Judge and allowed the appeal. Following the Full Bench decision of that High Court in Standard Glass Beads Factory v. Shri Dhar, AIR 1960 All 692 (FB) the division bench rejected the appellant's contention that no Letters Patent Appeal lay against such an order and held that the order of the learned single Judge was a 'judgment' within the meaning of the clause 10 of the Letters Patent. The Supreme Court held that an order in a proceeding under Order XXI, Rule 90, was a 'judgment' inasmuch as such a proceeding raised a controversy between the parties therein affecting their valuable rights and the order allowing the application certainly deprived the purchaser of the right accrued to him as a result of the auction-sale. Therefore, appeal under clause 10 lay from an order of a Single Judge of the High Court in an appeal from an order of an execution Court on an application under Order XXI, Rule 90. After referring to the decision and the observations in the case of AIR 1953 SC 198 (supra) the Supreme Court observed at page 2339 of the report as follows:—

"It will be noticed that the order in question was on an application in the suit as a step-in-aid towards the determination of the controversy between the parties in the suit. It was, therefore, that the said observation was made that the order sought to be appealed against did not affect the merits of the controversy in the suit nor did it terminate or dispose of the suit. For an order to be a 'judgment' it is not always necessary that it should put an end to the controversy in the suit or should terminate the suit. Even the narrower definition of a 'judgment' as given by Couch, C. J. in the Justice of the Peace for Calcutta, (1872) 8 Beng LR 433 = 17 Suth WR 364 was that it must mean a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability and such a decision might be either final or preliminary or interlocutory".

6. The other decision of the Supreme Court to which reference need be made is the decision in the case of Union of India v. Ram Charan, (1964) 3

"Of course, the Court, in considering whether the appellant has established sufficient cause for his not continuing the suit in time or for not applying for the setting aside of the abatement within time, need not be overstrict in expecting such proof of the suggested cause as it would accept for holding certain facts established, both because the question does not relate to the merits of the dispute between the parties and because if the abatement is set aside, the merits of the dispute can be determined while, if the abatement is not set aside, the appellant is deprived of his proving his claim on account of his culpable negligence or lack of vigilance".

7. It is not necessary for us to lay down any exhaustive definition of the expression 'judgment'. But it appears from the aforesaid decisions and the subsequent decisions to be referred hereafter that the following tests should be applied in considering whether a particular order amounts to a 'judgment' or not, namely, (i) whether the order in question puts an end to the proceeding so far as the Court dealing with it is concerned, in which the order was sought and made, (ii) the order must involve determination of some right or liability affecting the merits, (iii) an adjudication or a decision, which is not anything more than a step towards obtaining the final adjudication on the merits of the dispute in the proceeding is not judgment within the meaning of Letters Patent, (iv) where the decision involves adjudication on the question of limitation or jurisdiction of the Court, in certain cases, such decisions would amount to judgment. It is necessary to examine how far the aforesaid tests can be applied to the order in question, namely, an order setting aside the abatement. In this connection we must bear in mind the observations of Raghubar Dayal, J. mentioned hereinbefore in the case of (1964) 3 SCR 467 = (AIR 1964 SC 215) (supra) that an order setting aside an abatement does not relate to the merits of the dispute. It is certainly a decision which affects the proceedings of the dispute but it is not a decision which affects the merits of the dispute, though the order in question puts an end to the particular application in which the order was sought for and obtained. In the aforesaid view of the matter we are of the opinion that it cannot be said that an order setting aside an abatement is a 'judgment' within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court.

8. There are decisions of the Allahabad, Bombay, Rajasthan, Punjab and Manipur High Courts holding the view that order setting aside abatement is not 'judgment' within the meaning of Letters Patent. We need not refer to the said decisions which were cited at the Bar. In Calcutta High Court, however, there has been a contrary trend. In the case of Sarat Chandra Sarkar v. Maihar Stone & Lime Co. Ltd., AIR 1922 Cal 335 the Division Bench of this Court held that an order setting aside an abatement was a 'judgment' within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and was therefore appealable. Reliance was placed for this on an unreported decision in Appeal No. 16 of 1918 dated 19th of June, 1918. Richardson, J. observed that setting aside of the abatement deprived the party in whose favour the abatement operated of a valuable right, and that was why it was considered as a judgment. Apart from what has been mentioned hereinbefore no other reasons were indicated why an order setting aside abatement should be considered as a 'judgment'. It is true that an order setting aside abatement affects valuable rights and affects the proceedings of the dispute but it does not affect the merits of the dispute. Therefore, though the order affects valuable rights of the parties and should not be lightly made, it cannot, in our opinion, be considered 'judgment' on that ground. In the case of Mohamed Nuru Amin v. Monohar Saran Deb Mohanta, AIR 1925 Cal 473, it was on the other hand held by the Division Bench of this Court that no appeal lies. In the case of Naimuddin Biswas v. Maniruddin Laskar, AIR 1928 Cal 184, it was held by the Division Bench of this Court that an order of abatement by virtue of the death of the party was virtually a decree as it disposed of the plaintiff's claim as completely as if the suit had been dismissed. Mallick, J. observed in the said judgment that the order of abatement operated as a judgment as between the parties to the same extent as a judgment on merits. The case of Shorab Merwanji Modi v. Mansata Film Distributors, AIR 1957 Cal 727 dealt with different question. It was held that an order refusing to stay a suit under Section 10 of the Civil P. C., was a 'judgment' within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. It was held that where a question of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain or proceed with a suit or proceeding was involved and a decision on that question was given, such decision affected the merits of the controversy between the parties. We are in this case not concerned with that question. It may be that where questions of jurisdiction or of limitation arise, decisions may be 'judgments' in certain circumstances. In the instant case, counsel for the appellant, contended that the order in this case also involved a question of jurisdiction. We are unable to agree. The learned trial Judge undoubtedly had jurisdiction to make an order setting aside the abatement or refusing to set aside the abatement. A decision setting aside an abatement or refusing to set aside the abatement upon a particular view whether sufficient cause had been made out or not does not involve any question of jurisdiction. The learned trial Judge might have been right or might have been wrong in his valuation of the facts and on his conclusion as to whether sufficient cause had been made out or not. He had the jurisdiction to decide either way namely, whether sufficient cause had been made out or not and a decision either way, right or wrong, is not a decision on the question of the jurisdiction of the Court. We are, therefore, unable to accept the position that in this case any question of jurisdiction of the Court was involved. Similarly, where questions of limitation or res judicata are involved decisions in respect of the same may, in certain circumstances be 'judgments'. It was so held in the case of Central Bank of India v. S. B. Hosiery Ltd., (1966) 70 Cal WN 670. In the case of Md. Felumeah v. S. Mandal, 64 Cal WN 861 = (AIR 1960 Cal 582) it was held that an order varying interim order was a 'judgment' within the meaning of the Letters Patent. We are again not concerned with this question. We do not express any opinion in respect of the same. Counsel for the appellant further contended that question of limitation was involved in the instant case, because by the lapse of time and due to the conduct of the plaintiff a right had accrued to the defendant which was being affected by the order in question. We are unable to accept the contention that the order in question, involved any question of limitation as such. Under the law of limitation time has been provided for making an application for bringing the heirs of the deceased defendant on record and time again has been provided for setting aside of the abatement by the Court on sufficient cause being shown. If, in a particular case, a Court sets aside abatement it does not, in our opinion, in any way affect any right accrued to the defendant by virtue of the law of limitation.

9. In the case of Laxminarayan Tamkorwalla v. Udairam Khemka, AIR 1961 Cal 386, the Division Bench of this Court had occasion to consider some of the decisions referred to hereinbefore. The Division Bench felt that according to the Supreme Court in the case of AIR 1953 SC 198 (supra) any order to be 'judgment' the adjudication need not be on the merits of the controversy between the parties, but it must be a decision affecting the merits of the case. The Division Bench was concerned with an order under Rule 5, Order 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure with which we are not concerned in the instant case. In the case of T. Bhagwandas v. Sitaram Sri-gopal, 63 Cal WN 300 = (AIR 1959 Cal 389), the Division Bench held that an order setting aside a decree and restoring suit to file was not a 'judgment' and therefore not appealable. Such an order decided nothing as to the merits in controversy between the parties but merely reopened the controversy. In the case of Sm. Tara Nevatia v. S. C. Dhur, (1963) 67 Cal WN 18 the Division Bench of this Court following the decision in the case of AIR 1922 Cal 335 (supra) and the decision in the case of AIR 1961 Cal 386 held that an order setting aside an abatement of a suit was a 'judgment' under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The Division Bench did not give any independent reason.

10. For the reasons indicated hereinbefore we are of the opinion that the Calcutta decisions, so far as they have held that order setting aside abatement is a 'judgment' under clause 15 of the Letters Patent, are not correct and an order setting aside abatement is not a 'judgment', as it does not relate to the merits of the dispute, but only a step towards final adjudication of the dispute and as such is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent.

11. Counsel for the appellant contended that we should not disturb the decisions of the Division Benches of this Court which had held that such orders were appealable. Counsel contended that a rule of procedure which had been established should not be departed from. Reliance was placed upon a decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Brij Inder Singh v. Kanshi Ram, 44 Ind App 218 = (AIR 1917 PC 156) and on the observations at page 225 of the report. There, however, the Judicial Committee observed that a rule of procedure which had been laid down by the Full Benches in all the Courts of India and had been acted upon for many years, should not be departed from. Reliance was also placed on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Gajanan v. Brindaban, AIR 1970 SC 2007 where the Supreme Court had observed that the view which had been accepted for a long time by the highest Court and stood for a long period of time, should not be interfered with because many transactions both in respect of property and contracts had taken place upon the basis of the said decision. It is true that if a decision has stood the test of time and which has been laid down by the highest Court, and according to which people had adjusted their affairs, should not be departed from. But in this case, as we have noticed before, there has been wide divergence of opinion between the different High Courts in this country. As a matter of fact several High Courts in India as indicated before have taken a view that such an order was not a 'judgment' within the meaning of the Letters Patent while in many of the decisions of the Calcutta High Court a contrary view had prevailed. It however appears that as early as 1925 a different view was expressed by a Division Bench of this Court, and doubts have arisen on this question from time to time. There has been yet no Full Bench pronouncement on this question, and though the rule of procedure might affect some pending appeals it would not affect any transaction. In the aforesaid view of the matter and in view of the tests indicated by the Supreme Court we are unable to accept the position that we should not differ from the said decisions of the Division Benches on this point.

12. In the aforesaid view of the matter we are of the opinion that no appeal lies.

13. Counsel for the appellant contended before us that in this case no sufficient cause had been made out why abatement should be set aside. Counsel also drew our attention to several decisions dealing with the question of sufficient cause. Counsel also placed reliance upon several decisions dealing with the question that the application for setting aside should explain the delay and the conduct of the applicant. In the view we have taken on the other aspect of the matter that no appeal lies, it is not necessary for us to discuss this aspect of the matter. We are, however, constrained to observe that the cause indicated in the affidavit does not seem to be very convincing. As mentioned hereinbefore, the learned trial Judge did not indicate any reason. The Supreme Court in the case of (1964) 3 SCR 467 = (AIR 1964 SC 215) had observed that the Court in considering whether an applicant had established sufficient cause though need not be overstrict, should, nevertheless, carefully examine the question whether sufficient cause was made out or not. However, it appears that in this case parties were disputing for a long long time. It further appears that there were several litigations. It is also clear that there was a change of Attorney. In those circumstances in respect of other matters it has been mentioned that there were applications for substitution. Obviously this application had not been made because as the applicant had said that he had forgotten about the same. Though it is not a very convincing proof of the sufficiency of the cause for setting aside an abatement but if in the background of the facts of this case the learned trial Judge had thought it fit to set aside the abatement it should not be interfered with in the appeal. However, this question need not be pursued any further in view of our conclusion on the first question, that is to say, no appeal lies from an order setting aside the abatement.

14. In the aforesaid view of the matter this appeal fails and is accordingly dismissed. The costs of this appeal and of this reference to this Full Bench would be costs in the suit.

ABUN K. MUKHERJEA, J.: 15. I agree.

Civil Rule No. 6658(W) of 1968, D/-10-9-1971.

(A) W. B. Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 44 (2a) — Notice requiring holder to show cause against action under section without giving grounds for initiation of proceeding and without stating why and in what manner the finally published record of rights needs revision is liable to be quashed as being incompetent exercise of suo motu power and as violating rules of natural justice — (X-Ref:— Constitution of India, Art. 226). AIR 1968 SC 843, Followed. (Para 5)

(B) W. B. Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 44 (2a) — Revenue Officer or Assistant Settlement Officer cannot enquire into the title of holder — He has only to decide on basis of possession.

A proceeding under Section 44 (2a) initiated for purpose of determining holder's title vis-a-vis his father to find out who was the real owner or for making a roving enquiry and for requiring holder to prove correctness of the entry in record of rights was beyond the power of the officers under the provision. By so doing he would be usurping the function of ordinary Civil Court. The scope of powers under Section 44 (2a) must be determined in the light of Sections 39 to 43 and Rule 26. (Paras 5 & 6)

(C) W. B. Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 44 (2a) and Sch. B, R. 6 — Correctness of entry in record of rights has to be enquired into by the Assistant Settlement Officer himself and not by deriving any impression from enquiry held by another officer. (Para 7)

S. N. Ghosai, for Petitioner; P. K. Sen Gupta, for Opposite Parties.

ORDER:— In this Rule the petitioner is challenging an order dated August 2, 1968 passed in a proceeding initiated suo motu under Section 44 (2a) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act).

2. There is no dispute that the disputed land appertaining the several khattians stands recorded in the name of the present petitioner in the finally published record-of-rights. A proceeding under Section 5-A of the said Act was unsuccessfully initiated in or about June, 1968, but as the transfers had taken place long prior to May 5, 1953, such proceeding was dropped. But immediately thereafter a suo motu proceeding under Sec. 44 (2a) was instituted by the Assistant Settlement Officer and a notice dated July 17, 1968 was issued on the petitioner. This notice however discloses no ground for exercise of powers under Section 44 (2a) but only reads as a notice fixing a date of hearing. It recites that whereas an application has been filed under Section 44 (2a) and whereas the said application has been fixed for hearing on July 22, 1968, therefore the petitioner is directed to appear to show cause if any. The petitioner appeared and he was called upon to support the entries in his favour. He produced certain documents of purchase of some of the disputed plots from different persons all effected in the year 1947 and 1952. The Assistant Settlement Officer however came to the conclusion that such purchases were made benami by the father of the petitioner in petitioner's name. On such finding he directed deletion of the name of the petitioner in respect of the disputed plots and instead thereof directed such land to be recorded in the name of petitioner's father. This was the order which was passed on August 2, 1968 and which is the subject-matter of challenge in this Rule.

3. Mr. Gorai appearing in support of this Rule has raised two points in support of his contention that the impugned order is wholly without jurisdiction. In the first place, Mr. Gorai contends that if the proceeding was initiated on any application as indicated by the notice, then it is clearly barred by limitation as prescribed by the Act; if on the other hand, the proceeding was initiated suo motu the notice falls short in not disclosing any ground or reason why such a proceeding was initiated and it does not indicate why or in what manner the finally published record-of-rights need any revision. Secondly Mr. Gorai contended that the Assistant Settlement Officer had no jurisdiction in law to enter into the question of title in the manner done by him.

4. The Rule is being contested by the respondents who have filed an affidavit-in-opposition and Mr. P. K. Sen-gupta is appearing to support the order.

5. In my view both the contentions raised by Mr. Gorai are of great substance. It is not disputed that if initiated on an application the proceeding is barred by limitation prescribed by the Act. The respondents themselves in their affidavit therefore claim the proceeding to be one initiated suo motu. Unfortunately the notice discloses no ground why such a proceeding is being initiated. Nor does it indicate why or in what manner the finally published record needs revision. Except describing the notice as a notice of a proceeding under Section 44 (2a) there is nothing in the notice to indicate that it is a proceeding for revision of finally published record-of-rights. This Court has repeatedly held following the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Swastik Oil Mills v. H. B. Munshi, AIR 1968 SC 843 that no proceeding under Section 44 (2a) can competently be initiated except by disclosing some grounds for exercise of such suo motu powers. It is but a part of the principles of natural justice that a man must be told as to why or in what manner or for what reason the records standing in his favour are to be revised. Or in other words, he must know the case which he is to meet in the proceeding. A proceeding which is initiated in breach of this minimum requirement is not in accordance with law. At the hearing my attention has been drawn to an ex parte order recorded on July 13, 1968 which led to the initiation of the proceeding. This order indicates that the Assistant Settlement Officer formed an opinion that the son (the petitioner) had been inducted only as a benamdar in order to retain more land than what is allowable for retention by the father and it was therefore necessary to enquire into the right, title and possession of the lands recorded in the name of the son. In my view if the proceeding was initiated only to adjudicate the title of the petitioner visa-vis the father to find out whether son is the real owner or merely the benamdar for the father or not it was not within the jurisdiction of the Assistant Settlement Officer to hold any such adjudication. On the other hand, if it was initiated to make a roving enquiry and call upon the petitioner to support the entry which on final publication stands in his name it was also beyond the jurisdiction of the Assistant Settlement Officer. Of course, it would be within his jurisdiction to be prima facie satisfied that the land never belonged to the petitioner or was not in his possession and the entry as it stands is erroneous so that it should be corrected. But in the present case the proceeding was not initiated on any such prima facie decision. For these reasons I must accept the first contention of Mr. Gorai that the proceeding was not lawfully initiated.

6. The second contention of Mr. Gorai is of equal importance. The impugned order indicates that the Assistant Settlement Officer straightway went in to adjudicate the title. Upon his findings documents so far produced indicated that many of these plots were purchased between 1947 and 1952 from third parties by registered deeds in the name of the petitioner. The rent receipts prior to vesting were not produced but the rent receipts for the subsequent period were produced to show payment of rent in respect of most of these plots by the petitioner. The Assistant Settlement Officer however found that when these plots were purchased at a time when the petitioner was minor and when the petitioner was living in the same mess with his father these plots must have been purchased by the father in the benami of his son. Unfortunately not only the records but also the documents so far disclosed stand in the name of the petitioner. None of the parties including the State for over ten years disputed the title of the petitioner. The question is whether the Assistant Settlement Officer had any authority to question the title and then decide it in the manner done by him. In my considered opinion he is not entitled to do so. In doing so he would be usurping the function of the ordinary Civil Court. The powers conferred by Section 44 (2a) must be adjudged in the light of the provisions of Sections 39 to 43 and Rule 26 of the rules framed under the Act. None of these provisions in any manner indicate that either the Revenue Officer or the Assistant Settlement Officer is given any authority to launch an adjudication purely on title. On the other hand, Rule 6 of Schedule B to the rules clearly indicates that the question of title can be gone into only in a summary manner and when any dispute is raised as to title the Revenue Officer must proceed on the basis of possession. These rules read in the light of the statutory provisions clearly indicate that the legislature never intended to transfer a part of the Civil Court's jurisdiction to these settlement authorities in adjudicating pure issues of title. Whether the ostensible owner is the real owner or benamdar is a disputed question both of law and facts and involve consideration of various materials which can in my view never properly be adjudicated by either a Revenue Officer or an Assistant Settlement Officer and in a proceeding either under Section 44 or 44 (2a). It is for this reason that the rules have indicated that even where any such dispute as to title is raised the Settlement Officer or the Revenue Officer must proceed on the basis of possession and leave the parties to have their title adjudicated in a Civil Court.

7. The Assistant Settlement Officer having thus decided the title against the petitioner had gone over to consider possession. In so doing he relied on an enquiry report by a Revenue Officer. Such report again on the statement of the Enquiring Officer is based upon an impression gathered by him on examination of local witnesses that it was the father who was possessing the lands. Such witnesses were not examined in this proceeding. Where the father and son live together as in the present case normally it would be difficult to distinguish who is actually in possession and possession must naturally follow the title. In any event witnesses were not examined in the proceeding but witnesses were examined by a Revenue Officer who carried the impression to the Assistant Settlement Officer and the Assistant Settlement Officer on such impression held against the petitioner. No doubt the Assistant Settlement Officer also relied on the entries as in the Khasra khatian as also certain B Form returns filed by the father. The Khasra khatian however is one which was prepared before attestation and in the absence of any evidence that the final entry as made after attestation suffers any particular error, the Khasra khatian cannot override the final publication. Nor does any error or irregularity in the returns submitted by the father affect the petitioner's title or the records standing in his name. In any event reading the order as a whole I have no manner of doubt that the Assistant Settlement Officer has passed the final order substantially on his findings on the title which he had gone into without any jurisdiction. In this view the second point raised by Mr. Gorai must also succeed.

8. An objection was taken that the impugned order being appealable under Section 44 (3) this Court should not in exercise of its writ jurisdiction set aside such an order when no appeal was preferred under the statute. In my view when on the findings made hereinbefore the proceeding is beyond the jurisdiction of the Assistant Settlement Officer and is also violative of the ordinary principles of natural justice, petitioner's not preferring an appeal under Section 44 (3) would not debar this Court from interfering in this jurisdiction.

9. On the conclusions as above this application succeeds. The impugned order is hereby set aside. The Rule is made absolute.

10. Let a Writ in the nature of Certiorari do issue quashing the aforesaid proceeding and the final order passed therein.

11. I further direct that the security deposited by the petitioner with the Collector of Nadia should now be refunded after adjustment of his dues to the State. There will be no order as to costs.

12. Nothing said in this order will prevent the respondents from taking any steps that they may be entitled to take in accordance with law.

Petition allowed.

Binoj Kumar Saha and another, Petitioners v. The Revenue Officer, Malda and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Case No. 1709 of 1969, D/- 30-7-1971.

West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act 1953 (1 of 1954), S. 2 (b) — Tank and bund thereof are not agricultural lands.

A tank is not used for purposes of agriculture or horticulture, though it may be used for pisciculture and other purposes. Even if the water of the tank be used for irrigation purpose, that does not make it agricultural land and therefore the tank and its bund could not be directed to vest in the State under the Act. (Para 3)

Sudhangshu Bhusan Sen and Miss Archana Roy, for Petitioners; Chandidas Roy Chowdhury and Amal Kumar Basu Chowdhury, for Opposite Parties Nos. 1 to 4.

ORDER:— This Rule is against an order of a Revenue Officer under Section 47 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act directing plots Nos. 215 and 218 of mouza Ghansahar amongst other plots to be recorded as vested in the State.

2. One Bimal Krishna Sanyal, opposite party No. 5, was the owner of these two plots. He was an intermediary within the meaning of the Act. He exercised option under Section 6 (5) of the Act, submitted a 'B' Form statement and he retained plots Nos. 215 and 218. Plot No. 215 has been recorded as a tank with an area of 3.71 acres and plot No. 218 has been recorded as the bank of the tank with an area of 10.37 acres. Some time in 1963 opposite party No. 5 sold these two plots to the petitioners. Some time in 1969 the Revenue Officer started the instant proceeding under Section 47 of the Act but no notice was served on the petitioners and the instant order was made by the Revenue Officer on May 2, 1969 in the absence of the petitioners. Subsequently, the petitioners filed an application but since the matter had already been disposed of no action was taken thereon. Thereafter the petitioners obtained this Rule.

3. I have said that plot No. 215 is the tank and plot No. 218 is the bank of the tank. These are not agricultural lands. Obviously, opposite party No. 5 retained these as tank fishery. Mr. Roy Chowdhury who appears for the State submits that the settlement records shows that the water of the tank was used for irrigation purpose and so, these two plots should be held to be agricultural lands within the meaning of the Act. This argument cannot be accepted. Agricultural land means land ordinarily used for the purposes of agriculture and horticulture and including such land, notwithstanding that it may be lying fallow for the time being. The tank is obviously not used for purposes of agriculture or horticulture. This may be used for pisciculture; the water may be used for drinking purpose or other purposes and even for irrigation purposes, but that does not make it an agricultural land. The intermediary, who was the owner of these two plots, retained it and included it in the 'B' Form statement submitted by him and thereafter he sold it to the petitioners. So, there is no justification for the Revenue Officer for directing that these two plots should be recorded as vested in the State.

4. In the result, the Rule is made absolute. The order of the Revenue Officer directing plots Nos. 215 and 218 of mouza Ghansahar to be recorded as vested in the State is set aside.

No order is made as to costs.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J. —

Ratan Lal Agarwalla and Lakshmi Chand Agarwalla, are the owners of three-fourth share and trustees for remaining one-fourth share in premises No. 21, Hanspu-kur First Lane, Calcutta. The adjoining premises No. 20-A, Hanspukur First Lane, is a trust property of which the trustees are mentioned in paragraph 3 of the petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution to this Court. It was alleged in the petition that at the back of premises No.

20-A, Hanspukur First Lane, there was a space in which there existed a structure with Raniganj tiled sloped roof. It has been further alleged that the owners of the premises raised the height of the walls and constructed a roof thereon without any sanction by the Corporation of Calcutta. On a complaint by the petitioners action was taken by the Corporation of Calcutta. A notice was issued under Section 416 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, and thereafter the matter came up before the Commissioner under Section 414 of the said Act. Upon this the Commissioner having considered the matter passed the following order on 16th
May, 1962—

"Heard representatives of both the owners and the complainants. There is a roof, but the R. T. roof has been admittedly converted to flat terrace roof.
The character of the roof has been changed without sanction. If the party pays all charges as per Corporation Resolutions within one month from the date of communication of this order, the case may be dropped failing which the roof will be demolished."

The petitioners thereafter made an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution and a rule nisi was issued. The matter came up for hearing before Banerjee, J. According to the learned Judge there was infringement of R. 30 of Schedule XVI of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 which could be relaxed under R. 31. The learned Judge was of the view that it did not appear from the order of the Commissioner whether the unauthorised construction deserved relaxation under Rule 31 nor did the Commissioner take the approval of the Standing Building Committee when making the order of relaxation. In the aforesaid view of the matter the learned Judge was of the view that the order of the Commissioner could not be sustained and he accordingly quashed the order.
The learned Judge however observed that the said order would not prevent the Commissioner from exercising the power under Rule 31 of Schedule XVI of the Calcutta Municipal Act in accordance with the law. An appeal was preferred from the said order and judgment of Banerjee, J. The appeal came up for hearing before the Division Bench of this Court consisting of Sinha, J. (as his Lordship then was) and Sen, J. It was argued before the learned Judges of the appellate court that under Sec. 414 the Commissioner had a discretion in the matter and if the Commissioner had exercised the discretion such exercise of the discretion could not be and should not be interfered by this court. The learned Judges were of the opinion that though this point was not taken before Banerjee, J. the appellants were entitled to urge this point as being a question of law. Their Lordships however were of the view that under Section 414 there was undoubtedly a discretion, but in respect of matters which involved violation of unrelaxable rules the Commissioner had no discretion and should always pass an order for demolition. The learned Judges referred to the decision of this court in the case of Pramila Sundari v. Corporation of Calcutta and to a bench decision in the case of Subhasini Nandi v. Corporation of Calcutta, (1955) 59 Cal WN 776. Their Lordships however felt that the view that their Lordships were inclined to take was in conflict with the division bench decision of this Court in the case of Yudhisthir Kumar Dutt v. Commr. of Corpn. of Calcutta, (1965) 69 Cal WN 249. In the aforesaid view of the matter their Lordships felt that two questions of importance arose, namely:—

"1. Under Section 414 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, has the Commissioner an absolute discretion to make or not to make, an order of demolition?

2. Can he refuse to make an order, where there is an unauthorized construction infringing rules which are either—

(a) not relaxable under the provisions of the said Act or

(b) are relaxable but have not been relaxed?"

Accordingly their Lordships referred this appeal under Rule 1 of Chapter XXXIA of the Original Side of this Court. The question for our consideration is the scope and effect of Section 414 so far as it affects the power and discretion of the Commissioner.

2. In order to decide the questions involved in this case it is necessary to consider the relevant statutory provisions. The Schedule XVI of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 contains rules as to the use of building-sites and the execution of building work. Sec. 376 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, which is in Chapter XXII provides that no piece of land shall be used as a site for the erection of a new building, and no new building shall be erected, otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the said Chapter, namely, Chapter XXII and Schedule XVI of the Act, and any orders, rules or by-laws made under the said Act. The expression, "new buildings" has been defined under Section 5, sub-section (49) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951. Section 387 of the Act provides that subject to the provisions of Section 388, and the provisions of other sections contained in Chapter XXII of the Act, Schedule 16 and or any orders, rules and by-laws made under the Act, relating to the erection of new buildings, shall, subject to the rules in Part X of the said Schedule XVI, apply to every alteration of, or addition to, any building, and to any other work (except that of necessary repairs not involving any of the works specified in Rule 90 of the Schedule XVI) made or done for any purpose in, to, or upon any building. Section 388 deals with the powers to relax provisions of the said Chapter, namely, Chapter XXII and Schedule XVI. It has been provided that in the case of an erection of any new building as defined in sub-clause (b) (c) or (d) of clause (49) of Section 5, and in the case of any addition or alteration or other work referred to in Section 387, such relaxation of the provisions of the Chapter and Schedule XVI may be made as the Commissioner may think fit. It provides further that no such relaxation shall apply to cases other than those specifically mentioned in Schedule XVI, and such relaxations are not likely to prejudicially affect the sanitation or ventilation of the building or other buildings in its vicinity. Therefore the effect of Section 388 is that only such deviations from the rules in Schedule XVI can be permissible if they are relaxable under the said Schedule and provided further that such relaxation do not prejudicially affect the sanitation or ventilation of the building in question or of other building in the vicinity. Section 414 is contained in Chapter XXIV of the Act which deals with demolition, alteration and stopping of unlawful work. In view of the controversy in this case, it is necessary to set out Section 414 which is as follows:—

"414. (1) If the Commissioner is satisfied—

(i) that the erection of any building—

(a) has been commenced without obtaining any permission required to be obtained by or under this Act, or

(c) is being carried on or has been completed in breach of any provision contained in this Act or in any rules or by-laws made thereunder, or of any direction or requisition lawfully given or made under this Act or under such rules or by-laws, or

(ii) that any alteration of, or addition to, any building or any other work made or done for any purpose in, to or upon any building, has been commenced or is being carried on or has been completed in breach of or otherwise than in accordance with, any sanction granted under Section 387 in contravention of the provisions of Section 396 or 397, or

(iii) that any alteration required by any notice issued under Rule 22 of Schedule XVI has not been duly made, he may, without prejudice to any action that may be taken under any other provision of this Act, by written notice require the person responsible to demolish such erection, alteration, addition or other work or to make the alteration, as the case may be, or to show cause why such erection, alteration, addition or other work should not be demolished or the alteration should not be made.

(2) The Commissioner may issue a notice under sub-section (1) notwithstanding the fact that the valuation of such building has been made under Chapter XI for the assessment of the consolidated rate.

(3) If the person responsible fails—

(a) to demolish such erection, alteration, addition or other work, or to make the alteration, or

(b) to show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Commissioner or an officer specially appointed by the Corporation with the approval of the State Government in this behalf, as the case may be, why such erection, alteration, addition or other work, should not be demolished, or the alteration should not be made, the Commissioner may order—

(i) the demolition of the erection, alteration, addition or other work, or

(ii) the making of the alterations: Provided that a copy of the order shall be served upon the owner and the occupier thereof and no such action shall be taken until the expiry of thirty days from the date of the service of the said order.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sub-sections, no action shall be taken under this section in respect of any erection, alteration, addition or other work executed more than twelve years before the issue of the notice under sub-section (1): Provided that the onus of proving that the work was done more than twelve years previously shall lie on the person responsible.

(5) In this section the expression "person responsible" includes the owner, the occupier and any other person who executes the erection, alteration, addition or other work or who is liable to make any alteration required by any notice issued under Rule 22 of Schedule XVI."

S. 414-A which was inserted by S. 99 of the Calcutta Municipal (Second Amendment) Act, 1964 provides that any person dissatisfied with the order of the Commissioner made under sub-section (3) of Section 414 may, within thirty days from the date of the order, present an appeal accompanied by a copy of the order to the Tribunal constituted under Section 391-B and the President of the Tribunal may stay the execution of the order for such period or periods as he may think fit or until the disposal of the appeal. Section 415 deals with demolition or alteration of work in certain other cases. It is not necessary for the present purpose, to set out the said sections. Section 537 of the Act provides for various penalties. It provides for the punishment of fine as well as imprisonment for contravention of the offences mentioned therein. Certain punishments for contravention of provisions of Schedule XVI have also been provided in the said section. Section 543 deals with the liability of fine for putting buildings to other than declared use. Section 544 provides for fine for using building for carrying on offensive trade without previous declaration. It is not necessary for the purpose of this application to deal with the said section. As mentioned hereinbefore Schedule XVI of the Calcutta Municipal Act deals with the rules as to the use of the building site and the execution of building works. Rule 30 of the said Schedule deals with the requirement of open space in rear of building, regulating the rear height. In Rule 31 power has been given for relaxation of certain provisions of Rule 30 to the Commissioner in certain specified contingencies and in certain manner. In this connection reference may be made to S. 388 referred to above.

3. An analysis of the different provisions of the Act makes it clear that the buildings should conform to certain rules and before construction of new buildings sanction must be obtained. The rules to which the buildings should conform have been mentioned in the Act and powers have been given to the Commissioner to relax the rules for the purpose of sanction, in certain cases upon certain contingencies. If a building is constructed or continued to exist, which has been constructed without sanction or contrary to the rules, powers have been given to the authorities to impose penalties as well as to order demolition and alteration of the building. As noticed before, authority has been given to the Commissioner to order demolition, alteration and stopping of unlawful work in respect of such buildings by virtue of Section 414 of the Act. If an application is made for sanction, the said sanction should be granted in accordance with the rules provided. Relaxation is only possible in the manner indicated in the rules in granting such sanction. But the question that arises in this case is that where there has been no relaxation or in a case where the rule cannot be relaxed, in such a case, if a building or a portion thereof has been constructed or altered, what is the scope of the power of the Commissioner under Section 414 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951?

4. Before this question is considered further, it is necessary to refer to the facts of this case. From the affidavit of Ramanath Bose, who is the Superintendent (Building) of the Corporation of Calcutta, it appears that prior to 13th August, 1961 it was brought to the notice of the Corporation of Calcutta that certain unauthorised constructions were being made on the fourth storey of the premises No. 20-A, Manspukur First Lane. On 13th August, 1961 District Building Surveyor I, inspected the said premises in the morning and it was found out that a room in the fourth storey was being constructed on the western side with increased height. It appeared that the existing sloped roof of the said room had been demolished and the height of the wall on the Western side of the said room had been increased by 2 feet and iron beams had been fixed being preparatory to and for the purpose of placing the roof over the said beam. When the inspection took place no roof however, had been placed on the beam. It was found that the said alteration was being done without any sanction. Therefore, a notice under Section 416 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 was addressed to the owner. Thereafter a notice under Section 414 of the Calcutta Municipal Act was issued and pursuant thereto the owner of the building submitted a signed statement. The owners of the offending building as well as the adjoining building were heard. Thereafter on the 16th of May, 1962 the Commissioner passed the order mentioned hereinbefore. It is apparent that the existing sloped roof of the room in the 4th storey had been demolished and the height of the walls of the said room on the western side had been increased by only 2 feet and a flat roof or terrace had been built in its place. According to the Superintendent (Building), there was no serious infringement or violation of any building rule, nor was there any obstruction of light or air in to the adjoining premises. It is clear that there was slight infraction of R. 30 of Sch. XVI of the Act. The infraction was to a very small extent, but the infraction was in respect of a rule which could not have been relaxed in the circumstances of this case and had not been in fact relaxed by the Commissioner by any prior order. In those circumstances, instead of passing the order for demolition, the Commissioner passed the order in question. The main point that was contended for on behalf of the adjoining owner was that in case of building or a part of the building, which had been built in violation of Rule 30 of Schedule XVI and relaxation in respect of which had not been granted and/or could not be granted, under Section 414 the Commissioner had no option left to him, but had to order demolition of that portion. It was contended that the Commissioner having not done that had acted illegally and in excess of his jurisdiction. The case of Sk. Abdul Samad v. Corpn. of Calcutta, 10 Cal WN p. 182 was a case dealing with the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899. Under Section 449 of the Act the Magistrate was empowered to order demolition of building constructed in breach of the sanction. The section used the expression "may". It was held that the expression vested upon the magistrate a discretion and the expression "may" should not be construed as "shall". Similar views were expressed in the case of Chuni Lal Dutt v. Corpn. of Calcutta, ILR 34 Cal 341. That was a case under the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899. There it was held that the Municipal Magistrate should exercise the discretion with due regard to those rules, which guided Court of Equity in granting injunctions, with this difference that he had also to consider whether or not a building ought to be demolished on the ground of its being a danger or obstruction to the public. There the Magistrate had ordered demolition, and in the facts of that case and in the light of the sections it was held that the Magistrate passed the order erroneously and without properly exercising his jurisdiction. Reference may be made to the decision in the case of Corp. of Calcutta v. Bangshidhar Bidasaria, 41 Cal WN 1373 = (AIR 1938 Cal 36). That was a case under the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923. There the Court was considering the question whether order for demolition should have been passed by the Magistrate. Sec. 363 of the said Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923 provided as follows:—

"363. (1) If the Corporation are satisfied—

(1) that the erection of any new building—

(a) has been commenced without obtaining the written permission of the Corporation,

(b) is being carried on or has been completed otherwise than in accordance with the particulars on which such permission was based, or

direction or requisition lawfully given or made under this Act or under such rules or by-laws, or

(2) that any alteration of, or addition to, any building or any other work made or done for any purpose in, to or upon any building, has been commenced or is being carried on or has been completed in breach of, or otherwise than in accordance with, any sanction granted under Sections 330, 340 or 341, or

(3) that any alterations required by any notice issued under Rule 22 of Schedule XVII have not been duly made, they may, after giving the owner of such building an opportunity of being heard, apply to a Magistrate, and such Magistrate may make an order directing that such erection, alteration, addition or other work, as the case may be, or so much thereof as has been executed unlawfully as mentioned in clauses (1), (2) or (3), or that any structure, specified under the Explanation to clause (d) of Rule 53, or the Explanation to clause (iv) of Rule 81, of Schedule XVII as a structure to be demolished or altered, shall—

(i) be demolished by the owner thereof or altered by him in accordance with the order of the Magistrate to the satisfaction of the Corporation, as the case may require, or

(ii) be demolished or altered by the Corporation at the expense of the said owner;

Provided that the Magistrate—

(a) shall not make any order under this section without giving the owner and occupier of the building to be so demolished or altered full opportunity of adducing evidence and of being heard in his defence, and

(b) may make any such order notwithstanding the fact that a valuation of such building has been made by the Executive Officer under Chapter X for the assessment of the consolidated rate: Provided that where the Corporation have instituted proceedings under S. 493, no application shall be made under this section.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), no proceedings shall be instituted thereunder in respect of any work which has been done more than five years before the institution of such proceedings:

Provided that the onus of proving that the work was done more than five years previously shall lie on the owner." It was held by Biswas, J., that the Magistrate could refuse to pass an order for demolition of an unauthorised structure when he was satisfied that the case was not a fit one for such an order. In the case of the Corpn. of Calcutta v. Mul-chand Agarwala, AIR 1956 SC 110, the Supreme Court was considering a case under the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923. The Supreme Court had occasion to consider the ambit of the jurisdiction granted to the Magistrate under Section 363 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923 and the Supreme Court held that the Magistrate might pass an order for demolition of the building, and though the word 'may' might in some contexts be construed as meaning 'shall' that was not the sense in which it had been used in Section 363. It was held that S. 363 did not require that when a building was shown to have been erected without permission or completed otherwise than in accordance with the terms of the permission or in breach of the building rules, an order for its demolition should be made as a matter of course. The section gave the Magistrate a discretion whether he should or should not pass such an order. The provisions of the Section 414 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 came to be considered by a Division Bench of this Court in the case of (1965) 69 Cal WN 249 and the Division Bench held that the power conferred under Section 414 did not provide that the Commissioner must make an order for demolition in every case where he was satisfied that any erection, alteration or addition of any building had been made or was being carried on in contravention of the Act or the Rules made thereunder. While on the one hand the section conferred upon the Commissioner the power to make an order for demolition, on being satisfied about any unauthorised construction, the section at the same time conferred upon him, the power to issue a notice to show cause on the party, why an order for demolition should not be made.

5. It appears to us that the Section 414 vests upon the Commissioner a discretion. The discretion is, for the purpose of facilitating the scheme and the object of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951. That discretion must be used bona fide and not on any extraneous ground. The section also enjoins that the Commissioner should exercise discretion quasi judicially, that is to say, by giving the parties an opportunity to show cause. The parties are given opportunity to show cause why an order for demolition should not be made. Therefore, if in an appropriate case where it is found that there has been infraction of the rule, which cannot be relaxed or which has not been relaxed the parties show sufficient cause to the Commissioner for example that the infraction is of minor nature or has not in any way affected the sanitation or ventilation and the amenities of the building in question and other adjoining premises, then the Commissioner has the discretion not to order demolition. Sufficient cause has not been defined. It is inappropriate to do so — it must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case. If an authority charged with the duty to see the observation of the rules has been given the discretion to decide whether any infraction of the rules or construction without sanction should be rectified by demolition or not, it would not be proper to circumscribe or curtail that discretion. The ratio of the principle decided by the Supreme Court in the case of AIR 1956 SC 110 would also apply to the provisions of this section, though the language of the section is slightly different and in this case the discretion has been given not to an independent judicial body, but the discretion has been given to the administrative head of the Corporation, to be exercised in a quasi-judicial manner. These in our view do not make any difference as to the nature of the discretion given. We are, therefore, on this aspect of the matter in respectful agreement with the view expressed by the Division Bench in the case of (1965) 69 Cal WN 249. In the judgment of reference, reliance was placed on a decision in the case of (1955) 59 Cal WN 776. In our opinion that case did not deal with the nature of the discretion given to the Magistrate under Section 363 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923 or to the Commissioner under Section 414 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951. Therefore, it is not necessary to discuss the aforesaid decision in detail. Reliance was also placed in the referring judgment on a decision in the case of Pramila Sundari Dasi v. Corpn. of Calcutta of P. B. Mukharji, J., (as his Lordship then was). The facts of that case were slightly different. But it appears that there is some observation by the learned Judge to the effect that the Corporation had no power to allow an unauthorised construction to continue by virtue of an order under Section 414 of the Act. If, by the said observation, it was meant by the learned judge that the Commissioner had no discretion at all, in an appropriate case, not to order demolition even in a case where the construction was in violation of the rules, with respect we cannot agree with the said view for the reasons mentioned hereinbefore. We will now deal with the two questions mentioned in the referring judgment. So far as the first question mentioned hereinbefore we are of the opinion that the Commissioner has a discretion either to make an order for demolition or not to make an order for demolition. That discretion is in no way circumscribed, but the Commissioner cannot act arbitrarily or on extraneous grounds. If on consideration of the facts of a particular case the Commissioner is satisfied that there is sufficient cause why an order for demolition should not be made even in case of unauthorised construction infringing rules which are either not relaxable under the Act or which have not been relaxed, he has the discretion not to make an order for demolition. That disposes of the second question raised in the referring judgment.

6. Counsel for the respondent adjoining owner contended that in the order in question the Commissioner had not indicated any reason. Counsel is right. Quasi judicial authorities should give some indication of the reason in the order. But though no reasons had been stated in the order, the background of the making of the order has been fully explained in the affidavit of the Corporation of Calcutta and in view of the fact that it appears to us that it was a very small infraction that was the reason for making the order in question, especially in view of the fact that there was some construction before and the new construction did not materially affect the amenities of the adjoining premises. This matter has continued for a very long time and it would not be proper in this case to refer the matter back to the Commissioner for the purpose of stating the reasons. We must, however, emphasise the importance of giving some indications of the reasons in the order. We, therefore, hold that the Commissioner has a discretion to order demolition or not to order demolition even in a case where the construction was unauthorised, but that discretion must be used bona fide and on proper materials and not on the extraneous ground, but upon the facts of each particular case. Having considered the matter from that point of view, it appears to us that we cannot hold that the Commissioner has used discretion in view of the facts and circumstances of this case improperly or arbitrarily.

7. In the aforesaid view of the matter this appeal is allowed, the judgment and order of Banerjee, J., dated 11th July, 1963 are hereby set aside and the application under Article 226 of the Constitution is dismissed and the rule nisi issued is discharged. In the facts and circumstances of this case there will be no order as to costs of this appeal.

A. M. Mitra, Jnanendra Coomarr Dutt, and Motilal Agarwal, for Petitioner; P. K. Sen Gupta and P. N. Palit, for Opposite Party.

AMARESH ROY, J.:— This is an application under Art. 133 (1) (a), (b) & (c) of the Constitution of India, and it arises out of an appeal that was disposed of by the judgment of a Division Bench of this Court composed of by my learned brother the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Amiya Kumar Mookerji sitting with the Hon'ble Mr. Justice P. N. Mookerjee. P. N. Mookerjee, J. has left this Court on superannuation. This application has been assigned to this Bench by my Lord the Hon'ble the Chief Justice by an order dated 19th April, 1972.

2. The application arises out of a proceeding for acquisition of land under the Defence of India Act. Property, sought to be acquired comprised land and structures thereon. The area of the land was 1 bigha 10 cottash and 14 Chs. The Collector's offer was at the rate of Rupees 500/- per cottah for the land and Rupees 30,394/- for the structures. The total offer made by the Collector came to Rs. 48093.02 paise. The claimant claimed at the rate of Rs. 1,500/- per cottah for the land and Rs. 60,274/- for the structures. The claimant also claimed statutory allowance of 15% under the law. The Arbitrator allowed a compensation of Rs. 61,661/- including 15% statutory allowance and interest at the rate of 5% per annum. Against the decision of the Arbitrator the claimant appealed to this Court and by the judgment of the Division Bench mentioned above this Court enhanced the amount of compensation to Rs. 45,334/- for the land and Rs. 30,875/- for the structures. The total coming to Rs. 76,209 with the usual statutory allowance of Rs. 15 per cent. This Court also awarded to the claimant interest at the rate of 5% per annum. That was awarded by the learned Arbitrator but with a little variation as to the period.

3. Against that decision of this Court the present application has been made praying for a certificate of fitness under Art. 133 (1) (a) (b) and (c) of the Constitution of India.

4. Appearing on behalf of the applicant the learned Advocate Mr. A. M. Mitra has contended that the judgment sought to be appealed from is which is not an affirmance and the proposed appeal according to Mr. Mitra satisfies the valuation test. He also contended that it is also a final order because it has finally determined the lease between the parties and therefore, it comes directly under Art. 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution.

5. Mr. Sengupta, appearing on behalf of the respondent contends that the instant case does not come within the provision of Art. 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution, as the decision given by this Court in appeal against the award is not a decree, judgment or final order. The decision of the Arbitrator appointed under Section 19 (1) (b) of the Defence of India Act, is expressly referred to in Section 19 (1) (f) as an "award". An appeal is a continuation of the original proceeding which is an arbitration proceeding. It is contended that the character does not change when it has been brought up before an appellate Court. In this respect two decisions of the Supreme Court have been discussed before us. In the case of Hans Kumar Kishan Chand v. Union of India, AIR 1958 SC 947, their Lordships observed that it is not every decision given by a Court that could be said to be a judgment, decree or order within the provisions of the Civil P. C. It will depend on whether the proceedings in which it was given, came before the Court in its normal civil jurisdiction. Their Lordships referred to the Court for determination by way of arbitration or where it comes by way of appeal against an award, then the decision is not a judgment, decree or order under the Code of Civil Procedure. In that case Supreme Court held that the High Court in hearing and deciding the appeal of the present nature acts essentially as an Arbitration Tribunal, and for that reason the decision of the High Court in the appeal under that provision of the Defence of India Act is not a judgment, decree or order within the meaning of Sections 109 and 110, Civil P. C. In a later decision in the case of Collector Varanashi v. Gouri Shankar Misra, AIR 1968 SC 384 the Supreme Court held that under Section 19 (f) of the Act the High Court functions as a "Court" and not as a designated person or arbitration tribunal. It was held in that decision of the Supreme Court that the decision rendered by the High Court under Section 19 (1) (f) of the Defence of India Act is a 'determination', and hence, it is within the competence of the Supreme Court to grant special leave to appeal under Art. 136 of the Constitution.

6. By effect of those two decisions, in our view, the law stated that High Court in hearing appeals under the Defence of India Act functions as a Court. To that extent the later Supreme Court decision has modified the view of that Court as it appears in the earlier decision mentioned above. But at the same time in the later decision the Supreme Court has left unaltered the previous view that the decision given by the High Court in an appeal against the award is neither a decree, nor a judgment nor final order. But their Lordships have held in that later decision that the decision rendered by the High Court under Section 19 (1) (f) of the Defence of India Act is a "determination". The word 'determination' occurs in Art. 136 but does not occur in Art. 133 of the Constitution of India. In our view the position therefore is that, even if it be held that the proposed appeal satisfy the valuation test, it does not satisfy the other conditions in so far the decision of the Division Bench of this Court dated 12th May, 1970 in appeal against Award under the Defence of India Act is not a decree, judgment or final order within the meaning of Art. 133 (1) of the Constitution. That being so, the certificate of fitness for an appeal to the Supreme Court cannot be granted.

7. In the result the application is dismissed.

8. There will be no order as to cost.

AMIYA KUMAR MOOKERJI, J.:

9. I agree.

Application dismissed.

Two consignments of 145 Bags of Sugar belonging to the plaintiffs were booked on April 1, 1968 under N/R No. 297704 and on May 2, 1968 under R/R. No. 847875 from Biswas and Bazzur respectively on the North Eastern Railway. The goods were to be delivered at Kantapukur on the Eastern Railway. The plaintiff alleged that there was shortage of 530.200 Kgs. in the first consignment and 414.600 Kgs. in the second consignment due to the negligence of the Railway Administration. For the first consignment the plaintiff claimed Rs. 877.27. For the second consignment the plaintiffs claim for Rs. 792.52. The Railway Administration paid to the plaintiff Rs. 731.22 in respect of the first consignment and Rs. 663.68 in respect of the second consignment. The plaintiff instituted the suit for recovery of the balance of Rs. 146.05 for the first consignment and Rs. 129.91 for the second consignment.

2. It appears that both the payments, aforesaid, by the Railway Administration were made in full settlement of the plaintiffs claim but the plaintiff accepted the said sums under protest. The learned Judge has held that the plaintiff's claim with regard to the first consignment was maintainable but as the protest for the second consignment was made long after the receipt of the money, the claim in respect thereof could not be sustained. We do not intend to express any view on these findings.

3. The learned Judge has dismissed the suit altogether on the ground that no fresh notice under Section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure was served on the General Manager of the Railway concerned so far as the balance of the plaintiff's two several sums aforesaid is concerned. In our opinion, the learned Judge has come to the correct conclusions. After acceptance of the two sums, mentioned above by the plaintiffs, a new set of facts had arisen. The said two sums were offered in full settlement of the plaintiff's claims. The plaintiff accepted the said sums, it is alleged, under protest and the plaintiff intended to sue for the balance of his claims. This is a new set of facts giving rise to a cause of action (not pleaded in the notice under Section 80). The reliefs claimed in the suit are also much less than the reliefs claimed in the notice under Section 80. The object of this notice, it is well known, is to give the Government concerned, an opportunity to reconsider its legal position and to make amends or settle the claims without litigation. It is true that the notice should not be construed in a pedantic manner or in a manner completely divorced from common sense. But in the instant case, we find that the Government was given no opportunity at all to consider whether in view of the plaintiff's alleged acceptance under protest the balance of the plaintiff's claims should be paid off. The original notice under Section 80 which the plaintiff had served, did not fulfil the requirements of law. In these premises we are inclined to uphold the judgment of the lower Court.

4. This Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

JANAH, J. :— 5. I agree.
Revision dismissed.

AMIYA KUMAR MOOKERJI, J :—

These are two applications under Article 133 (1) of the Constitution praying for Certificates for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against the judgment and decree of a Division Bench of this Court dated 9th of November, 1970, passed in two appeals from Original Decree Nos. 296 and 377 of 1959. The said appeals were directed against an award given by the Arbitrator, 24-Parganas, in a reference under Section 19 of the Defence of India Act, in respect of payment of terminal compensation. The premises No. 11, Canal South Road, also known as Pagladanga, was requisitioned including the land and structure under the Defence of India Rules. The said property was derequisitioned on 13th of August, 1946. The owner claimed terminal compensation to the tune of Rupees 609424/-. The Lands Hiring and Disposal Department of the Government assessed the compensation at Rs. 154515.50. The owner did not accept the department's assessment, as a result, the matter was referred to the Arbitrator. The reference was originally heard by Sri J. C. Mazumdar, who made an award on 18-8-1951. Against that award both the owner and the Government appealed to this Court. This Court allowed those appeals and the case was remitted back to the Arbitrator for rehearing with certain directions. The case was reheard by the new Arbitrator who passed an award for Rs. 154515.50. From that award, the claimant preferred appeal from Original Decree No. 296 of 1959, the Government also challenged the said award in other appeals — appeal from original decree No. 377 of 1959, seeking to reduce the award to Rs. 53350.00.

2. The Division Bench of this Court allowed the claimant's appeal

No. 296 of 1959 in part, enhanced the award of compensation to Rs. 2,80,759/- and dismissed the Government's appeal No. 377 of 1959.

3. The petitioner, the State of West Bengal being aggrieved against the said judgment and decree of the Division Bench, intends to prefer two appeals to the Supreme Court and prays for Certificate of fitness for leave to appeal under Art. 133 (1) of the Constitution.

4. Mr. Sen Gupta, appearing on behalf of the petitioner, contends that the judgment sought to be appealed from, is one of reversal; the proposed appeal satisfies the valuation test. It is also a final order because it has finally determined the lis between the parties. Therefore, it comes directly under Art. 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution.

5. Mr. Banerjee, appearing on behalf of the respondent, contends that the instant case does not come within the purview of Art. 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution, as the decision given by this Court in appeal against the award is not a decree, judgment or final order. The decision of the Arbitrator appointed under Section 19 (1) (b) of the Defence of India Act, is expressly referred to in Section 19 (1) (f) as an 'award'. An appeal is a continuation of the original proceeding and if the original proceedings are arbitration proceedings, their character do not change when they are brought up before an appellate tribunal. In support of his contentions, Mr. Banerjee relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Hans Kumar Kishen Chand v. Union of India, AIR 1958 SC 947.

6. The Supreme Court observed in that case that it is not every decision given by a Court that could be said to be a judgment, decree or order within the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. It will depend on whether the proceedings in which it was given, came before the Court in its normal civil jurisdiction. When the dispute is referred to the Court for determination by way of arbitration or where it comes by way of appeal against an award, then the decision is not a judgment, decree or order under the Code of Civil Procedure. The Supreme Court came to the conclusion that the word 'arbitration' in Section 19 (1) (g) of the Act covered the entire proceedings from their commencement before the Arbitrator to their termination in the High Court on appeal, where an appeal had been preferred, and the High Court in hearing and deciding the appeal, acted essentially as an Arbitration Tribunal. Therefore, the decision of the High Court in the appeal under that provision, is not a judgment, decree or order within the meaning of Sections 109 and 110, Civil Procedure Code.

7. The above judgment of the Supreme Court has again come up for consideration in Collector, Varanashi v. Gouri Shankar Misra, AIR 1968 SC 384. In that case, the Supreme Court held that under Section 19 (f) of the Act the High Court functions as a 'Court' and not as 'a designated person' or 'Arbitration Tribunal'. And it is further held that the decision rendered by the High Court under Section 19 (1) (f) of the Defence of India Act is a 'determination', and hence, it is within the competence of the Supreme Court to grant special leave to appeal under Art. 136 of the Constitution.

8. Mr. Sen Gupta contends that the Supreme Court held in the above case, AIR 1968 SC 384 that the High Court is a 'Court', accordingly, it should be held that the order passed in the appeal under Section 19 (1) (f) is a final order within the meaning of Art. 133 (1) (f) of the Constitution.

9. It is true that the Supreme Court did not accept the position that the High Court is not a Court when it hears appeal under Section 19 (1) (f) of the Act but at the same time in the later decision the Supreme Court has left unaltered the previous view in Hans Kumar Kissen Chand's case, AIR 1958 SC 947 that the decision given by the High Court in an appeal against the award, is neither a decree, judgment or final order. Moreover, in the Collector of Varanashi's case, AIR 1968 SC 384 the Supreme Court has specifically held that the decision rendered by the High Court under S. 19 (1) (f) of the Act is a 'determination' which occurs in Art. 136 but does not occur in Art. 133. The position, therefore, is that although both the proposed appeals satisfy the valuation test but they do not satisfy the other conditions in so far as that the decision of the Division Bench of this Court dated 9th of November, 1970, in appeal against an award under the Defence of India Act, is not a decree, judgment or final order within the meaning of Art. 133 (1) of the Constitution. That being so, no Certificate of fitness to appeal to the Supreme Court can be granted.

10. In the result, these applications are dismissed.

11. There will be no order as to costs.

Applications dismissed.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, J.:—

This Rule is against an order of Amaresh Roy, J. made on the 23rd November, 1971. The plaintiff instituted an Ejectment Suit in the City Civil Court. By its judgment delivered on July 12, 1971, the City Civil Court passed a decree for ejectment. The tenant-defendant preferred an appeal to this Court. It was Appeal No. 2365 of 1971. In this appeal the tenant-defendant made an application for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from executing the ejectment decree. This application for injunction came up for hearing before Amaresh Roy, J. and His Lordship dismissed the application on the 23rd November 1971. Against this order of dismissal the tenant-defendant has preferred a Letters Patent Appeal and this Rule has been obtained in connection with that appeal.

2. Mr. Roy Choudhury appearing for the plaintiff in the Ejectment Suit has raised a preliminary objection. He says that the order of Amaresh Roy, J. dismissing the application for injunction is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. The order according to Mr. Roy Choudhury does not affect the merits of the controversy between the parties nor does it determine any right or liability of any of the parties. In other words, the order does not decide either wholly or partly any of the matters in dispute in the suit itself. Mr. Roy Choudhury contends that the word 'judgment' in Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent means a judgment or decree which decides the case one way or the other either in its entirety or in part. It does not, says Mr. Roy-choudhury, mean a decision or order of an interlocutory character, which merely decides some isolated point not affecting the merits of the case. Learned Counsel has referred us to a large number of decisions in support of his contention as aforesaid. We do not intend to deal with all the cases cited. For our purpose in this matter it is necessary to mention the decision of Sir Richard Couch, C. J., in the Justices of Peace v. The Oriental Gas Co., (1872) 8 Beng LR 433. Couch, C. J. has stated:

"We think 'judgment' in clause 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability. It may be final, or preliminary or interlocutory, the difference between them being that a final judgment determines the whole cause or suit, and a preliminary or interlocutory judgment determines only a part of it, leaving other matters to be determined".

3. This view of Couch, C. J. has been considered from time to time by numerous decisions by this Court as well as other High Courts and the definition of 'judgment' which the learned Chief Justice gave was variedly interpreted. In a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Tuljaram Row v. Alagappa, (1912) ILR 35 Mad 1 (FB), White, C. J. has considered the view of Couch, C. J. and has stated: "The test seems to me to be not what is the form of adjudication but what is its effect in the suit or proceeding in which it is made."

4. White, C. J. has laid down three tests for determining whether an order is a 'judgment' within the meaning of the corresponding clause of the Madras Letters Patent. These tests are as follows:—

(1) If its effect is to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned; or

(2) if the non-compliance therewith will have the effect to put an end to such suit or proceeding; or

(3) if it is passed in an independent proceeding which is ancillary to the suit (not instituted as a step towards judgment, but with a view to rendering the judgment effective when obtained) e.g., an order on an application for temporary injunction or for the appointment of a receiver.

5. Mookerjee, J. (sitting with Patterson, J.) in Lea Badin v. Upendra Mohan Roy Chaudhury, 39 Cal WN 155 = (AIR 1935 Cal 35) had to deal with an order made by a single Judge on the Original Side of this Court discharging an interim receiver appointed ex parte. His Lordship was of the view that the order was appealable. It was a 'judgment' within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. It is also appealable under Order 43, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Mookerjee, J. has considered extensively the view of Sir Richard Couch, C. J. and that of White, C. J. of the Madras High Court. His Lordship presiding over this Division Bench has expressed the hope that some day this Court would "abandon its fond adherence to the antiquated definition of Couch, C. J. and boldly acknowledge its allegiance to the tests laid down by White, C. J."

6. This is a Division Bench judgment therefore, that followed the third principle laid down by White, C. J. and held that the order in question was appealable.

7. In another Division Bench in Shorab Merwanji Modi v. Mansata Film Distributors, 61 Cal 559 at p. 565 = (AIR 1957 Cal 727) Chakravartti, C. J., has stated that even Sir Richard Couch himself did not adhere to the strict construction which he had laid down in his subsequent decisions. Chakravartti, C. J., is inclined to treat the Madras test as only a variant of the Calcutta test. More or less the same view was adopted in the Division Bench Judgment of this Court delivered by P. N. Mookerjee, J., in Mohammed Felumeah v. S. Mondal, AIR 1960 Cal 582. P. N. Mookerjee, J. has stated in paragraph 18 of the judgment at page 587 that the strict construction of the Calcutta test to which Chakravartti, C. J. referred, is no longer pertinent after the Supreme Court's observation in Asrumati's case, AIR 1953 SC 198.

8. The position, therefore, is that in the present state of the law it is open to us to apply the third test of White,

C. J. to the facts of this case. The order of Amaresh Roy, J. refusing to grant an injunction restraining execution of the judgment decree was passed in an independent proceeding which was ancillary to the appeal and as such it is a 'judgment' within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. We hold that this is an appealable order.

9. By consent of parties the appeal is also treated as in the day's list and this Rule and the appeal are disposed of as follows:

(1) there will be an order of injunction restraining the plaintiff in the ejectment suit from executing the ejectment decree passed by the City Civil Court till the disposal of F. A. T. No. 2365 of 1971;

(2) the tenant-defendant is directed to deposit in the City Civil Court by the 30th June 1972 all arrears of rent upto April 1972 if such arrears have not already been deposited with the Tikha Controller;

(3) the tenant-defendant will deposit in the City Civil Court the sum of Rs. 36 payable by him in respect of the month of May 1972 on or before the 15th June 1972 and would go on depositing the said sum month by month according to the English Calendar on or before the 15th day of the following month;

(4) the plaintiff in the Ejectment Suit will be at liberty to withdraw all sums deposited in terms of this order in the City Civil Court as also deposits, if any, made with the Tikha Controller;

(5) this order is made without prejudice to the rights and contentions of both the parties;

(6) there will be no order as to costs of this rule and the appeal out of which this Rule arises;

(7) the hearing of the main appeal may be expedited.

JANAH, J.:— 10. I agree.

Appeal allowed.

C. R. No. 1452 (W) of 1971, D/- 15-5-1972.

(A) Letters Patent (Calcutta) (1865) — Constitutional validity — Letters Patent is still in force within meaning of Art. 372 read with Art. 225 of the Constitution — It cannot also be struck down as ultra vires the Preamble of the Constitution. (X-Ref:— Constitution of India, Preamble, Arts. 372 read with Art. 225). (Paras 35, 36)

EP/HP/D169/72/RSK

The provisions of Section 106 of the Government of India Act, 1919, S. 223 of the Government of India Act, 1935, Cl. 2 (1) of India (Adaptation of Existing Laws) Order, 1947, and of Section 18 (3) of Independence Act, 1947 have saved Letters Patent, 1865, which was the existing law. Further, provisions of S. 50 (2) (d) of the Advocates Act, 1961, which have only altered some of the provisions regarding admission of the Advocates, Vakils and Attorneys lend assurance that the provisions of Letters Patent continued even after commencement of the Constitution. (Paras 25, 27, 28, 31, 33, 35)

It is unfortunate that even after so many years of Independence of India we are being governed by the law which indicates the foreign domination but on that score alone the Letters Patent cannot be struck down inasmuch as the said Letters Patent has been adopted and protected under the provisions of the Constitution itself. (Para 36)

(B) Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act (1919). — Fixation of territorial limit of original jurisdiction based on economic and historical reasons is not ultra vires, Art. 14 of the Constitution. (X-Ref:— Constitution of India, Art. 14.) (Paras 43, 47)

People residing outside the jurisdiction as fixed by Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 can be said to be a class by themselves and those persons who are living inside the jurisdiction so settled may also be said to be a class to be treated similarly. As such there cannot be any discrimination amongst the persons so placed in those different areas. (Para 43)

If the historical evolution of the judicial system as well as socio-economic complex of the country is traversed it is seen that the different presidency Towns are replete with peculiar features of their own, necessitating special provisions in law that are distinct from other areas of the States where such Towns are situated. These distinctive provisions in law are recognised by law as reasonable classification and as such cannot be impugned on the ground of discrimination violative of Art. 14. (Para 47)

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 14 — Challenge to constitutionality of statute on ground of unreasonable classification — Burden of proof. (Para 45)

It is incumbent upon the petitioner who invokes Article 14 to furnish all facts in his affidavit which will render the classification unreasonable and also to show how he has been affected by the offending law. (Para 45)

(D) Advocates Act (1961), S. 34 (2) (iii) — Rule-making power conferred on High Court is not ultra vires Art. 14 of the Constitution. (X-Ref:— Constitution of India, Art. 14.) (Para 52)

Clause (iii) to sub-section (2) of Section 34 of the Act is a merely enabling section giving authority to the High Court to make rules for some specified purpose. The said provision by itself cannot be assailed on the ground of discrimination. Further no Court can enter into discussion on the basis of a hypothetical proposition that if rules are framed seeking to impose any restrictions as to persons who shall be entitled respectively to plead and to act in the High Court in exercise of its original jurisdiction they will be discriminatory. The rule-making power which has been given to the High Court is given to the best possible authority in whom the people and the legislature have absolute confidence. (Paras 50, 51)

K. J. John, for Petitioners; Gouri Nath Mitter, Advocate-General, S. C. Bose, D. Gupta, Sr. Standing Counsel, B. C. Basak, Jr. Govt. Advocate, C. R. K. Dutt, Bireswar Bhattacharjee, Amar Nath Dhole, Subimal Mitra, Pramatha Nath Palit, and Miss Sabitri Sen (for No. 5), for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioners who are citizens of India have challenged the constitutionality of the Letters Patent of 1965, the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 and Section 34 (2) (3) of the Advocates Act, 1961 on the ground that they offend the provisions of Article 14 of the Constitution of India.

2. Similar application was filed by the petitioner No. 2 Sri. E. H. Tippto and another which came for consideration before D. Basu J. as to its maintainability. The said petition was dismissed on the ground that there were not sufficient averments to show which would render the alleged classification unreasonable and also to show how they were affected by the offending law. It was held that unless such averments were made the opposite parties could not get an opportunity to controvert such allegations or to set up further grounds for which the classification, if any, may be sustained. D. Basu, J. however, permitted them to file fresh application either by themselves or along with others with proper averments. The said order was passed in C. O. 6796 (W) of 1968 on Jan. 25, 1971.

3. After that, the present application has been filed on 5-2-1971.

4. The petitioner No. 1 is an Advocate practising in this High Court. The petitioner No. 2 is a journalist, auditor, printer and publisher of various newspaper-periodicals and a Director of Engineering Times Publication (P.) Ltd. having its registered office at 8, Dharmatala Street, Calcutta. They made separate averments of their own while challenging the impugned Acts. According to the petitioner No. 1, he is to practise even before the Appellate Side of this High Court and also in the mofussil Court like Alipore. In Alipore Court he can be directly engaged by the client and he can also receive his fees directly from them. Whereas in the Original Side he can only accept the brief through attorneys and his fees through them. Direct appointment and payment of fees, according to him, is full proof original and impressive and also it is satisfactory. His further contention is that the Original Side's rules, customs and practices affect the petitioner's right to practise freely and without any hindrance and as such these rules, customs and practice are discriminatory. By way of example he has said that there are two lists (i) one for Original Side (ii) and another for Appellate Side. For this procedure he is to incur unnecessary expenditure for subscribing two lists.

5. The petitioner No. 1 further states that the provisions of the Letters Patent as well as Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 are illegal, void and ultra vires and injurious to the petitioner practising as an Advocate with all his rights and privileges conferred by the Advocates Act, 1961 and/or discriminatory under Article 14 of the Constitution of India.

6. Next comes the averments made by the petitioner No. 2 who is a journalist about whom reference has already been made. In connection with carrying his profession as a publisher and owning properties and in course of his business both at Calcutta and outside of its jurisdiction he has to file frequently cases in different courts. His contention, inter alia, is that the trial of suits in the very first instance by a High Court Judge is accredited with much better advantages with privileged limitations regarding the appeal stage, and that such adjudication eventually turns out to be more speedy, economic and convenient, and that such advantage is not available in Alipore or other Mofussil Courts. His further contention is that had there been a single jurisdiction and system of doing justice at least within a conceivable and reasonable set of conditions including area, forum, facilities, representation by Advocates etc., a person may get much better treatment and also good result in such cases.

7. Both the petitioners have challenged the validity and vires of the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 passed in pursuance of/or in exercise of the powers vested by clause 11 of the Letters Patent for the High Court of Judicature for the Presidency of Calcutta. They also have challenged the Letters Patent of the Year 1865 which was proclaimed by Queen Victoria in the Year 1865. It is said that the Letters Patent must have come to an end after the passing of the Government of India Act, 1915, Government of India Act, 1935 and particularly after the Constitution of India came into force. It was contended that as the Letters Patent of the Year 1865 was illegal and ultra vires, the Act, namely, the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 which was passed under the power derived from clause 11 of the Letters Patent, 1865 should also be considered to be invalid, illegal and ultra vires. They further challenged the provisions of the above mentioned Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 which will be referred hereafter as the Act on the ground that the local limits as contained in the said Act which is still now invoked is wholly illegal, unreasonable and discriminatory and that the same having not been based upon any reasonable classification at present is hit by Art. 14 of the Constitution of India. According to the petitioners, the Letters Patent aforesaid and all the acts, things and practices based thereupon are highly illegal and outrageous to the elementary concept of nationality and sovereignty and repugnant to the Constitution of India inasmuch as they are couched in the statutory language of the Victoria era and these documents should be considered to be colonial documents still being continued and as such it affects the sovereignty of India. Accordingly, they should be struck down.

8. The validity of Section 34 (2) (3) of the Advocates Act, 1961 has also been challenged on the ground that it is hit under Art. 14 of the Constitution of India.

9. Certain other allegations were made against the Attorneys and some controversies were raised in the matter of appointment of High Court Judges but at the time of hearing, these matters were not pressed. Accordingly they made a prayer for (a) issue of a Rule nisi calling upon the respondent to show cause why they should not be restrained from acting further in the purported exercise of power under the letters patent in the High Court at Calcutta; (b) restraining them to give effect to the limits as prescribed in the High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 (XV 1919) prescribing ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the same; (c) the declaration that Section 34 (2) and (3) of the Advocates Act 1961 is ultra vires the Constitution of India; (d) a Rule calling upon the respondent or such of them as may be appropriate to show cause why a writ of the nature of certiorari directing the respondent or some of them to bring the relevant records and paper connecting with the letters patent for the High Court at Calcutta and the Rules prevailing in the ordinary original civil jurisdiction prescribing such limits as indicated in the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919.

10. On the averments of the petition a Rule nisi was issued to show cause against the prayers made by the petitioners as noted in the order dated May 26, 1971.

11. The notice having been served, the respondents Nos. 4, 5 and 8 have filed affidavit-in-opposition. Respondent No. 4 is the Secretary, Bar Library Club. He has stated, inter alia, that the allegations of the petitioners are not true and none of the acts and also the Letters Patent as referred to in the petition can be said to be ultra vires as the same do not offend Article 14 of the Constitution. According to him, requirements of any Rule of law or of practice prevailing in the Original Side of this High Court is in no way incompatible with the petitioner No. 1's right as an Advocate under the Advocates Act.

12. The respondent No. 8, Registrar, Original Side has also supported the contention of respondent No. 4 in addition to that in his affidavit-in-opposition he has referred to some provisions of the Rules — "Rules of the High Court relating to application under Art. 226 of the Constitution" and submitted that it ought to have been filed in the Original Side and that it was not maintainable in the Appellate Side of this Court. Respondent No. 5, Secretary, Bar Association has also filed an affidavit-in-opposition. He has seriously contested the allegations of respondent No. 8, Registrar, Original Side that such an application is not maintainable in the Appellate Side, like the petitioners, he has asserted that subsections (2) and (3) of Section 34 of the Advocates Act, 1961 is ultra vires the Constitution.

13. All the respondents have been represented by different Advocates. Mr. R. C. Deb argued on behalf of the respondent No. 4 i.e., the Secretary of the Bar Library Club. The learned Advocate General also made his submission before this Court on behalf of the Chief Justice of the High Court at Calcutta but no affidavit-in-opposition has been filed by any other respondents except respondent Nos. 4, 5 and 8. Mr. Jhon appears on behalf of the petitioners, Mr. R. C. Deb and the Advocate General appeared on behalf of the Bar Library Club and Chief Justice respectively. Mr. Dutt appearing on behalf of the Secretary Bar Association has supported petitioners on their allegation regarding the validity of sub-clauses 2 and 3 of S. 34 of the Advocates Act. Other learned Advocates adopted the arguments of Mr. Deb and the learned Advocate General.

14. Mr. Jhon has confined his arguments to three points:

(i) That the Letters Patent 1865 came to an end after the passing of the Government of India Act, 1915, Government of India Act, 1935 and Independence Act, 1947. Even if it is said that Letters Patent, 1865 was not disturbed by those Acts, after the promulgation of the Constitution of India on the 26th January, 1950, the same could not survive. Accordingly, Letters Patent 1865 is illegal having lost its force and its authority being superseded by the Acts referred to above and as such it is ultra vires and the authorities concerned should be restrained from giving effect to the provisions of the said Letters Patent.

(ii) That the provisions of the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act, 1919 is bad in law and ultra vires the Constitution on two-fold grounds: (a) the said Act having been based under the authority of clause 11 of Letters Patent, 1865 is bad and illegal, inasmuch as the Letters Patent had no force at the time when the said Act was enacted (b) that the areas butted and bounded in the said Act to show the boundary of Presidency Town of Calcutta was unreasonable and arbitrary. Accordingly it offends Article 14 of the Constitution. As such it is ultra vires and should be struck down.

(iii) That the provisions of the sub-sections (2), (3) of Section 34 of the Advocates Act, 1961 are discriminatory inasmuch as it discriminates Advocates practising in the High Court exercising original jurisdiction in the matter of pleading and acting. Accordingly it also offends Article 14 of the Constitution.

15. These are the points which have been formulated by Mr. Jhon. It has been noticed that various allegations were made in the petition but at the time of argument Mr. Jhon has confined himself to the points as referred to above.

16. Before I proceed further I would like to give a short history as to how the High Court at Calcutta was constituted. The history how the judicial system existed during the time of East India Company and how the High Court at Calcutta was constituted has been noted by Mr. Herbert Cowell, Barrister-at-law in his Tagore Law Lecture in the book named and styled as History and Constitution of the Courts and Legislative Authorities in India. There was great uncertainty in judicial administration during the time of the East India Company in India and in Bengal particularly. During the period of 1726 and 1774 the Mayor's Court at Calcutta which derived its authority and jurisdiction directly from the Crown in England was established. In this period the Company's Courts and the Courts manned by the representatives of the Mogul also continued to exercise jurisdiction concurrently and independently of the Mayor's Court. Thereafter one regulating Act was passed in 1773 authorising establishment of Supreme Court. Next Supreme Court in Calcutta which derived authority and jurisdiction directly from the Crown was established. During this period also the Company's Courts continued to exercise concurrent and separate jurisdiction. The establishment of the Supreme Court at Calcutta by itself could not solve the problem. On the contrary, the Supreme Court came in direct conflict with the Courts established by East India Company exercising their own jurisdiction.

17. To stabilise the uncertainties and chaos in judicial administration, British Act, 1861 (24-25 Vict. C. A. P. 104) was passed authorising Her Majesty, by Letters Patent to erect and establish a High Court of judicature at Fort William in Bengal for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William and also to erect and establish High Courts of Madras and Bombay for those Presidencies. The said Act empowered Her Majesty, Queen of England to establish High Courts in India by Letters Patent and such Letters Patent to contain the power and jurisdiction of the different High Courts to be established. Pursuant to this, Queen of England issued Letters Patent of 1862 establishing the High Court in Bengal. The said Letters Patent was replaced by the Letters Patent of 1865. Since then the High Court at Calcutta came into existence.

18. I am tempted to refer to the observations made by Mr. E. C. Ormand, in his revised notes on the Rules of the High Court of Judicature of Fort William in Bengal (1914) in its introduction while giving short history about the establishment of High Court at Calcutta. Though it is a very concised one, it depicts a true picture of the uncertainties of the position of the judicial system during the time of East India Company necessitating the formation of the High Court at Calcutta. The following are his observations:

"It was, however, out of the growing pains of this conflict of jurisdiction and violence of dispute to which it led and the subsequent amicable composition of that dispute that the present High Court in its existing form was born." That is how High Court was established with all its powers and privileges.

19. After the establishment of the said High Court so far as the Presidency Town of Calcutta was concerned, it effected a merger of the Supreme Court with other Courts as existed during the time of East India Company. In the meantime the extinction of the East India Company was completed and the Mofussil Courts which were Company's Courts were taken over by the Crown and they were made Subordinate to the High Court. Thus by the measures connected with the establishment of the Calcutta High Court there was, for the first time, created a unified judicial system for the whole province of Bengal under a single uniform control, that of the High Court itself.

20. As already referred, in 1865 new Letters Patent replacing those of 1862 were issued. The opposite parties' contention is that under those Letters Patent, from then upto the present day the High Court at Calcutta drew its jurisdiction with certain modifications made at times by local legislature.

21. In this background it is to be considered whether these Letters Patent are still in existence which might be said to be the source of powers and jurisdiction which High Court is exercising in certain matters. Mr. Jhon has submitted that these Letters Patent have come to an end.

22. Mr. Jhon has challenged the validity of the Letters Patent, 1865 and asserted that the provisions of the said Letters Patent came to an end after the passing of Govt. of India Act, 1919. But I am afraid that this contention of Mr. Jhon cannot be accepted in view of the provisions made in the Act itself. Part IX of the said Act made provisions for the Constitution of the High Court. Section 101 of that Act referred to the High Courts established by the Letters Patent. Section 106 of the Act clearly made provisions for the continuance of the powers and authority of the High Courts which were vested in them by Letters Patent. It was further provided that subject to the provisions of any such Letters Patent, all such jurisdictions, powers and authority as were vested in those Courts at the commencement of that Act would continue. Thus it is seen that the said contention of the petitioners is not sustainable and the same fails.

23. It has further been argued that the Letters Patent should be deemed to have come to an end after the passing of the Government of India Act, 1935. Chapter II of Part IX made provisions for the High Court in India. Section 219 referred to the several High Courts including the High Court of Calcutta. Section 223 of that Act made provisions for the jurisdiction of existing High Courts. It runs thus:

"Subject to the provisions of this part of the Act to the provisions of any order in Council made under this or any other Act and to the provisions of any Act of the appropriate legislature enacted by virtue of powers conferred on that legislature by this Act, the jurisdiction of and the law administered in, any existing High Court, and the respective powers of the Judges thereof in relation to the administration of the justice in the Court, including any power to make rules of Court and to regulate the sittings of the Court and of members thereof sitting alone or in Division Courts, shall be the same as immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act".

24. Reference may be made to the above provisions regarding the "law administered in any existing High Court". That clearly shows that the law which was administered by the High Court at the relevant time was to continue. In view of the provisions referred to above, Mr. Deb has submitted that the Letters Patent as existed at the appointed date should be considered to be continuing even under the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935.

25. I also agree with the said contention of the learned Counsel for the respondent No. 4 and I hold that the passing of the Government of India Act, 1935 had no adverse effect on the Letters Patent, 1865 which were so long guiding the procedure, rules and regulations made by the High Courts under the provisions of the said Letters Patent.

26. Mr. Jhon has also submitted that even if the Letters Patent could be said to be continuing after the passing of the Government of India Act, 1935, the same must be deemed to have come to an end after the enactment of Indian Independence Act, 1947 giving birth to two dominions, namely, India and Pakistan.

27. In support of his contention Mr. Jhon has, however, referred to the definition of "existing Indian Law" as appears in clause 2 (1) of the India (Adaptation of Existing Indian Laws) Order, 1947 and contended that it excluded any Act of Parliament, or any order in Council, Rule or other instrument made under an Act of Parliament or the General Clauses Act, 1897. But he has omitted to note that in that very definition the laws in force were saved. The Letters Patent, 1865 was the law in force and regulated the powers of the High Court in Calcutta. Thus the said definition is of no avail to the petitioners. In addition reference may be made to Section 18 (3) of the Indian Independence Act, which again saved the existing laws. So Mr. Jhon's contention in this respect is not acceptable.

28. Mr. Jhon has next submitted that deletion of the Letters Patent from the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935 is evident from some of the provisions of India Provisional Constitution (Amendment) Orders, 1948. By clause 2 (a) of that Order the words "His Majesty" and "Letters Patent" as appearing in the proviso (a) to sub-section (1) of Section 219 of the Government of India Act, 1935 were substituted by the words "the Governor General" and "orders" respectively. From the above Mr. Jhon has contended that the "Letters Patent" were omitted and as such it should be held that the existence of the provisions of the Letters Patent should be taken to have come to an end. It is, however, to be noted that the said amendment was made in respect of the power for the establishment of a High Court to replace any Courts mentioned in sub-section (1) of S. 219 of the Government of India Act, 1935. Similarly, the power which was given to His Majesty to constitute or re-constitute High Court by Letters Patent under S. 229 of Government of India Act 1935 was delegated to the Governor General and that he was further authorised by "order" to constitute or re-constitute High Court and that the said Governor General was not to derive his power for such purpose from the Letters Patent. Thus the amendment which was made in India Provisional Constitution (Amendment) Order 1948 was made for that specific purpose. The said order, however, did not touch the other provisions of the Letters Patent. As such the said contention also fails.

29. Mr. John has lastly contended that after the promulgation of Constitution of India on 26-1-1950, the Letters Patent ceased to have any force. In support to his contention he has referred to the definition of "existing Central Law" as appears in clause 2 (1) (b) (iii) of the Adoption of Laws Order, 1950. He has further referred to the definition of "Indian Law" as defined in sub-section (3) of the General Clauses Act (Act 10 of 1897). According to Mr. Jhon the said definition of "existing Central Law" excludes an Act of Parliament of United Kingdom or any order in Council, Rule and other Instruments made under such an Act. As the letters patent is an enactment under the provisions of Parliament of United Kingdom it should be considered to have been excluded from the definition of existing central laws and accordingly the Letters Patent which is the outcome of the Act of Parliament of United Kingdom, should not be considered as the "existing Central Law".

30. Next Mr. Jhon placed before me the definition of "Indian Law" as defined in sub-section (29) of S. 3 of the General Clauses Act (Act X) of 1897. It runs thus:—

"Indian Law shall mean any Act, Ordinance, Regulation, Rule, Order, by-law or other Instrument, which before the commencement of the Constitution, had the force of law in any province of India or part thereof or thereafter had the force of law in any Part A State or Part C State or part thereof but does not include any Act of Parliament of United Kingdom or any Order in Council, rule or other instrument made under such Act".

Mr. Jhon has submitted from the above definition that as the Letters Patent was promulgated under the provisions of the Act of Parliament it should never be considered to be a part and parcel of the Indian Law and that it should have no application in any part of India after the promulgation of the Constitution. From the above Mr. Jhon has submitted that the Letters Patent should be deemed to have come to an end.

31. Mr. Deb, learned Counsel for the respondent No. 4, on the other hand, has disputed the said contention and asserted that the Letters Patent cannot be said to have come to an end. According to Mr. Deb, those provisions are still in force. Mr. Deb has drawn the attention of the Court to Chapter V of the Part VI of the Constitution of India. Article 214 to Art. 231 of the Constitution relate to the establishment and Constitution of the High Court as well as appointment of High Court Judges and some other provisions concerning High Court. The relevant Article for our consideration is 225 of the Constitution. The said Article reads "subject to the provisions of this Constitution and to the provisions of any law of the appropriate legislature made by virtue of powers conferred on that legislature by this Constitution, the jurisdiction of and the law administered in, any existing High Court, and the respective powers of the Judges thereof in relation to the administration of justice in the Court including any power to make rules of Court and to regulate the sittings of the Court and of members thereof sitting alone or in Division Courts, shall be the same as immediately before the commencement of this Constitution". Article 372 (1) may also be referred to in this connection. It provides

"notwithstanding the repeal by this Constitution of the enactment referred to in Art. 395 but subject to the other provisions of this Constitution all the law in force in the territory of India immediately before the commencement of this Constitution shall continue in force therein until altered or repealed or amended by competent legislature or other competent authority"

Mr. Deb has submitted that the underlined portions of the Articles referred above are relevant for the determination of the point at issue. The Letters Patent, being the law in force and the law administered on the appointed day, should be taken as continuing as law of the land. In answer to the contention of Mr. Jhon regarding the implication of the "existing Central Laws" — Mr. Deb, on the other hand, contended that we should not import the words "existing central laws" in those Articles (Arts. 225 and 372) to give some meaning to the same when those words are excluded and the words "law in force" and "Law administered" have been used. I also agree with the said contentions of Mr. Deb and hold that the Letters Patent 1865 being the law in force and also being the law administered, the same were not affected by the definition of the "existing Central Law". As such the said contention of Mr. Jhon fails.

32. In this connection the attention of the Court has been drawn to the clause 15 and clause 21 of the Supplementary provisions in Part III of the Adoption of Laws Order 1950. The cumulative effect of these clauses is also to save the laws in force and as such Mr. Deb has contended that under no circumstances the Letters Patent can be said to have been repealed or to have come to an end.

33. Mr. Deb next submitted that the contention of Mr. Jhon regarding the definition of "Indian Law" as appears in sub-section (29) of Sec. 3 of the General Clauses Act cannot be supported. Mr. Deb has referred to the above Arts. 225 and 372 of the Constitution of India and submitted that in those Articles there is no reference to the "Indian Law". Accordingly the definition of 'Indian Law' as given in the General Clauses Act will have no bearing on the point at issue. On giving my anxious consideration to the submission made at the bar by the respective parties, I am of the opinion that there is considerable force in the submission of Mr. Deb. In this connection reference may also be made to clause (d) of sub-section (2) of S. 50 of the Advocates Act (Act 25 of 1961) by which the provisions of the Letters Patent of the High Court and any other law in so far as they relate to admission and enrolment of legal practitioners have been repealed. The result is that the clauses 9 and 10 of the Letters Patent 1865 by which the powers were given to the High Court in admitting Advocates, Vakils and Attorney and in making Rules for their qualifications have been repealed and provisions have been made, in that respect, in the Advocates Act itself. It is, therefore, seen that even in the year 1961, after the Constitution of India came into force, the Letters Patent was in force and that some of its provisions regarding the admission of the Advocates, Vakils and Attorneys were only altered and new provisions have been made by the Indian Parliament. This, therefore, in my view lends further assurance to the contention of Mr. Deb that provisions of the Letters Patent which have not yet been repealed or altered by the Constitution of India or by any other legislation passed, are still continuing and regulate the working of the Calcutta High Court in the State of West Bengal. For the reasons stated above, I hold that the provisions of the Letters Patent which have not yet been repealed or altered are still continuing in force.

34. According to Mr. Jhon the provisions in Chapter V, Part VI of the Constitution of India are self-sufficient and all the powers have been given thereunder to High Court to run its administration and as such the letters patent are deemed to have been repealed by implication. The said contention has got little force inasmuch as the High Court's Civil Jurisdiction has been incorporated in clause 11 of the Letters Patent which cannot be found in the Constitution itself. Similarly, under clause 12 the High Court of Calcutta have been exercising the original jurisdiction as to suits as mentioned in that clause. In clause 13 the High Court's extraordinary civil jurisdiction has been provided. Clause 15 provides for the appeals which are not otherwise provided for. In this connection reference may be made to Section 96 of the Civil P. C. Therein provision has been made for appeal from original decree passed by the Court but no such provisions have been made with regard to the judgment and decree passed in the Original Side of the High Court presided over by a Judge of that Court. But such appeals may be preferred against such judgment and decree in this High Court under the provisions of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. That also shows that the Letters Patent exists and are continuing in force. It is needless for me to refer to other provisions of the Letters Patent upto clause 45. Each one of these clauses have got its special importance and that but for these clauses the High Court in its Original, Appellate and Criminal Jurisdiction could not have worked in accordance with the law, and these powers have been retained by the High Court only under the Letters Patent which are still continuing. The cumulative effect of the above provisions is that the Letters Patent cannot be said to have been abolished either by implication or by any specific provisions of law. In the result, that contention of Mr. Jhon also fails.

35. For the reasons stated above I find that the Letters Patent of 1865 is not ultra vires the Government of India Act 1935 or of the Indian Independence Act 1947 and as such these Letters Patent are still in force within the meaning of Art. 372 read with Article 225 of the Constitution of India.

36. Mr. Jhon next contends that India is a sovereign democratic republic and any law which may be said to challenge the said sovereignty should be declared to be ultra vires the Constitution and as such the same should be struck down. The attention of the Court is drawn to the language of Letters Patent which started with the name of Victoria of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of faith, and it is submitted that the Letters Patent was the law prescribed for colony and it enacted a colonial law, couched and worded with the superior attitude, defying the sovereignty of India, as such it should be struck down as it infringes the sovereignty of India as contained in the preamble of the Constitution. Hence Mr. Jhon has submitted that it is unfortunate that even after so many years of Independence of India, we are being governed by the Law which indicates the foreign domination. Apparently the position appears to be unfortunate but on that score merely alone the Letters Patent cannot be struck down, inasmuch as the said Letters Patent as indicated above, has been adopted and protected under the provisions of the Constitution itself. As such the Letters Patent is now existing under the authority of the Constitution. Hence the above submission of Mr. Jhon cannot be accepted.

37. I shall now deal with the contention of Mr. Jhon by which the constitutionality of the provision of the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 has been challenged. The said Act has been challenged on two-fold grounds:

(a) that the said Act having been based under the authority of clause 11 of the Letters Patent 1865 is bad and illegal in view of the fact that the Letters Patent had no force at the time when that Act was enacted.

(b) that the areas butted and bounded in the said Act is unreasonable and arbitrary. Accordingly it offends Art. 14 of the Constitution. As such it should be declared to be ultra vires and should be struck down.

38. The contention of Mr. Jhon with regard to the first point raised above that the Letters Patent having come to an end, the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 cannot be said to be valid law as it was enacted under the authority, derived under the said Letters Patent is not acceptable. In view of my finding that the Letters Patent are still in existence, the contention of Mr. Jhon in this behalf is not sustainable.

39. The second contention of Mr. Jhon with regard to the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 may now be taken up for consideration. It requires a detailed discussion as it involves some complicated question of law. His main contention is that in Calcutta in spite of great extension of the town in recent years, the original civil jurisdiction is at the present day absurdly confined to illogically restricted limits which do not even cover the whole city. Accordingly it should be considered to be unreasonable and arbitrary enactment making a discrimination between a person and person, denying the citizen equality before the law or the equal protection of the laws within the territory of the State of West Bengal.

40. Mr. Deb, on the contrary, has submitted that in the matter of fixation of territorial jurisdiction the legislature must have unfettered power of selection, otherwise it may lead to an absurd situation. Mr. Deb has drawn the attention of the Court to certain statements of the petitioners, in the petition filed, wherein it is said:—

"Had there been a single jurisdiction and system of doing justice at least within a conceivable and reasonable set of conditions including area, forum facilities, representation by Advocate etc. your petitioner No. 2 states that your petitioner's legal rights and obligations were to receive a much better treatment and the present injury to your petitioner's right to property including the right to get justice having been caused by the factors aforesaid which are discriminatory or at least been rendered as such by historical change of events and circumstances would not have occurred". From the above it is contended by Mr. Deb that according to the petitioner the working in the original jurisdiction of the High Court at Calcutta is based on sound principles and that the litigants are to get better justice. Accordingly there is no sense in saying that the system which is better should be struck down to bring in a system which is inferior (if at all).

41. Mr. Deb next contends that it cannot always be said that Art. 14 of the Constitution forbids classification absolutely. According to Mr. Deb it permits classification by legislature, provided the following tests are answered:—

(1) That the classification is founded on an intelligible differentia and

(2) that the differentia has a rational relation to the object to be achieved by statute in question.

According to him classification must be founded on an intelligible differentia which distinguishes persons or things that are grouped together from others left out of the group. The classification may be founded on different bases, namely, geographical or according to objects or occupations or the like. What is necessary is that there must be a nexus between the basis of classification and the object of the enactment. Learned Advocate General also has contended that application of unequal laws or procedure in different parts of the country is reasonably justified on historical reasons and geographical or territorial classification founded on those historical reasons should also be upheld. Mr. Deb has pointed out the history of events which led to the creation of Presidency Town of Calcutta, which has its own peculiarities with regard to its economic and factual background. Accordingly the exercise of the original jurisdiction by the High Court at Calcutta within the specified limits as is seen in the Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 is permissible under the law and it does not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution. In support of his contention he has referred to the decision in case of the State of Madhya Pradesh v. Bhopal Sugar Industries Ltd., AIR 1964 SC 1179. In support of his said contention Mr. Deb also has placed before this Court the decision of Lachmandas v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 222 wherein it has been held by the Supreme Court that it does not always forbid reasonable classification and for this purpose even one person or group of persons can be considered as class, though Art. 14 prohibits discriminatory legislation directed against one individual or class of individuals.

42. To meet the contention of Mr. Jhon that the petitioners are not getting proper justice outside the jurisdiction of the Presidency Town of Calcutta, it is contended by Mr. Deb that such a contention cannot be upheld for the reasons that it is not always discriminatory merely because it involves hardship or inequality of burden. In support of his contention Mr. Deb has referred to the case of Jalan Trading Co. (P) Ltd. v. Mill Majdoor Sabha, AIR 1967 SC 691. Mr. Justice Shah speaking for the Court observed:

"..... if the classification is not patently arbitrary, the Court will not rule it discriminatory merely because it involves hardship or inequality of burden. With a view to secure particular objects a scheme may be selected by the legislature, wisdom whereof may be open to debate; it may even be demonstrated that the scheme is not the best in the circumstances and the choice of the legislature may be shown to be erroneous, but unless enactment fails to satisfy the dual test of intelligible classification and rationality of the relation with the object of the law it will not be subject to judicial interference under Art. 14.

Equal treatment of unequal objects, transaction or persons is not liable to be struck down as discriminatory unless there is simultaneously absence of a rational relation to the object intended to be achieved by law".

43. After careful consideration of the submissions advanced at the bar regarding the point at issue I think that the plea of invalidity on the ground that it infringes Art. 14 of the Constitution must also fail inasmuch as the petitioners can be said to have been placed amongst the persons similarly circumstanced in the area. People residing outside the jurisdiction as fixed by Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 can be said to be a class by themselves and those persons who are living inside the jurisdiction so settled may also be said to be a class to be treated similarly. As such there cannot be any discrimination amongst the persons so placed in those different areas.

44. Mr. Deb also contends that different acts in different parts of the same State can also be sustained on the ground that the differentiation arising from geographical classification is based on historical reasons. Reference has been made to the case of Ramparashad v. State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 1607.

45. In support of the contention of Mr. Deb reference has also been made to the case in AIR 1959 All 660. (Mehar Chand v. State) wherein it has been held that classification may be founded on different basis, namely geographical or according to the objects or occupation or the like. It has also been contended that in addition to the above what is necessary is that there must be a nexus between the basis of classification and the object of the Act under consideration. He further contends that there is a strong presumption that a legislature understands and correctly appreciates the needs of its own people, that its laws are directed to problems made manifest by experience and that its discriminations are based on adequate grounds. That presumption should also be raised in favour of that particular legislation which passed the impugned Act. In support of his contention Mr. Deb has referred to the case of Purushottam Gobindjee Halai v. B. M. Desai, AIR 1956 SC 20. Mr. Deb has also submitted that under the law it is for the person who assails a legislation as discriminatory to establish that it is not based on a valid classification. Thus the onus is on the petitioner to show that. In this connection reference has been made to certain portion of the judgment of Basu, J. passed in C. O. No. 6796(W) of 1968 (reported in AIR 1971 Cal 354) wherein Basu, J. held that it is a settled law that the classification made by legislature would be presumed to be reasonable unless the contrary is alleged and established by the petitioner. Basu, J. further held that it is, therefore, incumbent upon the petitioner who invokes Art. 14 to furnish all facts in his affidavit which will render the classification unreasonable and also to show how he has been affected by the offending law. I most respectfully agree with the said observation of Mr. Justice Basu. No new facts other than these stated in the previous application have been stated for the consideration in this case. That is another infirmity from which this application of the petitioner suffers. In this application the petitioner No. 1 states that he is to subscribe for the two lists—one published for the cases in the Appellate Side and another published for the cases in the Original Jurisdiction of the High Court and for that he is to spend more money. This cannot be considered as discrimination as all the advocates placed in the similar circumstance are to subscribe for those lists, if, of course, they like, to have the same. On the other hand, from the statements of the petitioner No. 2 it is seen that the working in the Original Jurisdiction of the High Court is highly satisfactory and according to him better justice can be had there. For the above reasons it is seen that nothing has been shown by the petitioner by which it can be said that the said classification is discriminatory offending Art. 14 of the Constitution of India.

46. The learned Advocate General contends that in the matter of fixation of limit of original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court by the Act, Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919, the legislature must have considered the difference in the economical structure and the tempo of life in Presidency Town of Calcutta and outside. The case of the Md. Zackeria Firm v. Srinivas & Co. reported in AIR 1957 Mad 403 has been referred in support of the contention that such a classification, if made on that score, should be said to be a reasonable classification. In this context reference may also be made to the decision in In Re B. N. Ramkrishna Naidu, AIR 1955 Mad 100 wherein it has been held that the meaning of equality, contemplated in Art. 14 does not fetter the discretion of the State to pass appropriate laws to meet different situations and solve different problems that arise in the affairs of the State dedicated to the ideal of promoting the common weal of the nation entrusted to its charge. It has further been observed therein:

"In applying the doctrine of equality, therefore, no narrow dogmatic constitutional niceties should hamper the true exposition of the Constitution as a living practical instrument of Government of men and affairs. Thus, equality before the law and the equal protection of the laws would not be offended by territorial discrimination based upon reasonable classification arising from the particular factual background relating thereto".

47. The next submission of the learned Advocate General in this context is that special laws may be made for special areas without offending Art. 14 of the Constitution. In my opinion this submission is well founded. To appreciate this point at the background of petitioner's grievance as made out in the petition, one has to bear in mind that special or specified areas may have special or peculiar problems calling for solution in a particular manner, ways and means of life requiring, tending thereto in a special manner. If the historical evolution of the judicial system as well as of socio-economic complex of our country is traversed it is seen that the different Presidency Towns are replete with peculiar features of their own, necessitating special provisions in law that are distinct from other areas of the States where such Towns are situated. These distinctive provisions in law which have grown out of special and peculiar socio-economic needs of such areas are recognised by law as reasonable classification and as such cannot be impugned on the ground of discrimination violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution. This view also gets support from a Bench decision of this Hon'ble Court as reported in AIR 1955 Cal 138, (Natabar Jana v. The State). Reference to the case in State of Nagaland v. Ratan Singh, AIR 1967 SC 212 may also be made in this behalf. It has been observed therein:

"It is not discrimination to administer different laws in different areas. The Presidency Towns have got special procedures which do not obtain in other areas. We have known of trials by jury in one part of India for an offence which was not so triable in another. Similarly what is offence in one part of India is not an offence in another. Regional differences do not necessarily connote discrimination and laws may be designed for effective justice in different ways in different parts of India if people are not similarly circumstanced".

To sustain the contention that in the same State different laws may be applicable on historical reasons and geographical classification is permissible I may refer to the case of Bhaiya Lal Shukla v. State of Madhya Pradesh reported in AIR 1962 SC 981. The historical background how and why, the High Court at Calcutta was established has already been stated hereinbefore. The Presidency Town of Calcutta has its own peculiarities and problems widely differing from the other parts of the country.

48. For the aforesaid reasons I hold that Calcutta High Court (Jurisdictional Limits) Act 1919 is not violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution and as such it is not ultra vires the Constitution. Consequently the prayer for striking down the said Act must fail.

49. The last contention of Mr. John is that the clause (iii) of sub-section (2) and sub-section (3) of S. 34 of the Advocates Act (Act 25 of 1961) is ultra vires as it offends Art. 14 of the Constitution. Mr. Dutt appearing for the Secretary, Bar Association has also supported the said contention.

50. According to Mr. Dutt the Advocates have been given the right to practise law as noted in Section 29 of the Advocates Act. Right to practice of an Advocate should mean both the right to act and to plead in course of his engagement. In support of his contention reference has been made to the case in Aswani Kr. Ghosh v. Arobinda Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369 wherein Supreme Court held that the word 'practice' as applied to the legal practitioner in India includes in the absence of any limiting or restrictive context both the functions of acting and pleading. Mr. Dutt therefore, submits that the very fact that the High Court at Calcutta was given the power to make rules to determine the persons who shall be entitled respectively to plead and to act in the High Court in exercise of its original jurisdiction, can be said to be discriminatory. According to Mr. Dutt, if any rule seeking to impose any restriction in this respect, is framed by the High Court, the same will lead to a discrimination. The submission in this respect by Mr. Dutt in my view, is not sound, it is based more on imaginary grievance than on facts. No Court should enter into discussion on the basis of a hypothetical case, and particularly in constitutional matters. The said view gets support in the decision of the case U. N. Rao v. Smt. Indira Gandhi, AIR 1971 SC 1002 wherein it has been observed: "in constitutional matter it is advisable to decide only those points which necessarily arise for determination on the facts of the case". Bearing the aforesaid principle in mind, let us now examine the relevant provisions as contained in sub-section (2) of S. 34 of the Act, and its clause (iii) which are set out hereinbelow: Sub-section (2): "without prejudice to the provisions contained in sub-section (1), the High Court at Calcutta and the High Court at Bombay may make rules. Clause (iii): "determining the persons who shall be entitled respectively to plead and to act in the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction". It is, therefore, seen that clause (iii) to sub-section (2) of S. 34 of the Act is a merely enabling section giving authority to the High Court to make rules for some specified purpose. The said provision by itself cannot be assailed on the ground of discrimination. The rules framed thereunder by this Court have, however, been kept out of scrutiny in the present rule. It may also be mentioned that the petitioners sought to attack the rules framed by the High Court but they did not give the detailed reasons for the same. Those rules were the subject-matter of attack in a proceeding before D. Basu, J. Against the decision of Mr. Justice Basu an appeal has been preferred and the same is still pending. Accordingly Mr. John and Mr. Dutt did not press that point in this proceeding as the selfsame point is the subject-matter of another proceeding, pending in appeal.

51. Mr. Dutt, however, submits that though the rules are not being challenged in this proceeding the section itself has been challenged and on the ground of discrimination S. 34 (2) (iii) and (3) should be struck down. Mr. Dutt in support of his own contention has referred to the case of State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali Sarkar, AIR 1952 SC 75 and contends that legislature committed illegality by delegating power to the High Court to frame rules concerning the Advocates regarding their right to plead and to act before the High Court exercising original jurisdiction. This according to Mr. Dutt is based on certain classification by which equal right before the law can be said to have been denied. Moreover, unlimited and unfettered right given to some authorities to discriminate one person from another without any reference to any particular class is bad in law, and accordingly, it cannot be sustained. In the instant case Mr. Dutt could not say anything by which it can be said that clause (iii) of sub-section (2) of S. 34 can be said to be discriminatory. It speaks of the Advocates who will plead and act in the High Court. There is nothing to show that any such rules have been framed which can be said to have made distinction between lawyers and lawyers. As already noted we are not looking to the rules. The language of the impugned section is clear to show that it does not make any discrimination between lawyers and lawyers. Mr. Dutt further contends that unfettered powers have been delegated to the High Court to frame rules. Accordingly the said provisions cannot be supported under the law. In support of his contention Mr. Dutt also submitted that in the case referred to above, the provisions of the West Bengal Special Courts Act, 1950 was struck down for the reasons that special powers were delegated to the Officer of the State to decide which offences are triable by the Special Court and against whom. In the instant case, however, the said principle cannot be applied. The cases referred to by Mr. Dutt are distinguishable and the facts involved are different. Mr. Deb referred to the case of Babul Ch. Mitra v. The Chief Justice and other Judges of Patna High Court, AIR 1954 SC 524 wherein the provision of S. 9 of the Indian Bar Councils Act was considered. The Supreme Court observed: "the proviso to section mentioned above, however, makes it clear that there is an overriding power in the High Court to refuse admission to any person at its discretion in spite of these rules. The vesting of power even in an unfettered form in the High Court to exercise discretion in the matter of enrolling advocates, who would be entitled to practise before it, does not, in our opinion amount to an unreasonable restriction. Such discretion will have to be vested in somebody and no other or more appropriate authority could be thought of, except the High Court itself".

In the background of that decision I also find that rule-making power which has been given to the High Court can be said to have been given to the best possible authorities in whom the people and the legislature have absolute confidence.

52. Giving my anxious consideration in the materials on record I am sorry I cannot agree with the contention of Mr. John and with Mr. Dutt that Cl. (iii) of sub-section (2) of S. 34 of the Advocates Act is ultra vires and that it in any way offends Art. 14 of the Constitution.

53. Regarding sub-section (3) of S. 34, Advocates Act Mr. John's contention is as Letters Patent is not in existence, the rules framed thereunder should be declared to be illegal. But it may be noted that the said contention of Mr. John does not hold good in view of my finding that the Letters Patent are still in force. As such said contention of Mr. John also falls.

54. The petitioners have asserted that the Barristers were created as a privileged class of persons making a discrimination between lawyers and lawyers. The said argument is no longer tenable after the passing of the Advocates Act 1961. Section 34 of the Act lays down the qualification required for admission as an Advocate. Bar-at-Law is such a qualification recognised by the Advocates Act. High Court has framed a common set of rules for barristers and advocates. Thus by the passing of the Advocates Act, unification of the Bar has been achieved. Mr. John also has not pressed this point. It may also be noted in this context that the petitioners have not made the attorneys party in this proceeding. Mr. John, therefore has given up the point that the admission of the attorneys is discriminatory at the time of hearing. Accordingly the impugned section of the Advocates Act cannot be challenged on that score. It may also be noted that though respondent No. 8, Registrar, Original Side, asserted in his affidavit that such an application was not maintainable in the Appellate Side, no argument, however, was advanced on that score at the time of hearing and the same has been given up. As such I do not think it necessary to consider the same.

55. I hold, therefore, that the impugned sections, namely, Cl. (iii) of sub-section (2) and sub-section (3) of S. 34 of the Advocates Act are not ultra vires the Constitution and that they do not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution and as such they cannot be struck down.

56. In the result, the application fails and the Rule is discharged. In view of the nature of the application no order as to costs is made.

Order accordingly.

SALIL KUMAR DATTA, J.

Asim Pramanik, Petitioner v. Vice-Chancellor, Burdwan University and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 2395(W) of 1972, D/- 19-6-1972.

Burdwan University Regulations, Regulations 7 and 18 — Regulation 7 is not controlled by Regulation 18 — On the other hand Regulation 18 is controlled by Regulation 7. (Para 6)

Regulation 7 lays down two conditions for passing the Part II and Degree Examinations. One is the minimum 33% marks in each subject and the other is 35% in the aggregate. This Regulation is prescribing the conditions for success in the examinations with reference to the elective subjects only. At that point Regulation 7 is not providing the additional subject of the candidates. It is thus obvious that Regulation 7 is not controlled by Regulation 18 in absence of any provision providing otherwise, rather Regulation 18 is controlled by Regulation 7. Accordingly in its context Regulation 7 refers to only elective subjects. Regulation 18 which deals with the additional subject provides that marks in excess of 33% in the additional subject shall be added to the aggregate referred to in Regulation 7, secured by the candidate in the examination. This regulation does not say that such excess marks shall form part of the aggregate as defined in Regulation 7. The excess mark in absence of any further provision, is no part of the aggregate contemplated in Regulation 7. Accordingly it is obvious that the excess mark over 33% in the additional subject is not to be included in the aggregate defined in Regulation 7. Where however such excess mark is to be taken into consideration for other purpose, as for declaring a candidate passing the examination with Distinction, there is express provision for including such excess mark in the aggregate as has been laid down in Regulation 19. There is, therefore, no ambiguity or anomaly in the literal meaning of the provisions in the Regulations themselves.

(Paras 6, 7, 8)

(contd. on column, 2)

	English	Bengali	History	Political Science	Additional-Genera Science.
Total Marks	200	200	300	300	100
Marks obtained	68	66	100	110	50

Total marks of elective subjects & aggregate—344.

The petitioner contends that under Regulation 7 of the University Regulations a candidate, to pass the said examination as also the degree examination, has to obtain 33% marks in each subject and also 35% marks in aggregate. He obtained 33% marks in all elective subjects his total marks being 344. But he was short of 6 marks in the aggregate. Regulation 18 provides that marks obtained in excess of 33% in additional subject are to be added to the aggregate of candidates. So that in this case 17 marks are to be added to aggregate secured by the petitioner raising his total marks to 361 while the qualifying pass marks is 35% of the aggregate of the elective subjects that is 350. The petitioner further contends that he thus qualified for being declared to have passed the examination. But the University wrongfully and illegally refused to accept this contention in spite of representations by its letter of March 17, 1972. Annexure 'B' to the petition and took to the position therein that marks in excess of 33% in the additional subject is to be added only in the case of successful candidates. Such interpretation is not warranted by the language of Regulations 7 and 18 and the latter regulation does not state that marks in excess of 33% is to be credited only to successful candidates. The petitioner in these circumstances moved this Court in Constitutional Writ Jurisdiction for a writ in the nature of mandamus directing the University to rescind, withdraw or forbear from giving effect to the impugned order aforesaid and also for a writ in the nature of certiorari quashing the same.

AIR 1969 SC 513 = 1969 Lab IC 837, Management, Sahadara (Delhi) Saharanpur Light Rly. Co. v. S. S. Rly. Workers Union 3

Ganga Narayan Chanda, for Petitioner; Tapas Banerjee, Malay K. Ghosh, for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioner in this case appeared in B. A. Part II Examination of 1971 of the Burdwan University. The marks he obtained in the said examination would be evident from the following table:—

2. On the service of the rule the University authorities have entered appearance and filed an affidavit-in-opposition disputing the contentions made in the petition and also opposing the prayer of the petitioner for issuance of the writs. It was contended that Regulation 7 provides the conditions for qualifying for the Part II and Degree examinations. The conditions are securing 33% marks in each subject and 35% marks in the aggregate, both in the elective subjects. Regulations 18 and 19 make it clear that the marks in excess of 33% in the additional subject is to be added to the aggregate of successful candidates only and such marks are not to be taken in consideration for securing minimum pass marks in the aggregate obtained by a candidate. In view of the marks obtained by the petitioner the decision of the University in not declaring him successful in the examinations is a legal and proper decision.

3. Mr. Ganga Narayan Chanda, learned Advocate for the petitioner has contended that the literal meaning of the language of Regulation 18 is that the marks in excess of 33% in the additional subject is to be taken into account in computing the aggregate marks secured by a candidate. He submitted that there was no warrant for inserting the word "successful" before the word "candidate" in Regulation 18 as the provision of the Regulation is clear and unambiguous. He has referred me to a decision in the case of Management, Sahadara (Delhi) Saharanpur Light Railway Co. Ltd. v. S. S. Railway Workers Union, AIR 1969 SC 513 in which it was observed that the Court ought to give a literal meaning to the language used by Parliament unless the language is ambiguous or its literal sense gives rise to an anomaly or results in something which would defeat the purpose of the Act.

4. Dr. Tapas Banerjee, the learned Counsel appearing for the University authorities, has submitted on the other hand that Regulation 7 is not controlled by Regulation 18 and in construing Regulations 18 and 19, marks in excess of 33% is to be considered only after the candidate has fulfilled the conditions laid down in Regulation 7. It was further stated that this construction of the Regulations, followed since 1965, is a reasonable construction of the relevant regulations which also should be followed in this case.

5. It would be of proper at this stage to consider the regulations referred to by the parties. These regulations relate to the Bachelor of Arts, Science and Commerce Examinations of the University of Burdwan. Regulations 7, 18 and 19 are as follows:—

"7. In order to qualify for Part II Examination, a candidate must obtain a minimum of 33% marks in the M. I. L. and a minimum of 30% marks in each of the elective subjects in Part I Examination In order to pass Part II Examination and the Degree Examination as a whole a candidate must obtain 33% marks in each subject and 35% marks in the aggregate on the combined results of Part I and Part II Examinations

Regulation 18, Marks obtained in excess of 33% in the additional subject shall be added to the aggregate of candidates for Part II Examinations.

Regulation 19. A candidate who passes and obtains 50% marks or above in the aggregate of Part I and II Examinations taken together including the excess marks in the additional subject, if any, will be declared to have pass B. A. Examination with Distinction".

6. As we have seen the elective subjects together total 1000 marks. There are two conditions laid down in Regulation 7 for passing the Part II and Degree Examinations. One is the minimum 33% marks in each subject and the other is 35% in the aggregate. This Regulation is prescribing the conditions for success in the examinations with reference to the subjects which are referred to in the earlier part of the same regulation and the subjects are the elective subjects only. At that point Regulation 7 is not providing the additional subject of the candidates. It is thus obvious that Regulation 7 is not controlled by Regulation 18 in absence of any provision providing otherwise, rather Regulation 18 is controlled by Regulation 7. Accordingly in its context Regulation 7 refers to only elective subjects.

7. Turning now to Regulation 18, which with Regulation 19 deals with the additional subject, it would appear that provision has been made in the said Regulation to the effect that marks in excess of 33% in the additional subject shall be added to the aggregate referred to in Regulation 7, secured by the candidate in the examination. This regulation does not say that such excess marks shall form part of the aggregate as defined in Regulation 7. The excess mark in absence of any further provision, is no part of the aggregate contemplated in Regulation 7. Accordingly it is obvious that the excess mark over 33% in the additional subject is not to be included in the aggregate defined in Regulation 7.

8. Where however such excess mark is to be taken into consideration for other purpose, as for declaring a candidate passing the examination with Distinction, there is express provision for including such excess mark in the aggregate as has been laid down in Regulation 19. There is, therefore, no ambiguity or anomaly in the literal meaning of the provisions in the Regulations themselves. For these reasons, the action of the University in not declaring the petitioner as having passed B. A. Part II as also the Degree Examinations is, in my opinion, in accordance with law.

9. The rule accordingly fails and is discharged without any order as to costs. Interim order, if any, is vacated.
Order accordingly.

A. F. A. D. Nos. 732, 734 and 735 of 1960, D/- 5-5-1972.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1950), S. 12 (1) Proviso (h) — Requirement of premises for building and rebuilding.

In a suit for ejectment under Proviso (h) to Section 12 (1) condition of the building is not the test. The determining factor is, whether the purpose for which the rebuilding is proposed is reasonable or not. A purpose to demolish an existing building and to reconstruct it into a bigger one cannot by itself be regarded as unreasonable. AIR 1950 Cal 74, Rel. on. (Paras 7, 16)

There is no law by which the Court could direct the landlord to alter his plans. All that the Court is required to do is to satisfy its conscience that the proposed building and rebuilding is not a ruse to get rid of his existing tenants. (1968) 72 Cal WN 393, Rel. on.

(Para 19)

The public benefit cannot be the sole guiding factor to determine the landlord's reasonable requirement. (Para 20)

Reasonable requirement is a question of fact and the Court of appeal is the final Court of fact. The final Court of fact ought to consider the evidence relied upon by the trial Court and come to a firm finding on the issue. (Para 14)

(As the appellate Court failed to do so and dismissed the suit solely upon the view that the condition of the disputed premises did not require demolition or rebuilding, its decree was set aside and case remanded). (Para 21)

Bijan Behari Das Gupta and Ashoke Kumar Sen Gupta, for Appellant; Prafulla Kumar Roy (Sr), Sudhir Ranjan Khastagir, Amal Kumar Ghosal and Provat Kumar Sen Gupta, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT:— These three appeals are by the plaintiff-landlord arising out of ejectment suits under clause (h) of the proviso to Section 12 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') viz., that the premises is reasonably required by the landlord for the purpose of building and rebuilding plaintiff's case, in substance, was that the premises No. 1/29/1, Bowbazar Street, originally belonged to one Prafulla Bhar, but subsequently he leased out the same to the plaintiff, a partnership firm for 99 years. The plaintiff became lessee of the premises by a registered lease dated 8-10-1953. The defendants became tenants under the plaintiff by reason of the aforesaid lease. The plaintiff required the suit premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding and also under the terms of the said lease. The tenancy of the defendants had been determined by notice to quit but as the defendants did not vacate the premises, the plaintiff brought the above suits.

2. The defence in all the suits was, the denial of the plaintiff's requirement of different premises for building and rebuilding. The validity of the notice to quit was also challenged.

3. The trial Court decreed the plaintiff's suits upon the findings that the element of necessity for requirement of the different suit premises by the plaintiff for the purpose of building and rebuilding and its reasonableness have been made out. The proposed construction would not lead to diminish accommodation or any public disadvantage within the meaning of explanation to S. 12 (1) of the Act; all the tenancy had been validly determined by notice to quit.

4. On appeal, the Court of appeal below set aside the judgment and decree of the trial Court and dismissed the plaintiff's suits upon the view that the state of the building was not such that it would require demolition or rebuilding; so the plaintiff's requirement of the houses for the purpose of building and rebuilding could not be called in any sense of the terms a reasonable requirement within the meaning of Clause (h) of Section 12 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1950; in suit No. 1929 there had been no service of ejectment notice upon the defendant in that suit. The plaintiff being aggrieved against the said judgment and decree of the Court of appeal below preferred these second appeals in this Court.

5. Mr. Das Gupta, appearing on behalf of the appellant, contends that the Court of appeal below erred in law in holding that the proviso (h) to S. 12 (1) of the Act would have no application unless the state of the premises was such that it required to be built. That proviso does not mention building and rebuilding of the premises: what it states is, that proviso will apply where the premises is reasonably required by the landlord for the purpose of building and rebuilding. So the Court is required to consider whether the plaintiff has satisfied that his requirement is reasonable and he has got necessary funds to carry out such reconstruction.

6. Proviso (h) to Section 12 (1) lays down three classes of cases in which a landlord can get a decree for ejectment when the landlord reasonably requires the premises: (1) for the purpose of building and rebuilding; (2) his own occupation; (3) occupation of any person for whose benefits the house is held. The word 'reasonably' qualifies all the above three classes of cases.

7. There is nothing in the said proviso contended by Mr. Das Gupta to show that the landlord is entitled to get a decree for the purpose of building and rebuilding unless he could satisfy the Court that the building is old and dilapidated. The terms of the section are wide enough to include cases where the landlord reasonably requires the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding and for his own purpose and other legitimate purposes. A purpose to demolish an existing building and to reconstruct it into a bigger one cannot by itself be regarded as unreasonable. It is not the state or the condition of the building that is to be considered but the reasonable requirement of the landlord for building and rebuilding is the determining factor.

8. Mr. Roy, appearing on behalf of the respondents contends that the plaintiff has specifically stated in the plaint that in terms of the lease the plaintiff required the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding.

9. In the instant case the plaintiff is claiming ejectment of the defendants under the first part of the proviso, viz. of requirement for building and/or rebuilding purposes. Requirement of plaintiff's own occupation has not been stated in the plaint. It is stated in paragraph 4 of the plaint that the premises is reasonably required by the plaintiff for the purpose of building and rebuilding and the plaintiff also relied for that purpose under the terms of the lease. Mr. Roy remarked that the plaintiff wanted to eject the tenants from the disputed premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding only because there was a condition in the lease that steps should be taken to get ejectment of the tenants and thereafter to construct a new house on the demised land. According to Mr. Roy, the plaintiff's suits should have failed on that ground alone.

10. The Court of appeal below found that particular clause in the lease was unlawful under Section 23 of the Indian Contract Act. Apart from that clause in the lease, if the plaintiff could establish that he reasonably requires the premises for building and rebuilding, obviously he is entitled to get a decree. The Court of appeal below dismissed the plaintiff's suits solely upon the view that the condition of the disputed premises did not require demolition or rebuilding.

11. Mr. Das Gupta contends that the plaint should contain the material facts and not the evidence by which they are to be proved. It is clearly stated in the plaint that the plaintiff reasonably requires the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding. So that statement of fact alone constitutes the cause of action.

12. Mr. Roy points out that an objective test is to be satisfied upon objective facts which would lead to the conclusion that the landlord reasonably requires the premises. In absence of such facts in the Plaint it is impossible to come to the conclusion that the plaintiff requires the suit premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding.

13. Objective facts, which I understand, are those facts pertaining to its object; and an objective test is to treat a subject so as to exhibit the actual facts, not coloured by one's feeling or opinion. In the instant case, a specific issue was raised viz. Are the suit premises reasonably required by the plaintiff for the purpose of building and rebuilding? The evidence led on that issue upon which the parties actually went on trial. Upon the consideration of the evidence adduced by the parties, the trial Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff reasonably required the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding. Therefore, I am unable to accept the contentions of Mr. Roy that in absence of stating the 'objective facts' in the plaint, the Court could not apply "objective test" in coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff reasonably required the premises for the purpose of building and rebuilding.

14. The Court of appeal below did not consider the evidence relied upon by the trial Court in coming to the conclusion that the requirement of the different suit premises by the plaintiff for the purpose of building and rebuilding and its reasonableness had been made out. The reasonable requirement is a question of fact and the final Court of fact ought to have considered and come to a firm finding.

15. It seems that the Court of appeal below fell into an error in holding that the principle of law as laid down by this Court in Bhola Singh's case, 54 Cal WN 366 = (AIR 1950 Cal 74), under the 1948 Act would not be applicable to 1950 Act inasmuch as 'bona fide requirement' in the former Act has been changed to 'reasonable requirement' in the latter Act. In order to get a decree on the ground of rebuilding, the Court has to be satisfied with the reasonableness of the requirement. In Bhola Singh v. Gnanendra Kumar, 54 Cal WN 366 = (AIR 1950 Cal 74) the landlord filed a batch of ejectment suits under proviso (f) to Section 11 (1) of the West Bengal Rent Control (Temporary Provision) Act, 1948. The said proviso is similar to proviso (h) to Section 12 (1) of 1950 Act. Harrish, C. J. observed that proviso (f) to Section 11 (1) of the Act does not mention premises requiring rebuilding. What it states is, that sub-section (1) shall have application if the landlord requires the premises bona fide for rebuilding. The state of the premises, therefore, is not an essential factor in the case.

16. Therefore, in my view, in a suit for ejectment under proviso (h) to Section 12 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1950, the state or the condition of the building is not the test of building and rebuilding. The determining factor is, whether the purpose for which the rebuilding is proposed is reasonable or not.

17. The trial Court found that the proposed construction will not lead to diminish accommodation or any public disadvantage within the meaning of explanation to the proviso (h) of S. 12 (1) of the Act.

18. The Court of appeal below was of opinion that the disputed premises did not require to be built or rebuilt, so the question of extended public accommodation was not a vital point in the instant case and furthermore the plaintiff by constructing a new building on the remaining portion of the demised land could easily increase the accommodation if he really intends to increase the same.

19. There is no law by which the Court could direct the landlord to alter his plans. All that the Court is required to do is to satisfy its conscience that the proposed building and rebuilding is not a ruse to get rid of his existing tenants (vide, Monohar Lal Mehta v. Raj Mohan Pandey, (1968) 72 Cal WN 393).

20. The explanation to proviso (h) to Section 12 (1) of the Act, in my opinion, has got no nexus with the reasonable requirement of the landlord. The Court in granting the plaintiff a decree for ejectment on the ground of reasonable requirement for building and rebuilding, shall take into consideration the comparative public benefits or disadvantage by extending or diminishing accommodation. But the public benefit cannot be the sole guiding factor to determine the landlord's reasonable requirement. When the plaintiff succeeds in establishing his claim of reasonable requirement, thereafter, the explanation comes into play, but at the same time it cannot overweigh the landlord's reasonable requirement, even if any increased accommodation does not result from the proposed building.

21. Reasonable requirement is a question of fact. The trial Court found it in favour of the plaintiff-landlord. The Court of appeal below as the final Court of facts, is required either to accept or reverse the findings of fact arrived at by the Court below. This has not been done in the present case. The Court of appeal below did neither reject nor accept the findings of the trial Court and the evidence relied upon by the trial Court in coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff reasonably required the disputed premises for building and rebuilding. The Court of appeal below dismissed the plaintiff's suit mainly on the ground that the condition of the building did not require building and rebuilding and the plaintiff-company failed to prove its requirement supported by any resolution passed at a meeting of the Board of Directors. But such resolution by itself similar to the terms in the lease, in my opinion, does not conclusively prove reasonable requirement. So, mere absence of such resolution cannot disentitle the plaintiff to claim ejectment if he could satisfy its reasonable requirement by other material evidence. In deciding second appeals, I cannot decide the question of facts, so under these circumstances, it is desirable that the appeal should be reheard by the Court of appeal below.

22. In the result, the second appeals Nos. 732 and 735 are allowed, the judgment and decree of the Court of appeal below are set aside and the appeals are remitted to the Court of appeal below for rehearing. The Full Bench of the Small Cause Court is directed to decide afresh the only point whether the plaintiff reasonably requires the premises for building and rebuilding, without taking into consideration the condition of the building and the terms of the lease dated 8-10-1953 between the plaintiff and its lessor and decide the appeals in accordance with law. As regards requirements of the Explanation to proviso (h) of Section 12 (1) of the Act, he will follow the directions as indicated hereinabove.

23. Regarding the notice to quit in suit No. 1929 which corresponds to the S. A. 734/60, I affirm the findings of the Court of appeal below that the notice of ejectment was not tendered to the defendant of that suit and accordingly S. A. No. 734/60 is dismissed.

24. There will be no order as to costs in any of the appeals.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, JJ.

Monoranjan Routh and others, Appellants v. State of West Bengal, Opposite Party.

C. R. Nos. 2565 and 2566 of 1968, D/- 21-4-1972.

West Bengal Land Development and Planning Act (1948), S. 8 (2)—Provisions have reduced and curtailed quantum of compensation payable in Land Acquisition proceedings and are therefore violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution; and are not saved by Art. 31-B and 9th Schedule thereto — (X-Ref.— Constitution of India, Arts. 14 and 31-B). (Para 3)

The various legislations of different States providing acquisition of land (including the W. B. Land Development and Planning Act 1948) have the 'object' of "acquisition" of lands and the purposes for which the acquisition is made are immaterial. The acquisition of land under these legislations is made on payment of nominal compensation while an adjoining land may be acquired under the Land Acquisition Act 1894, on payment of adequate compensation. (i.e., market value of the lands under Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act 1894 plus 15% solatium), although both the lands are being acquired for public purposes. This differential treatment is not based on reasonable classification and substantial differences having reasonable relation to the objects sought to be achieved, and is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution and is also not saved by Art. 31-B and the Ninth Schedule thereto. Amarendra Nath Gupta, S. B. Bakshi, Sunil Ghosh, Mrs. Krishna Gupta, for Petitioners; Provat Kumar Sengupta and Sudhir Kumar Kar, for the State.

SANKAR PRASAD MITRA, J.:

The facts of this case have been set out in our Judgment delivered on April 21, 1969. In view of the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioners so far as clause (b) of Section 8 (1) of the West Bengal Land Development and Planning Act, 1948 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") is concerned we directed the Special Land Acquisition Judge at Alipore to report to us whether the lands in question were in the same state on the date of publication of notification as they were on December 31, 1946. The report of the First Special Additional Land Acquisition Judge is now available. He has stated that the lands were not on the date of the publication of the notification under sub-section (1) of S. 4 of the Act (that is on the 19th July, 1962), in the same state as they were on the 31st December, 1946 and that substantial improvement or development was made after that date.

2. This report of the First Additional Special Land Acquisition Judge makes the questions that were raised before us on Section 8 (1) (b) purely academic. If the lands on the date of the publication of notification were not in the same state as they were on the 31st December 1946 "the condition" prescribed in the latter part of clause (b) of Section 8 (1) of the Act is not attracted to these lands at all. We are not therefore, giving our answers to questions 1 and 2 which Mr. Amarendra Nath Gupta raised on behalf of the petitioners when the matter was first heard before us. Mr. Sengupta appearing for the State has submitted that the provision in the latter part of clause (b) of Section 8 (1) should be read as a legal assumption and not a physical or factual assumption. We are unable to accept this contention on the language used in the latter part of Cl. (b) of Section 8 (1). This provision speaks of a "condition" and not of any "assumption" either of fact or of law. We, therefore, overrule this contention of Mr. Sengupta.

3. We have, however, to answer question No. 3 of Mr. Gupta mentioned in our judgment of the 21st April, 1969. The question is: 'Whether the provisions of sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Act relating to Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, has reduced and curtailed the quantum of compensation payable under the present Act and is also violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution and if so, whether it is saved by Art. 31-B of the Constitution and the Ninth Schedule thereto?' This question has to be answered in favour of Mr. Gupta in view of the three Supreme Court decisions which he placed before us. The Supreme Court seems to be of the opinion that the object of these legislations is 'acquisition' of lands and the purposes for which the acquisition is made are immaterial. In other words the Supreme Court has chosen to give a restricted meaning to the "objects sought to be achieved" by a particular legislation. Personally we may be of the view that "objects" of a statute should be more liberally construed but these Supreme Court decisions are binding on us and an elaborate discussion of our views on the subject would be wholly immaterial. We, therefore, proceed to refer to the Supreme Court decisions relevant for determining the effect of sub-section (2) of S. 8.

4. In the Dy. Commr. and Collector, Kamrup v. Durganath Sarma, AIR 1968 SC 394 the Assam Acquisition of Land for Flood Control and Prevention of Erosion Act-1955 was considered. The Supreme Court has said that in the State of Assam some land may be taken under Assam Act No. 6 of 1955 for the purpose of works and other measures in connection with flood control and prevention of erosion on payment of nominal compensation while an adjoining land may be taken for other public purposes under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 on payment of adequate compensation. This differential treatment of land acquired under the two Acts is not permissible under Art. 14. The constitutional guarantee of Art. 14 requires that all persons shall be treated alike in like circumstances and conditions. The Article permits reasonable classification and differential treatment based on substantial differences having reasonable relation to the objects sought to be achieved. The classification of land acquired for works and other measures in connection with flood control and prevention of erosion and land required for other public purposes has no reasonable relation to the object sought to be achieved viz., acquisition of the land by the State. In either case, the owner loses his land and in his place, the State becomes the owner. And there is unjust discrimination between owners of land similarly situated by the mere accident of some land being required for purposes mentioned in Assam Act No. 6 of 1955 and some land being required for other purposes. The Assam Act was therefore held to be violative of Art. 14.

5. The next case is directly on the point of solatium which has been withdrawn by sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Act. This is the case of Balammal v. State of Madras, AIR 1968 SC 1425. We set out below what Shah, J., speaking for the Supreme Court, has stated in paragraph 7 of this judgment at page 1428. Paragraph 7 runs thus: "..... In our judgment, counsel for the owners are right in contending that sub-clause (2) of Cl. 6 of the Schedule to Act 37 of 1950 in so far as it deprived the owners of the lands of the statutory addition to the market value of the lands under Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act is violative of the equality clause of the Constitution, and is on that account void. If the State had acquired the lands for improvement of the town under the Land Acquisition Act the acquiring authority was bound to award in addition to the market value 15 per cent. solatium under Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act. But by acquiring the lands under the Land Acquisition Act as modified by the Schedule to the Madras City Improvement Trust Act 37 of 1950 for the Improvement Trust which also is a public purpose, the owners are it is claimed deprived of the right to the statutory addition. An owner of land is ordinarily entitled to receive the solatium in addition to the market value for compulsory acquisition of his land if it is acquired under the Land Acquisition Act, but not if it is acquired under the Madras City Improvement Trust Act. A clear case of discrimination which infringes the guarantee of equal protection of the law arises and the provision which is more prejudicial to the owners of the lands which are compulsorily acquired must, on the decisions of this Court, be deemed invalid".

5-A. These observations of the Supreme Court clearly lay down that the solatium prescribed by the Land Acquisition Act cannot be withdrawn by specifying a particular purpose of acquisition in some other Act. The object in both cases, according to the Supreme Court is acquisition for public purposes. And it is discriminatory to provide that solatium shall be given for one land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and would not be given for a neighbouring land acquired under a different statute although both the lands are being acquired for public purposes.

6. There is one other point we have to consider. The Act, we are considering, as amended by West Bengal Act XXIX of 1951 has been included in the 9th Schedule to the Constitution. The provisions as they stood on the date of inclusion cannot, therefore, be challenged in Courts of law. But the protection of the 9th Schedule is not available to sub-section (2) of S. 8. The reason is that the original Act as amended in 1951 was introduced into the 9th Schedule on the 27th April, 1955. But sub-section (2) of Section 8 was enacted by another Act being Act 23 of 1955 on September 21, 1955. The amendments subsequent to introduction into the 9th Schedule are not protected by that Schedule. The Supreme Court in Ramanlal v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1969 SC 168 had to deal with the same problem. Their Lordships came to the conclusion that if amendment subsequent to inclusion in the 9th Schedule were to be given protection, it would amount to amendment of the 9th Schedule itself which no State legislature had power to do. On this view of the matter it is apparent that sub-section (2) of Section 8 without the protection of the 9th Schedule offends against Article 14 of the Constitution.

Our answer to the third question of Mr. Gupta set out above is that the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 8 of the Act relating to Section 23 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 has reduced and curtailed the quantum of compensation payable under the parent Act and is violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. These provisions are not saved by Art. 31-B of the Constitution and the Ninth Schedule thereto.

7. The Rules are, accordingly, disposed of. All interim orders made by this Court are vacated. We direct that the records be sent back to the Trial Court expeditiously for being dealt with according to law. There will be no order as to costs. Let the operation of this order be stayed for four weeks.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:

8. I agree.

Order accordingly.

HAZRA, J.

Sri Sri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew and others, Plaintiffs v. Fatick Chand Seal and others, Defendants.

Suit No. 32 of 1964, D/- 11-4-1972.

FP/GP/D521/72/SSG

A debutter property cannot be sold or leased out except on the ground of urgent need or legal necessity. The leasing out of debutter property for such purpose can be made by the sebaits and trustees for the time being with the leave of the Court. Merely because a receiver has been appointed by High Court, on the application of one of the sebaits and trustees the court should not grant a permanent lease for 99 years in respect of a valuable debutter property. Nor does the court grant a certificate for legal necessity in such a case.

ORDER:— This is an application by Mohan Chand Seal, the defendant No. 2 (b) in this suit, inter alia, for giving leave to Fatick Chand Seal, the Receiver, appointed in this suit, to lease out for a period of 99 years 30 Bighas of land at premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road, Calcutta to the intended lessee or les-sees.

2. Premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road, Calcutta (hereinafter called the said premises), is one of the proper-ties of the plaintiff deity. This is a very big and valuable property consisting of 40 bighas of land. On the high land of the said premises facing the road there is a two storied building including tem-ple, Nat Mandir, feeding house of the poor, charitable dispensary Jheel, tanks and there is also open low land. The plaintiff deity was installed in the Tha-kur Bari in the said premises. In or about 1948, the said premises was requi-sitioned by the Government of West Bengal. After the requisition the plain-tiff deity was located in another debut-ter property viz.: No. 14, Madan Datta Lane, Calcutta.

3. The question in this applica-tion is whether this court should grant leave to the Receiver appointed in this suit in an interlocutory application to lease out, for 99 years 30 bighas out of 40 bighas of land, which is debutter pro-perty.

4. The relevant facts and circum-stances relating to the suit and the ap-plication are as follows:

One Durgadas Seal, since deceased, consecrated and established the deity Sri Sri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew at pre-mises No. 57, Manicktolla Main Road, now known as No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road. By a Deed of Endowment dated October 1, 1916 the settlor settled and en-dowed several properties including the said premises in favour of the deity, and provided that after his death the trustee-ship and shebaitship would devolve upon his legal heirs according to the Bengal School of Hindu Law by which he was governed. On September 9, 1925, the settlor died intestate leaving him surviv-ing his seven sons, Manindra, Girish, Ashutosh, Umesh, Ganesh, Subal and Jadab as his heirs and legal representa-tives. The said sons of the testator be-came shebaits and trustees in items of the Deed of Endowment. Between 1925 and 1945 there were various litigations between the trustees and shebaits over the administration of the trust or the endowed properties. Manindra relin-quished his shebaitship and trusteeship. Ganesh, Subal and Jadab died intestate and unmarried. On May 3, 1943 the plaintiff No. 2 Premchand Seal who is the only son of Manindra instituted a suit in this court being Suit No. 595 of 1943 (Cal) (Sri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew v. Girish Chandra Seal) inter alia, for re-moval of the trustees and appointment of plaintiff No. 2 as the sole trustee, for accounts and other incidental reliefs. By an order dated September 7, 1948 in Suit No. 595 of 1943 Mr. H. K. Bose, Bar-rister-at-Law, (as he then was) was ap-pointed as the Special Referee for the purpose of framing a scheme in accord-ance with the Deed of Endowment. The said Special Referee framed a scheme in or about September, 1950. There-after, on July 29, 1949, final decree was passed in Suit No. 595 of 1943 in accord-ance with the report or scheme of the management made by the Special Re-feree. Thereafter, Ashutosh died inte-state leaving defendant Fatick Chand as his only son and heir. On February 3, 1963, Girish died leaving his widow Badam Kumari, defendant No. 2 (a) and his only son Mohan Chand, defendant No. 2 (b) as his sole heirs and legal re-presentatives. The said Badam Kumari and Mohan Chand upon the death of Girish became trustees and shebaits in place of Girish. On March 6, 1962, upon the death of the said Manindra his son Prem Chand instituted this suit claiming to be a shebait and trustee and for re-moval of some of the shebaits and trustees and for appointment of new shebait and trustees, for cancellation of the present scheme, for framing of a scheme of management and for other reliefs. In or about July 1967, an application was made by Premchand in this suit, for the appointment of a Receiver to the endowed estate and on the said application Fatick Chand was appointed as the Receiver of the debutter estate by an order dated August 16, 1967. On or about September 29, 1970 an application was made by Umesh Chandra Seal in this court and an ex parte order was passed by Masud, J. inter alia, that Fatick Chand, the Receiver appointed be at liberty to appoint the shebait, but this order was directed to be served on the Attorney of the applicant Premchand, with liberty to have this order vacated before the vacation court. Thereafter the said application was finally heard and on or about May 11, 1971 Masud, J. observed that lease for 99 years was equivalent for sale and asked the applicant to cause advertisement to be used in the newspapers, namely, the Statesman and the Viswamitra inviting offers for the sale of the property in the sealed cover and place them before his Lordship for his consideration. However Umesh withdrew the said application on May 11, 1971. This application by Mohan Chand has been made for the same or similar prayers as was made by Umesh before Masud J. According to the petitioner, Umesh withdrew the said application as he was then won over by Premchand the plaintiff in this suit.

5. Mr. Gouri Mitter, the learned Advocate General of West Bengal, appearing for the petitioner submitted as follows:

In or about August 1948, the said premises was requisitioned by the Government of West Bengal. Since the said requisition the said premises was in occupation of several thousands of refugees. The Government of West Bengal was paying a rent of Rs. 2,375/- per month exclusive of municipal taxes. The said premises had been de-requisitioned by the Government on or about the 9th October, 1967. The Board of Trustee decided unanimously to grant lease of 30 Bighas of low land out of the said property, namely, premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road. In course of the administration, the court has to pass an order for preservation and protection of the estate and for smooth running the estate. The Court has already appointed receiver in respect of the properties belonging to the deity including the said premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road. The said premises is now in the custody of Court by reason of appointment of the Receiver. The trustees have decided unanimously to grant lease of 30 Bighas of low land of the said premises (the client of the Advocate General would not recognise the plaintiff as trustee and shebait). The trustees and shebait cannot give clear title to the lessee because this suit is pending now. Under O. 40, R. 1, the trustees are disabled to grant such a lease. Only the Receiver could grant such a lease in view of appointment of receiver in this suit and the Court should grant such leave to the receiver to make a lease in view of the absolute urgency of the case. In spite of the urgency the shebait cannot grant such a lease. Therefore, the Court should grant leave to the receiver to grant such a lease. It was submitted that the right to grant lease is not controlled by the deed of endowment at all. The right of the sebat is the right to carry out the seva and worship of the deity and the right of management of the properties. According to the Advocate General, urgent necessity exists for grant of lease in this case. The deity had to be removed to No. 14, Madan Dutta Lane, Calcutta where some of the sebaits stayed. The Government of West Bengal requisitioned the property in 1948 and de-requisitioned the property on October 10, 1967. The Government of West Bengal was paying a rent of Rs. 2,375/- per month exclusive of municipal taxes. During the period of requisition, the property could not be repaid. Before the requisition during the period of 1940 to 1946 which was war period, nothing could be done for repairs of the property due to conditions of war. During the period of requisition of the premises by the State of West Bengal the entire boundary wall on all sides of the premises were pulled down by the refugees and out of the bricks temporary houses were constructed by the refugees. As a result, the said premises was without any boundary wall. It is absolutely necessary that the thorough repairs should be done to the building and structures. It was decided by the sebaits that 14 bighas of jheel and 16 bighas of low land should be leased out. The learned Advocate General submitted that Sri Sri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew must go back to its own temple. The temple needs immediate repairs. Unless the temple is repaired the deity cannot be located at the temple. The property had not been repaired for 32 years. A large sum of money is urgently needed for repairs. The right of the deity to be located at the temple at No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road should be immediately implemented. The Deity must go back to its old temple. The property is now being managed by the scheme. According to the Advocate General, Prem Chand has no right to oppose this application. The court should not postpone what all the sebaits want. The income of the debutter estate is Rs. 55,000/- per year. There is a loss of Rs. 4,000/- every year. This deficit has to be met. It cannot be met unless the lease is granted.

6. The learned Advocate General finally submitted that sale of the said premises is not beneficial to the interest of the deity, because in case of sale, question of payment of capital gain tax would arise, whereas in case of long lease payment of selami or rent do not involve capital gains tax. The Advocate General stated that one cannot also shut his eyes to the fact that ceiling of urban properties would be imposed soon and the deity in such case may not get the benefit of such vast land. He submitted that it is for the benefit of the deity that this 30 bighas of land should be leased out as prayed for by the petitioner.

7. Mr. Gopal Law, appearing for the defendant Umesh Chandra Seal supported the case of the petitioner that this property should be leased out. Mr. Law submitted that his client Umesh Chandra Seal made an application on September 29, 1970 almost with the same prayer. There was an ex parte order passed by Masud J. But ultimately the said application was withdrawn by his client on May 11, 1971. He referred to a decision of this Court in AIR 1929 Cal 828 equivalent to 50 Cal LJ 333, (Srish Chandra Banerjee v. Debendra Nath Banerjee) and submitted that a receiver had no power to lease a debutter property without the sanction of the Court. Mr. H. M. Dhar, learned counsel appearing for Fatick Chand Seal supported the case of the petitioner. In this application, Fatick Chand Seal is not appearing in his capacity as Receiver but only as sebaits and trustee. Mr. Dhar submitted that for the purpose of this application no receiver's meeting need be called, neither Fatick Chand Seal as receiver is a necessary party to this application. The receiver was directed to act in terms of the scheme. The receiver is carrying on management in terms of the scheme. He said that the trustees and sebaits decided in a meeting that 10 bighas of land approximately with temple and nut-mandir be retained and the back portion be let out on a long lease to secure a recurring income. The terms of the lease had been agreed upon and all parties are willing to lease out 30 bighas of land out of the said premises for 99 years. He admitted that this was a trustee's meeting and not a meeting called by Fatick Chand Seal as Receiver, in this suit. Mr. Dhar submitted that leasing out was for the benefit of the estate and this Court as Court of Equity for the protection of the property of the deity should pass the order as prayed by the petitioner. He also relied on the case reported in AIR 1929 Cal 828.

8. This application is opposed on behalf of the plaintiffs, Mr. M. N. Banerjee, the learned counsel appearing for the plaintiffs placed several provisions of the Deed of Endowment and invited my attention to the accounts of the estate annexed to the petition. This account shows expenditure over income at the rate of Rs. 4,609.16 per annum. Mr. Banerjee pointed out that in this account expenses for poor feeding has been shown to the extent of Rs. 8,384.86 but expenses for poor feeding can be made under the deed of endowment as also under the scheme only out of surplus income. Mr. Banerjee submitted that if there was no surplus income the excess expense could not and/or should not be made and in this way deficit in account be shown. According to the plaintiffs the accounts are not truly and properly maintained. If proper accounts were maintained there should not be any deficit at all. He submitted that there was no need to lease out the debutter property as prayed in the petition. Accounts are not audited as provided in the scheme. There is nothing to show what steps the receiver has taken with regard to augment the income of the estate. There is no meeting of the receiver and no notice was given to his client with regard to any meeting of the sebaits. Mr. Banerjee submitted that his client is claiming a declaration that he is a sebaits and one of the trustees of the endowed estate. He is also asking for removal of defendants other than defendants Nos. 2a, 2b, 4, 5 & 6 from trusteeship and sebaits. He is also asking for cancellation of the present scheme and framing of a new scheme. Mr. Banerjee relied on Dr. B. K. Mukherjee's Tagore Law Lecture on Law at Endowment, Third Edition, at page 198 and submitted that when there are more sebaits than one, they constitute one body in the eye of law, and all of them must act together. It is not competent for one of the sebaits to do anything in relation to the debutter estate without the concurrence either express or implied of his co-sebaits. In the suit he contended that the plaintiff Premchand might succeed. In the event only some of the sebaits are asking for leave to grant long lease without the concurrence of the other sebaits. Further, if long lease is granted the prayer for framing of a scheme as made in the plaint may be affected, because a very valuable property of the debutter estate would be leased out before the scheme could be framed. He submitted that the application is not maintainable and no order should be made. Mr. Banerjee invited my attention to Chapter XXI, Rules 9 and 10 of the Rules of Original Side, High Court and submitted that if the receiver wanted to spend beyond the amounts mentioned in the scheme he must have called the meeting and should have applied to Court for directions. Nothing has been done in this case. On the other hand Fatick Chand Seal in his capacity as sebaite and trustee is supporting the petitioner. Fatick Chand Seal as Receiver has been made a party to this notice of motion and he has not filed any affidavit in his capacity as Receiver. He further submitted that his client's case is that portions of premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road has been let out and Fatick Chand Seal is not maintaining true and proper accounts. A photograph showing scraps of iron heaped and stacked in a portion of premises No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road has been annexed to the affidavit of Prem Chand Seal. Mr. Banerjee submitted that the lands belonging to the estate at No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road are allowed to be used by third parties and the debutter estate must be receiving income. He further said that it is not mentioned in the petition who is the supposed lessee. Nobody knows the particulars about the proposed lessee. With regard to the question of removal of the deity at the temple at No. 98, Manicktolla Main Road, Mr. Banerjee submitted that de-requisitioning was made in 1968. Long time passed since then and after such a length of time when the suit is likely to be heard soon, it cannot be said that before the hearing of the suit major portion of the land should be leased out for 99 years so that the temple can be repaired for removal of the deity in the temple. Mr. Radha Pada Banerjee appearing for Ranimoni Mallick supported Mr. M. N. Banerjee. He also submitted that this application is not maintainable. He submitted that the court has no jurisdiction to pass such an order to grant lease of a valuable debutter property for 99 years. Mr. R. P. Banerjee referred to B. K. Mukherjee, on Hindu Law of Religious and Charitable Trust, Third Edition at page 238 for the proposition that the court has no jurisdiction to grant an application by a sebaite to sanction his transaction on the ground of necessity. Mr. Banerjee referred to AIR 1970 SC 439 (Kalank Devi Sansthan v. Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal) and AIR 1961 All 73 (Beharilal v. Thakur Radha Balabji). In the Allahabad case, it was held that the power of a manager of an idol is analogous to those of the manager of an infant. Whether a transaction by the Manager is beneficial to the estate must depend upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case and guidance alone is to be obtained in regard to the general scope of the doctrine of the benefit of the estate from the illustrations which are found in the reported cases. It was held in that case that the sale of an old house which was not in a dilapidated condition but which required extensive repairs was neither a prudent transaction nor for the benefit of the estate.

9. In my view the petitioner Mohan Chand Singh is not entitled to any order in this petition. In this suit one of the parties have been appointed Receiver in an interlocutory application and usual order under Order 40, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been made, namely that, if the Receiver grants lease of any property exceeding three years, leave of the Court will be necessary. The properties over which Receiver was appointed are debutter properties. In (1937) 41 Cal WN 627 = ILR (1937) 2 Cal 133 (Sree Iswar Narain Jew v. Henry E. Soler) an application was made before Ameer Ali, J. by a shebaite asking for leave of the court to sell or mortgage certain debutter property but the learned Judge did not grant such leave stating, inter alia that the court should not give a certificate of necessity. Before me, one of the shebaite and trustee is also applying for leave to be given to the Receiver appointed in this suit to grant lease of debutter property for 99 years. The question is, would it make any difference because here a sebaite or trustee is applying for leave to be granted to the receiver to lease out debutter property for 99 years instead of themselves asking for leave to lease out debutter property as was the case before Ameer Ali, J.

10. Leave to lease out debutter property for 99 years by the Receiver would mean giving of certificate by court to the Receiver for legal necessity. The Learned Advocate General did not give me any authority in support of his proposition that because Receiver was appointed the court will give leave to the Receiver to grant lease for 99 years in respect of the debutter property pending the hearing of the suit. The Learned Counsel appearing for some of the respondents and supporting the Learned Advocate General referred to me a case in AIR 1929 Cal 828 = 50 Cal LJ 333. This decision relates to an appeal which has arisen out of a dispute as to the rights of parties in a debutter estate. One of the questions arising in this appeal is whether lease granted by a Receiver appointed by the Court was properly done. It was stated by the appellants that the decision of lower Appellate Court was not justified. The lease was cancelled on the ground that the Receiver concealed from the court the fact that the lessee was his own grandson and a brother of a previous sebaht. Reliance was placed before me of certain observations in this judgment:

"The Receiver has of course no power to lease the debutter property without the sanction of the court and the court below has quite rightly held that any misrepresentation or concealment of material facts from the court in connection with a proposed lease would vitiate the authority of the Receiver to grant the lease. In the present case there was such concealment and it is possible that the court might not have granted sanction to the lease or at least might have scrutinized the terms more closely had it known of the relationship."

11. I do not think this decision helps the contention of the parties supporting the Learned Advocate General's client, namely, the court should grant leave to receiver to grant lease for 99 years in respect of Debutter property pending the hearing of this suit. In every case if Receiver is appointed, the receiver cannot grant lease of property for three years unless there is leave from the court. This suit relates to debutter properties. In this suit one of the prayers in cancellation of the present scheme and framing of a scheme of management for the administration of the estate and for the worship of the plaintiff deity and the performance of the ceremonies. In the Deed of Endowment it is expressly stated by the donor that the debutter properties should not be leased out for any term exceeding three years. In the suit there is prayer for framing of another scheme. The admitted position of law is that a debutter property cannot be sold or leased out except on the ground of urgent need or legal necessity. The leasing out or sale of debutter property for such purpose can be made by the sebaits and trustees for the time being. Merely because a receiver has been appointed by this court, on the application of one of the sebaits and trustees the court should not grant a permanent lease for 99 years in respect of a valuable debutter property. Nor the court should grant a certificate for legal necessity. Again, this is not an application by the Receiver for directions pursuant to a Receiver's meeting. Even if there was such an application, either by the Receiver or by any of the parties who is directed to move in a Receiver's meeting, then a question would arise whether this court should grant long lease of 99 years in respect of debutter property. Granting of such lease by the Receiver for 99 years, would affect the scheme that might be framed under the decree in this suit. In any event, this is an application by one trustee, and although other trustees are supporting him but the plaintiff Prem Chand, who is claiming to be a trustee is opposing. At the final hearing of the suit plaintiff may succeed and in that event lease for 99 years of the debutter property would be given by some of the trustees and sebaits and not all. I do not think that this court should grant a certificate of legal necessity or would grant leave to the Receiver of the debutter properties to make permanent lease of a valuable debutter property pending the hearing of the suit.

12. In view of the above matter, I cannot pass any order on this application. However, I am making it clear that this order of mine will not affect the rights and powers of the sebaits and trustees to act according to law. Neither this order will affect the receiver appointed in this suit to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out his duties as Receiver. There will be no order on this application except as above. The petitioner must pay the costs of this application to the contesting respondents.

Suit No. 54 of 1963, D/- 15-3-1972.

Civil Procedure Code (1908), O. 22, R. 4 (1) — Plea open to legal representative of deceased defendant — Service of fresh writ of summons on him if necessary.

A legal representative substituted in place of a deceased defendant cannot be permitted to make out a new case afresh in another written statement at this stage. He has to take up the suit at the stage at which it was left when the original party died and to continue it. The only right he has is to make a defence appropriate to his character as a legal representative of the deceased defendant. His case is on a different footing than the addition of a new defendant which is governed by O. 1, R. 10 (iv). Therefore, only the order for substitution would be served on the substituted defendant and no fresh writ of summons could be issued for service on the substituted defendant. ORDER :— In this matter on January 14, 1972 an application was made by the plaintiff for recording the death of defendant No. 1 Harilal N. Shukla and for substitution of his heirs in his place. The defendant No. 2 appeared through his advocate before me. By consent, order was passed in terms of prayers in the petition. One of the prayers in the petition was prayer (f); wherein, the petitioner prayed that a fresh writ of summons be issued for service on the substituted defendants. By consent, order was passed in terms of prayer (f) of the writ of summons. Thereafter at the time of settlement of the draft, a question arose as to whether the fresh writ of summons should be served on the substituted defendants. The matter was mentioned before me on March 1, 1972, on behalf of the plaintiff, who contended that a fresh writ of summons need not be issued but only the above order may be served on the substituted defendants. Thereafter, I directed that the Registrar-in-Insolvency may submit a note on the point as to the practice followed in such matters.

2. Mr. S. K. Mitra, Registrar-in-Insolvency, has submitted before me a well-considered note on March 7, 1972. In the note prepared by the Registrar-in-Insolvency it is stated as follows:—

3. An order for substitution in place of a deceased defendant is made under Order XXII, Rule 4 (1) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Rule 4 (2) of the said Order XXII runs as follows:—

"Any person so made a party may make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant."

4. The substituted party has been given the right to make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant. So, the substituted party is entitled to have notice of substitution, but the question arises as to the mode of giving such notice. Would it be by issue of fresh writ of summons or by serving its order and directing that its substituted defendant may make defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant?

5. It is well settled that when a party to a suit dies, his legal representative is substituted in order that the suit might proceed and a decision be arrived at. It is the original parties' rights and disabilities that have to be considered and not those of the legal representative (See AIR 1924 Lah 45, Gulli v. Sawan). Defence not open to the defendant, if alive, cannot be raised by his legal representative in that character (See AIR 1944 Lah 473, Sadhu Singh v. Firm Kahan Singh). A person substituted as legal representative of a deceased party must adopt the pleadings filed by the deceased party. He cannot raise a new point inconsistent with the pleadings of the deceased. The legal representative of a deceased cannot set up his own claims or rights in the case though he may do so in any other proceedings (See AIR 1930 Mad 593, Muhammad Naina Maracair v. Ummamia Kani Ammal). All that the legal representative can, therefore, do is to take up the suit at the stage at which it was left when the original party dies and to continue it. It follows, therefore, that if any defence to the suit was not open to the deceased defendant, his legal representative would not be at liberty to plead that defence.

6. If a writ of summons is served on the substituted party, the writ itself will give the party a right to enter appearance in the suit and to file his written statement within the time specified therein. In the instant case, the deceased defendant having already filed his written statement jointly with the defendant No. 1, his legal representative cannot be permitted to make out a new case afresh in another written statement at this stage. It is to be noted in this connection, that the case of addition of a defendant is different. Addition of defendant may be made under O. I. R. 10 (iv) which provides as follows:—

"Whether a defendant is added, the plaint shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, be amended in such manner as may be necessary, and amended copies of the summons and of the plaint shall be served on the new defendant and, if the Court thinks fit, on the original defendant."

This rule specifically provides for service of writ of summons on the parties added, but Order XXII, Rule 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure, provides for the procedure in case of death of one of the several defendants or of the sole defendant. Order XXII, Rule 4 is worded differently. This Order says, that any person so made a party may make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant. It is the only right that a substituted defendant has, namely, that he can make a defence appropriate to his character as a legal representative of the deceased defendant.

7. In the premises, I think that the prayer in paragraph (f) of the petition, namely, fresh writ of summons should be issued for service on the substituted defendant cannot be granted. I recall the said order for issue of fresh writ of summons for service on the substituted defendants and I order that this order for substitution may be served on the substituted defendants. Leave is given to the substituted defendants to enter appearance and to make any defence appropriate to their character as legal representatives of the deceased defendant. Leave is given to the substituted defendants to file additional written statement within 10 days from the date of the service of this order upon them. Service on the substituted defendants may be made by registered post. The order dated January 14, 1971 is modified as above.

Prayer not granted.

M. L. Mehata, for Petitioner; Satyendra Prosad Sen, for Respondent; Sachindra Chandra Das Gupta, Amicus Curiae.

ORDER:— The petitioner is the tenant and the opposite party is the landlord of the disputed premises. The opposite party filed a suit for ejectment of the petitioner on the ground of default. The petitioner filed written statement. Subsequently the opposite party filed an application under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and the learned Judge allowed that application and struck out the petitioner's defence against delivery of possession. Thereafter, the suit was decreed ex parte on September 1, 1967. On September 22, 1967 the petitioner filed an application under Section 17-C of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act as incorporated by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967. The application was resisted by the opposite party and the learned Judge rejected the application. The petitioner has thereafter obtained this Rule.

2. Under Section 17-C as incorporated by the said Ordinance an application could be made in a proceeding where the decree for the recovery of possession was passed before the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967. The application was made on September 22, 1967, that is, at a time when the Ordinance was still in force. The Ordinance came into effect on August 26, 1967. The right sought to be enforced by the petitioner by virtue of this application is a right conferred on him by Section 17-C as incorporated by the Ordinance. Section 17-C as it then stood said that it would be attracted where the decree was passed before the commencement of the Ordinance. Here, as I have said, the Ordinance commenced to have effect from August 26, 1967, but the decree was passed on September 1, 1967, that is, after the commencement of the Ordinance. So Section 17-C as incorporated by the Ordinance on the basis of which the petitioner claimed the right is not attracted to the instant case. It is no doubt true that when the learned Judge considered this matter the Ordinance was replaced by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1968. Section 1 (2) of the Act specifically states that the Act shall be deemed to have come into force on 26th August, 1967. Mr. Mehata refers to the decisions of this Court in Benu Roy v. Manindra Nath Chatterjee, 73 Cal WN 10 = (AIR 1969 Cal 67) and Md. Yusuf v. Golam Jilani, (1969) 73 Cal WN 736. Firstly, those cases are distinguishable. In those cases the question involved was the right of a tenant to make an application after the Amendment Act was published in March 1968. But in the instant case the application under Section 17-C which has become Section 17-B under the Amendment Act was made within sixty days of the commencement of the Ordinance for enforcement of the right conferred by the Ordinance. Secondly, with all respects I am unable to agree with the reasonings in those cases. The decisions in those cases proceeded on the footing that a right to make an application under Section 17-B has been conferred by the Amendment Act of 1968. But that does not appear to me to be really so. The right was in fact conferred on the tenant for the first time by the Ordinance of 1967 and that right was to be exercised within sixty days from the date the Ordinance came into force. Since the Ordinance remained valid only for six months, an Act was necessary to incorporate the rights conferred by the Ordinance as a permanent feature in the statute. No new right to make such an application was conferred by the Act of 1968 and so there was no question of any fresh application under Section 17-B which was formerly S. 17-C after the publication of the Amendment Act, 1968. I cannot therefore agree with the decisions in those two cases to the effect that to enable fresh applications to be filed the Amendment Act of 1968 should be held to have commenced on March 26, 1968. But since the instant case is distinguishable it is not necessary to refer the matter to a Division Bench. Here, as I have said, it is not a question of fresh application but the application was made when the Ordinance was still in force and the application was to enforce a right conferred by the Ordinance which specifically said that the decree must have been passed before the commencement of the Ordinance. Since in the instant case the decree was passed after that, Section 17-C which is now Section 17-B is not attracted.

3. The Rule is therefore discharged.

4. No order is made as to costs.
Petition dismissed.

Civil Rule Nos. 565(W)-569(W) of 1964, D/- 14-12-1971.

Index Note:— (A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Powers of High Court — High Court has no authority to decide whether a legislature while enacting a law has or has not applied its mind.

Brief Note:— (A) High Court can go into the issue as to whether a particular legislation is within the legislative competence of the legislature on the provisions of the constitutional law, or determine whether a particular piece of legislation is a colourable exercise of its power or not. It can also decide whether a particular legislation or a part thereof suffers from the vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers. But apart from that, the powers of the legislature being plenary the High Court has no authority to adjudicate if the legislature has or has not applied its mind while enacting a law. Index Note: (B) West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1 of 1954), S. 61 (as introduced by Bengal Act (4 of 1963)) — There is no delegation of legislative power to executive — Assuming that there is delegation it is neither excessive nor unguided so as to amount to abdication of legislative powers. (Para 10)

Index Note:— (C) Constitution of India, Art. 245 — State legislature enacting legal provision whereby State Government could apply "mutatis mutandis" provisions of a State law with necessary changes to territories transferred to it — Such provision does not amount to excessive delegation — It is within competence of State Legislature to enact such provision.

Brief Note:— Where a State legislature enacts a provision of law whereby it authorises the State Government to apply a certain State law "mutatis mutandis" with such changes as are necessary to territories transferred to such State by issue of a notification and to repeal the law prevailing in the transferred territory, the State Legislature does not authorise the executive or those implementing that provision to make any subordinate legislation. Even if it amounts to delegation it is neither uncontrolled nor unguided. All that it delegates is power to make such changes as would be necessary due to lapse of time. Making of such changes is within the control of the substantive provisions of the statute itself and hence making of such provision is within the competence of the legislature.

Index Note:— (D) Words and Phrases — "Mutatis Mutandis" implications of.

Phrase "Mutatis Mutandis" is often used in legislation in applying or extending legislative provisions to same or similar circumstances or to same or similar subjects. It is nothing but a rule of adaptation. By providing for application of a certain law or its provision "Mutatis Mutandis" the legislature neither abdicates nor delegates its legislative power. (1963) 67 Cal WN 129 & ILR (1966) 1 Cal 495, Dist.

(Para 10)

Index Note:— (E) Transfer of Territories Act (1956), S. 43 — Provision for extending existing law in transferred territories — Repeal of existing law need not be by Parliament.

Section 43 provided for extension of existing law in territories transferred from Bihar State to West Bengal State until otherwise provided by competent legislature or competent authority. When West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1953) by S. 61 provided that by notification under Section 60 the State Government of West Bengal could repeal the existing Bihar Land Reforms Act (30 of 1950) so far as it applied to transferred territories and such a notification was issued the Bihar Land Reforms Act stood repealed. There was no need that Parliament itself should repeal it. (Para 11)

(F) West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act (1953) (as amended by West Bengal Act 40 of 1963), Section 61 (2) Provide (ii) — Provision neither vague nor unworkable.

There is no inherent vagueness in the provision. It is a provision providing the consequence to the extension of the West Bengal Act to the transferred territory. The legislative mandate is to the effect that the land or interest which an intermediary would have been entitled to retain under the provision of the West Bengal Estates Act but which had already vested under the different provision of the Bihar Land Reforms Act should, when possible, be restored back to the intermediary. The words "if possible" had to be incorporated because the Bihar Land Reforms Act came into effect more than 10 years ago and it might in certain cases practically be not possible for the authorities to restore back lands or interests which had vested under the provision of the Bihar Act. It leads to no uncertainty. It only gives sanction to the failure to restore possession which is otherwise directed as a consequence to the extension of the West Bengal Act to the transferred territory. (Para 14)

Arun Kr. Datta (Jr.) and Nanda Lal Pal, for Petitioner; S. C. Das Gupta and Suproakash Banerjee, for Opposite Parties.

ORDER:— In these five Rules the petitioners are challenging three notifications and two proclamations issued by the State of West Bengal or its Authorities. As common questions have been raised in all these Rules they have been heard together and would be disposed of by one judgment.

2. It is not in dispute that facts relevant to the issues raised in these five Writ petitions are same or similar and as such I prefer to set out the facts in Civil Rule 656 (W) of 1964. The petitioner in this Rule Sri Sri Devi Mata is the family Deity of Panchkote Raj Estate. The petitioner had been holding certain lands in intermediary interest in Purulia which was previously within the District of Manbhum in the State of Bihar. On September 1, 1956 the Bihar and West Bengal (Transfer of Territories) Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the Transfer of Territories Act) came into force. By virtue of Section 3 of this Act major part of Purulia was transferred with effect from 1-11-1956 to West Bengal. Section 43 however provided that notwithstanding such transfer until otherwise provided by a competent legislature or other competent authority the laws then applicable to the transferred territories would continue to remain applicable to such territories. Section 44 provided that the appropriate Government may within a year from the date of transfer adapt the laws which continued to remain in force with necessary modifications and that such laws so adapted would remain in force until altered, repealed or amended by a competent authority or competent legislature. On the date of transfer Bihar Land Reforms Act 1950 which provided for vesting of certain categories of intermediary interest was in force in the territory so transferred to West Bengal and by virtue of Section 43 of the Transfer of Territories Act, 1956 the provisions of the said Act continued to remain in force in the transferred territory of Purulia. It is not in dispute that the provisions of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 are materially different from the provisions of the corresponding West Bengal Act viz., West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953.

3. On September 24, 1958 an Act passed by the West Bengal Legislature came into effect which is called the West Bengal Transferred Territories (Assimilation of Laws Act), 1958 (hereinafter referred to as the Assimilation of Laws Act). By the provisions of Section 3 of this Assimilation of Laws Act read with Schedule 2 thereof the provisions of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 was kept in force for the transferred territories including the transferred territory of Purulia. Applying the provisions of the said Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 the Government of West Bengal issued a proclamation under the Section 3-B of the said Act announcing its intention to take over the intermediary interest in the transferred territories to West Bengal. The said proclamation was challenged by the petitioner in a Writ petition in this Court which was registered as C. R. 589 (W) of 1963. It is, however, conceded on behalf of the petitioner that the petitioner's challenge failed and the said Rule was discharged sometime in 1966.

4. In the meantime by West Bengal Act 40 of 1963 the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 was amended by incorporating therein a new chapter being chapter 8 consisting of two sections being Sections 60 and 61. Section 60 provided that the provisions of the newly incorporated chapter shall come into force on such date and in such area of the transferred territory as the State Government may by notification appoint. Section 61 provides that on issue of a notification under Section 60 the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 shall stand repealed and the provisions of the foregoing chapters of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act shall mutatis mutandis apply to the areas in respect of which notification under Section 60 is made. Section 61 also provides for certain adaptations and certain legal consequences which are to follow on the application of West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act.

5. On February 17, 1964 the State of West Bengal issued a notification under Section 60 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act appointing 1st of March, 1964 to be the date on which the provisions of chapter 8 of the Act shall come into force in all the areas of the territories transferred from Bihar to the State of West Bengal. This notification is annexure 'A' to the Writ petition. Then followed two notifications both dated 10-3-1964 under Section 4 (1) read with Section 61 and read with Sections 52 and 61 respectively of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act whereby the State declared that with effect from 1st of Baisakh, 1371 B. S. corresponding to 14-4-1964 all the estates and rights of every intermediary as also the lands held by raiyats and under-raiyats together with their rights therein in the District of Purulia shall vest in the State. These are annexures 'B' and 'C' to the Writ petition. These notifications were followed by two proclamations issued by the Collector of Purulia respectively under Section 10 (1) of the Estates Acquisition Act and R. 6(1) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954. These proclamations are annexures 'D' and 'E' to the Writ petition. These three notifications and the two proclamations annexures 'A' to 'E' are the subject-matter of challenge in this Rule. Same or similar notifications and proclamations are the subject-matter of challenge in the other Rules.

6. Bereft of other details petitioners' substantial challenge is to the extension and application of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act to the territories transferred from Bihar to the State of West Bengal by S. 3 of the said Transfer of Territories Act, 1956. Similar challenge was thrown though not by the present petitioners to such extension and application of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act to such transferred territories in C. R. No. 476 (W) of 1964 (Amar Nath Singh v. The State of West Bengal) Mr. Dutt who is appearing in support of these Rules before me argued the said case but unsuccessfully. Extension of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act to the transferred territories was upheld by my learned brother D. Basu, J., and his judgment was upheld both by the Appeal Court as also by the Supreme Court. Notwithstanding his failure in the said case Mr. Dutt has again disputed validity of extension and application of the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act to such transferred territories on grounds which according to him are totally new.

7. Mr. Dutt appearing in support of these Rules has raised three points which I set out hereunder as far as possible in his own language.

(1) in enacting chapter 8 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 and in applying Sections 60 and 61 to the transferred territories there has been no honest application of mind by the legislature and as such those two sections can have no application.

(2) Section 61 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act seeks to extend the provisions of the foregoing chapter of that Act mutatis mutandis; but in so extending without legislative amendment of substantive provisions, the legislature has abdicated its function by leaving the matter uncontrolled by any guide line in favour of the executive; or in other words the said section suffers from the view of excessive delegation of legislative powers.

(3) in view of the provisions of Sections 3, 43 and 44 of the said Transfer of Territories Act, 1956 without specific repeal of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 by a competent legislature, the said Act cannot be construed to have been repealed in terms of Section 61 (1) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act.

8. These Rules are being contested by the State of West Bengal and the Learned Government Pleader Mr. S. C. Dasgupta appearing on behalf of the State has contested each of these points raised by Mr. Dutt.

9. To take up the first point raised by Mr. Dutt I have felt great difficulty in appreciating the true import of his contention. Mr. Dutt to support his first point has placed strong reliance on the line of decisions by the Supreme Court starting from the case of Barium Chemicals v. The Company Law Board, AIR 1967 SC 295 and the case of Padfield v. Minister of Agriculture, (1968-2 WLR 924) the House of Lords held that where a statute conferring discretion on the Minister did not expressly limit or define the extent of his discretion his discretion might nevertheless be limited to the extent that it must not be so exercised as to frustrate the object of the statute. In all these cases therefore what was laid down was that where any authority is vested with any power or discretion by a statute either with express or implied limitations, it is open to the Court to go into the question as to whether the power or the discretion has been exercised within the limits so specified or implied. None of these cases is concerned with exercise of legislative power by the legislature. It is really difficult for me to accept a proposition that this Court has the authority to adjudicate over the application or non-application of mind by the legislature in enacting laws. Undoubtedly this Court can go into an issue as to whether a particular legislation is within the legislative competence of the legislature on the provisions of the Constitutional Law. This Court may also consider whether a particular piece of legislation is really in colourable exercise of such legislative powers or not. Or this Court may even consider whether a particular enactment or any particular provision thereof suffers from the vice of unauthorised delegation of legislative powers. But apart from these issues the power of the legislature being otherwise plenary, the legislature is not answerable to this Court on a proposed issue as sought to be raised by Mr. Dutt in his first point. Mr. Dutt has neither contended that the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1963 is ultra vires the powers of the State Legislature nor that it had been passed in colourable exercise of its powers. Of course, he has raised a separate point that it suffers the vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers but he is not pleading the same to support his first point. That apart, as a legislature competent to legislate for the territories of West Bengal on matters of acquisition of estates and rights of intermediaries or raiyats therein the State Legislature has passed the Amending Act to extend the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act to the transferred territories by repealing the earlier applicable Bihar Land Reforms Act. Such being the position, it is difficult to find any substance in the suggestion made by Mr. Dutt that such legislation reflects any inapplication of mind by the legislature. In this view I must overrule the first point raised by Mr. Dutt.

10. The second point raised by Mr. Dutt is based on an assumption that Section 61 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act as incorporated by the Amending Act really constitutes delegation of legislative powers by the legislature to the executive. In my view, however, there is nothing in Section 61 which indicates that there has been any delegation of legislative powers. Secondly, I am also of the view that even if it be assumed that there is any such delegation, it cannot be said that such delegation is so excessive or unguided that it amounts to abdication of legislative powers. Mr. Dutt's grievance is with Section 61 (1) of the said Act which provides that on the issue of a notification under Section 60, the Bihar Land Reforms Act shall stand repealed and the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, shall "mutatis mutandis" apply to the areas to which the said provision is extended. According to Mr. Dutt by leaving with the executive the right to apply the provisions mutatis mutandis, the legislature has delegated legislative powers. The term 'mutatis mutandis' means with necessary changes in points of details. Mr. Dutt has again relied on a number of decisions in the cases of Devidas v. The State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1895 and Comms. of Customs v. Cure and Deeley, (1961) 3 All ER 641. But I am unable to find the real relevancy of these decisions to the point raised. In the former Supreme Court declared a provision of a taxing statute to be unconstitutional when it resulted in absolute abdication of legislative powers in favour of the delegatee while in the latter the Queens Bench Division held that regulation 12 framed in exercise of powers under Sec. 33 (1) of the Finance Act, 1940 was not within the powers conferred by the said section or in other words the regulation was ultra vires the Act. Here it is not the contention of Mr. Dutt that the Amending Act which brought in Section 61 is ultra vires the power of the State Legislature. What he contends, however, is that by incorporating the phrase "mutatis mutandis" the legislature has abdicated its legislative powers. There, however, Mr. Dutt is not correct. By the said phrase the legislature has neither abdicated nor delegated any of its legislative powers. The said phrase is used not only in Section 61 but also in the other provisions of the same statute as for example, Sections 15 (5), 38 and 52. Such a phrase is often used in legislation in applying or extending legislative provisions to same or similar circumstances or to same or similar subjects. It is nothing but a rule of adaptation. The decision of this Court in the case of Haranath Ghosh v. The State, (1963) 67 Cal WN 129 relied on by Mr. Dutt as also the decision of this Court in the case of Ambujakhaya Mukherjee v. The State, ILR (1966) 1 Cal 495 (at 525) relied on by Mr. Dasgupta explain the real implication of such a phrase. It is held "the words mutatis mutandis following the word modifications make it abundantly clear as to the modifications intended under Section 52 of the Act. In other words the word modifications in Section 52 of the Act means contextual adaptation of these chapters of the Act to the case of raiyats and under-raiyats and not amendment of the substantive provisions and the effects of those chapters". It is explicit on the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act reference being made to Section 4 (2), Section 4 (6) and the like that such provisions could not have been appropriately made applicable to the transferred territories where such provisions are being made applicable nearly a decade after the promulgation of law except by appropriate adaptation. It is only to meet such exigencies that Section 61 provided that the earlier provisions would apply mutatis mutandis i.e. with necessary changes or adaptations. This in my view, does not authorise the executive or those implementing the provisions of the Act to make any subordinate legislation and as such it does not amount to delegation of legislative powers. Next even if I assume that it confers an authority to make subordinate legislation it can in no way be said that the power so vested is uncontrolled or unguided and as such amounts to total abdication of legislative powers. All the essential part of the legislation is there incorporated in the statute what has been delegated is the power to make such changes as would be necessary on the face of the provisions in their application to the transferred territory to which such provisions are being extended long after the promulgation of the law. Making the changes is fully within the control of the substantive provisions of the statute itself. In this view the second point raised by Mr. Dutt must also be overruled.

11. The third point raised by Mr. Dutt was in a way also raised by him in the case of C. R. No. 476 (W) of 1964 (Cal) and was overruled by my learned brother D. Basu, J. Question raised by Mr. Dutt is as to whether there has been any effective repeal of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 so far as the transferred territories are concerned. According to him because of the provisions of Sections 3 and 43 of the Transfer of Territories Act, 1956 it was necessary that the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 should be repealed by a competent legislature and Section 61 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act cannot fulfil this purpose. What Mr. Dutt suggests is that when the Parliament by Section 43 kept alive Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 it could not be repealed by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act. In my view this contention of Mr. Dutt is not sound. Section 43 of the Transfer of Territories Act, 1956 specifically provides for a transitional application of laws to the transferred territory pending the matter being taken up by the competent legislature. It extended the existing laws but subject to an important reservation viz., "until otherwise provided by a competent legislature or other competent authority". In the present case after the transfer of the territory to the State of West Bengal, the legislature of West Bengal became the competent authority to legislate on matters involving acquisition of estates and rights of intermediaries therein in respect of the territories so transferred. Now the said West Bengal Legislature has enacted in Section 61 incorporated by the Amending Act of 1963 that on the issue of a notification under Section 60 in the area in respect of which such notification is issued, the Bihar Land Reforms Act shall stand repealed. The notification now having been made under Section 60 in respect of transferred territory the Bihar Act therefore stands repealed. It is not necessary in my view that when the Parliament made the transitional provision in Section 43 Acts kept alive by such provision must needs be repealed by the Parliament alone. In this view the third point raised by Mr. Dutt is also overruled.

12. Incidentally, Mr. Dutt contended that the impugned notifications and the proclamations were not made in compliance with the procedural law. He condemned the notifications on the ground that those are notional notifications. In my view he has not been able to point out non-fulfilment of any procedural prerequisite for the notifications or the proclamations. Secondly it is difficult to appreciate how the notifications are notional. Reference has been made by Mr. Dutt to the notifications made annexures 'B' and 'C' and it is suggested that such notifications could not have been issued under the joint provisions of Sections 4 and 61 and Sections 4 and 52 and 61. Section 4 authorises the State Government to issue the necessary notifications for taking over rights of the intermediaries. This provision is extended to the transferred territories by Section 61. Similarly provision of S. 4 is extended to rayats by S. 52 and that again to the transferred territories by Section 61. Such being the position, the authorities issuing the notifications had to recite all the provisions which together conferred the power to take over such interests. I find no irregularity in issuing the notifications in such manner. It is also difficult to accept the suggestion of Mr. Dutt that separate notifications under S. 61 and S. 4 in one case and separate notifications under Ss. 61 and 52 and S. 4 in the other was necessary in the present case. In this view I must overrule this incidental point raised by Mr. Dutt.

13. Lastly, Mr. Dutt has referred to Section 61 (2) proviso (ii) and has contended that such a provision is too vague and unworkable. This sub-section read with the relevant proviso reads as follows "estates or interests vested in the State Government under the provision of Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 (Bihar Act 30 of 1950), prior to the date of issue of the notification shall be deemed to have vested in the State Government under the provisions of this Act provided that (ii) any land or interest which is vested in the State Government under the provision of Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 but which the ex-intermediary shall be entitled to retain under the provision of this Act shall, if possible, be restored to him and no compensation shall be payable for any land or interest so restored."

14. Firstly in my view this provision takes effect only in respect of estates or interests which had earlier vested under appropriate notification under Section 3-A of the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 prior to the extension of the West Bengal Act and there is no evidence in the present case that any of the estates of any of the present petitioners had so vested so that it may call for application of the above provision. Then in my opinion there is no inherent vagueness in the provision. It is a provision providing the consequence to the extension of the West Bengal Act to the transferred territory. The legislative mandate is to the effect that the land or interest which an intermediary would have been entitled to retain under the provision of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act but which had already vested under the different provision of the Bihar Land Reforms Act should when possible be restored back to the intermediary. The words "if possible" had to be incorporated because the Bihar Land Reforms Act came into effect more than ten years ago and it might in certain cases practically be not possible for the authorities to restore back lands or interests which had vested under the provision of the Bihar Act. It leads to no uncertainty. It only gives sanction to the failure to restore possession which is otherwise directed as a consequence to the extension of the West Bengal Act to the transferred territory. In this view I must overrule the last contention of Mr. Dutt.

15. As all the points raised in support of these Rules fail the applications fail and the Rules are discharged.

All interim orders are vacated forthwith.

There will be no order for costs.

Let the operation of this order remain stayed for four weeks.

Let a plain copy of this order be given to the learned Advocate for the petitioner.

Rules discharged.

FULL BENCH

A. K. MUKHERJEA, Sabyasachi Mukharji and M. M. Dutt, JJ.

Madan Mohan Ghosh and others, Petitioners v. Sishu Bala Atta and others, Opposite Parties.

Full Bench Reference 1 of 1968 in C. R. No. 674 of 1958; C. R. Nos. 2275, 3410, 3764 and 3624 of 1961, 3465 of 1965, 2027 and 2362 of 1967, D/- 28-7-1972.

Index Note: (A) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Section 26-F — Right of pre-emption under Section 26-F whether survives W. B. Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 after Chapter VI thereof comes into force. (X-Ref:— W. B. Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (1 of 1954), S. 6 and Chap. IV).

Brief Note: (A) After the enforcement of Chapter VI of the W. B. Estates Acquisition Act and the vesting of interest of raiyats and under-raiyats on and from April 14, 1956 corresponding to Baisakh 1, 1363 B. S. the co-sharer raiyats of a holding ceased to be co-sharers and each raiyat of the holding became a direct tenant under the State in respect of the land of that holding which he is entitled to retain under sub-section (1) of Section 6. As the co-sharer raiyats ceased to be co-sharers on and from the date of vesting, the question of exercise of the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act cannot arise, for, the condition precedent to the exercise of the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F being that the person exercising that right must be a co-sharer of the person making the transfer. (Para 28)

When a raiyat having a separate holding or tenancy created by virtue of sub-section (2) of Section 6 relating to the land retained by him under sub-sec. (1) of Section 6, dies leaving more than one heir, such heirs will become co-sharers of such holding and will be entitled to the right of pre-emption under Sec. 26-F. Similarly, when the raiyat of such a holding transfers a portion of the holding to another person, that person will become a co-sharer of the raiyat and the right of pre-emption will also be available in such a case. (Para 28)

A transfer made by a co-sharer raiyat as contemplated by clause (2) above before the enforcement of Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955,

may be pre-empted by another co-sharer in the tenancy in accordance with Section 26-F, but a transfer made after the enforcement of Section 8, the right of pre-emption by a co-sharer can only be exercised in the manner laid down in Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act. (Para 28)

The under-raiyats have been elevated to the status of raiyats on the enforcement of Chapter VI. There is no difference between the position of raiyats and that of under-raiyats and what has been stated above on the question as to the effect of the enforcement of Chapter VI on the right of pre-emption of raiyats will also apply to under raiyats. (Para 28)

The decisions in AIR 1964 Cal 460 and (1964) 68 Cal WN 1055 in so far as they proceeded on the footing that the raiyats of a holding continued to be co-sharers even after vesting, are erroneous; but they have correctly interpreted the expression 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4, W. B. Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954. (1958) 62 Cal WN 360 and (1961) 65 Cal WN 354 and (1961) 65 Cal WN 811; (1963) 67 Cal WN 633; (1963) 67 Cal WN 848 and Civil Revn. Case No. 3366 of 1961, D/- 21-9-1962 (Cal), Overruled. (Para 28)

According to that interpretation, the expression "terms and conditions" in R. 4 includes the right of pre-emption of an occupancy raiyat under S. 26-F. (Paras 10, 20)

On the date of vesting the raiyats of a holding ceased to be co-sharers and the holding is split up into different holdings. (Para 13)

The words 'an intermediary' cannot be read as intermediaries. (Para 14)

Where both the impugned transfer and the application for pre-emption were made before the enforcement of Chapter VI, which took place during the pendency of the pre-emption proceeding, but before any order was passed by the trial Court, as the raiyats of an occupancy holding who were co-sharers before the vesting ceased to be co-sharers, the application was no longer maintainable and the proceeding for pre-emption became infructuous. It is clear from the opening words of sub-section (7) of Section 26-F that the consequences of an order passed under sub-section (5) as contained in clauses (a), (b) & (c) of sub-section (7), will take effect from the date of the order. (Para 30)

Index Note: (B) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 26-F — Application by non-notified co-sharer — Limitation. (X-Ref:— Limitation Act (1908), S. 18, Art. 181).

Brief Note: (B) Article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908 applies to the case of an application under Section 26-F by a co-sharer tenant who has not been served with a notice under Section 26-C and his application would be in time if made within three years of the sale. In applying Art. 181, an application under Section 26-F is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure. AIR 1948 Cal 48 (SB) Foll.; AIR 1953 SC 98; AIR 1964 SC 752 and AIR 1965 SC 540. Disting. (Para 32)

Where the pre-emptor was kept by fraud from the knowledge of his right under Section 26-F he is entitled to the benefit of Sec. 18 of the Limitation Act. (Para 36)

Index Note: (C) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 26-F (2) — Applicant not required to deposit compensation for the improvement made by the transferee.

Brief Note: (C) Under sub-sec. (2) of Section 26-F all that is required is that at the time of making the application, the applicant is to deposit in Court the amount of the consideration money or the value of the transferred portion or share of the holding, as stated in the notice under Section 26-C, together with compensation at the rate of ten per centum of such amount. M. M. DUTT, J.:— These are eight out of twelve Revision Cases referred to the Full Bench by a Division Bench consisting of Laik and S. K. Mukherjee, JJ. by their Order of Reference dated April 30, 1968. The point which induced the learned Judges of the Division Bench to refer the Revision Cases to the Full Bench is, whether the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act survives the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (West Bengal Act 1 of 1954) after Chapter VI thereof comes into force. In all these cases the reference has been made under Chapter VII, Rules 1, 2 and 4 of the Appellate Side Rules and consequently the Full Bench has to dispose of these Revision Cases also on merits. The point is involved in all these cases, but some of these involve other points which arise out of their respective facts and circumstances.

2. Laik and S. K. Mukherjee, JJ. have differed from two earlier Division Bench decisions of B. N. Banerjee and D. Basu, JJ. — one in the case of Abharan Chandra Saha v. Sanat Kumar Sen, 68 Cal WN 574 = (AIR 1964 Cal 460) and the other in Jyotish Chandra Das v. Dhananjay Bag, (1964) 68 Cal WN 1055. In these two decisions B. N. Banerjee and D. Basu, JJ. have held that the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F survived after the passing of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953.

3. Section 26-F provides that except in the case of a transfer to a co-sharer in the tenancy whose existing interest has accrued otherwise than by purchase, one or more co-sharer tenants of the holding, a portion or share of which is transferred, may within four months of the service of the notice under Section 26-C, apply to the Court for the said portion or share to be transferred to himself or themselves. This section confers on a co-sharer tenant of an occupancy holding, a right to compel another co-sharer tenant to sell his share in the holding to him instead of selling it to a stranger. The use of the term 'co-sharer' in S. 26-F contemplates that the holding must be under the ownership of more than one person. The holding must be an occupancy holding, that is, it must be the holding of raiyats having occupancy rights. So long as division of the holding does not take place in accordance with Section 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the holding remains a joint holding and each co-sharer will be entitled to pre-empt in case of transfer of a share or portion of the holding by a co-sharer to a stranger. The question is, whether after the coming into force of Chapter VI of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, co-sharership is destroyed, or in other words, whether new tenancies are created by virtue of the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act in respect of each co-sharer.

4. The West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, came into force on February 12, 1954. Sub-section (1) of Section 4 of the Act provides that the State Government may from time to time by notification declare that with effect from the date mentioned in the notification, all estates and the rights of every intermediary in each such estate situate in any district or part of a district specified in the notification, shall vest in the State free from all incumbrances. The date of vesting as mentioned in the notification which was published is Baisakh 1, 1362 B. S. corresponding to April 15, 1955. The term 'intermediary' as defined in the Act means a proprietor, tenure-holder, under tenure-holder or any other intermediary above a raiyat, or a non-agricultural tenant and includes a service tenure-holder, and in relation to mines and minerals, includes a lessee and a sub-lessee. Under the definition a raiyat was not an intermediary but anybody above a raiyat was an intermediary. Chapter VI contains provisions for acquisition of interests of raiyats and under-raiyats. Section 49 which is the first section of Chapter VI provides, that the provisions of Chapter VI shall come into force on such date and in such district or part of a district as the State Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, appoint and for this purpose different dates may be appointed for different districts or parts of districts. The consequences of the issue of such a notification under Section 49 are provided for in Section 52 which runs as follows:—

"52. Application of Chapters II, III, V and VII to raiyats and under-raiyats. On the issue of a notification under Section 49 the provisions of Chapters II, III, V and VII shall, with such modifications as may be necessary, apply mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats as if such raiyats and under-raiyats were intermediaries and the land held by them were estates and a person holding under a raiyat or an under-raiyat were a raiyat for the purposes of clauses (c) and (d) of Section 5:

Provided that where raiyat or an under-raiyat retains, under Section 6 read with this section, any land comprised in a holding, then notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in sub-section (2) of Section 6, he shall pay,—

(a) in cases where he was paying rent for the lands comprised in the holding and held by him immediately before the date of vesting (hereafter in this proviso referred to as the holding lands),—

(i) if he retains all the holding lands, the same rent as he was paying therefor immediately before the date of vesting, and

(ii) if the land retained by him forms part of the holding lands, such rent as bears the same proportion to the rent which he was paying for the holding lands immediately before the date of vesting as the area of the land retained by him bears to the area of all the holding lands;

(b) in cases where he was liable to pay rent but was not paying any rent for the holding lands immediately before the date of vesting on the ground that the rent payable by him therefor was not assessed, such rent as may be assessed, mutatis mutandis in accordance with the provisions of Section 42;

(c) in cases where he was liable to pay rent wholly in kind or partly in kind and partly in cash, then notwithstanding anything contained in clause (c) of Section 5, such rent as may be assessed in accordance with the provisions of Section 40, and

(d) in cases where he was liable immediately before the date of vesting to pay for the holding lands a variable cash rent periodically assessed, such rent as may be assessed, mutatis mutandis in accordance with the provisions of S. 42."

5. The notification under S. 49 was published on April 9, 1956 and Chap. VI came into force in all the districts of West Bengal with effect from April 10, 1956. After Chapter VI came into force raiyats and under-raiyats who were not intermediaries till then, became intermediaries and by virtue of Section 52, the provisions of Chapters II, III, V and VII were with such modifications as may be, to apply mutatis mutandis to raiyats and under-raiyats. Notifications were issued under Section 4 by the State Government and the interests of raiyats and under-raiyats vested in the State with effect from Baisakh 1, 1963 B. S. corresponding to April 14, 1956.

6. Section 6 provides for the right of intermediary to retain certain lands. It is necessary to refer to the following portions of sub-section (1) of Section 6 which are relevant for our present purpose—

"6. Right of intermediary to retain certain lands.—(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the cases mentioned in the proviso to sub-section (2) but subject to the other provisions of that sub-section, be entitled to retain with effect from the date of vesting—

(a) land comprised in homesteads;

(b) land comprised in or appertaining to buildings and structures, owned by the intermediary or by any person, not being a tenant, holding under him by leave or license;

Explanation—For the purposes of this clause, 'tenant' shall not include a thika tenant as defined in the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act, 1949 (West Bengal Act II of 1949):

(c) non-agricultural land in his khas possession, including land held under him by any person, not being a tenant, by leave or license, not exceeding fifteen acres in area, and excluding any land retained under clause (a);

Provided that the total area of land retained by an intermediary under clauses (a) and (c) shall not exceed twenty acres, as may be chosen by him;

Provided further that if the land retained by an intermediary under clause (c) or any part thereof is not utilised for a period of five consecutive years from the date of vesting for a gainful or productive purpose, the land or the part thereof may be resumed by the State Government subject to payment of compensation determined in accordance with the principles laid down in Sections 23 and 24 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (Act 1 of 1894);

(d) agricultural land in his khas possession not exceeding twenty-five acres in area, as may be chosen by him;

Provided that in such portions of the District of Darjeeling as may be declared by notification by the State Government to be hilly portions, an intermediary shall be entitled to retain all agricultural land in his khas possession, or any part thereof as may be chosen by him;"

7. By a notification dated May 28, 1954, the Government of West Bengal framed rules called the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954. (hereinafter referred to as the Rules). Rule 4 provides that every intermediary who retains possession of any land by virtue of the provisions of sub-section (1) of Section 6, shall, subject to the provisions of that Act, be deemed to hold such land from the date of vesting—

(a) If it is agricultural land, on the same terms and conditions as an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885;

(b) If it is non-agricultural land, on the same terms and conditions as a tenant under the West Bengal Non-agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949, holding non-agricultural land for not less than 12 years without any lease in writing.

8. By a notification dated September 7, 1962, Rule 4 was substituted as follows—

4. Any land retained by an intermediary under the provisions of sub-section (1) of Section 6 shall, subject to the provisions of the Act, be held by him from the date of vesting on the terms and conditions specified below:—

(3) If the land held by the intermediary be agricultural land, then—

(i) he shall hold it, mutatis mutandis, on the terms and conditions mentioned in Sections 23, 23-A, clause (a) of S. 25, Ss. 26 to 26-G, 52 to 55, sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 56, Sections 65, 67, sub-section (1) of Section 68, Sections 73, 86-A, sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of Section 87, so much of Section 159 as does not relate to protected interests, Sections 161 to 163, 166, sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of Section 167, Section 168, Sections 169 to 171 and Sections 173 to 177 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

9. This Rule again was amended by a notification dated August 1, 1964 and for the words and figures "Sections 26 to 26-G, 52 to 55", "Sections 26, 26-B, 26-C, 26-G, Sections 52 to 55" were substituted. By this amendment Sec. 26-F was expressly excluded from Rule 4 (3).

10. In 68 Cal WN 574 = (AIR 1964 Cal 460) it was contended that the expression "same terms and conditions as an occupancy raiyat" was not wide enough to include the right of pre-emption of an occupancy raiyat against the purchaser because such a right was not a term or condition of the tenancy, but only an incident of occupancy right. It was further contended that "term" of a tenancy meant the period for which the tenancy was created and "condition" of a tenancy signified, firstly, some quality annexed to an estate by virtue of which the estate may be defeated, enlarged or re-created, e.g., a condition as to re-entry, or a condition containing an option for renewal of the lease, or a condition as to holding over and, secondly, condition governing the relationship of landlord and tenant in matters of user, succession, enhancement or reduction of rent, eviction and the like. This contention was overruled by Banerjee and D. Basu, JJ. and it was held that the expression "terms and conditions" in Rule 4 of the Rules, was used in its general sense and included all the incidents of an occupancy raiyat holding. be the same as between the landlord and the occupancy tenant or between the occupancy tenant and his co-sharers and that the expression "terms and conditions" would include or was intended to include the right of pre-emption of an occupancy raiyat. The same view has been expressed by Banerjee and D. Basu, JJ. in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1055. The above two Bench decisions only considered whether the words "terms and conditions" in Rule 4 before it was amended would include the right of pre-emption. It has been already stated, that on September 7, 1962, R. 4 was substituted and in the substituted Rule 26-F was included. After the inclusion of 26-F in sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 it cannot be said that the expression "terms and conditions" in Rule 4 would not include the right of pre-emption under Sec. 26-F. Later, we shall consider the effect of the exclusion of 26-F from sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 by the subsequent notification dated August 1, 1964.

11. Laik and S. K. Mukherjee, JJ. have differed with the two aforesaid Bench decisions and have held that the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F did not subsist after Chapter VI of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 had come into force. The reasons given by the learned Judges are contained in seven grounds which are as follows:—

"(1) The continuance of the right of pre-emption is against the General Scheme of the Estates Acquisition Act and the Rules framed thereunder. Each agricultural tenant (intermediary) becomes a separate tenant directly under the State Government after the vesting of the right of the intermediaries. Section 6 (2), Section 14 (3), Section 15 (5), Section 42 (1), proviso (b), and Section 52 proviso (a) (ii) of the Estates Acquisition Act and Rule 31-A (2) (i), (ia), (ii) and (iia) of the Rules support the said view. There remains no co-sharer on principle in the holding as defined in Section 3 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act or in the tenancy after the vesting.

(2) There is no express provision in the Estates Acquisition Act about the acquisition, retention or continuance of the right of pre-emption. Section 3 of the said Act has an overriding effect.

(3) After the vesting, each case is a case of a new engagement by the State with each intermediary (agricultural tenant included). It cannot be a case of recognition by the State Government of the old tenancy or holding with the intermediaries, be he a proprietor or a tenure-holder or a raiyati or an under-raiyati. Clause (i) of sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 expressly provides that the intermediary shall hold the land mutatis mutandis on the terms and conditions mentioned in Section 23 and several other sections of the Bengal Tenancy Act but deliberately omits Section 26-F from the said provision, though Sections 26, 26-B, 26-C and 26-G are specifically mentioned. It is difficult to conceive of a position that they would still remain as co-sharers in the holding, even after the vesting. The principles laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of Rana Sheo Ambar Singh v. Allahabad Bank Ltd., 1962 (2) SCR 441 = AIR 1961 SC 1790, were referred to. Their Lordships, undoubtedly considered a different Act, namely, the U. P. Zamindari Abolition Act, but held inter alia that the properties vested in the State Government under Section 6 of the said Act, were resettled with the intermediary 'on a new tenure' and not in the same right which they had in them before the vesting. It was further noticed in the said decision that there was no provision in the said U. P. Act that the said right 'shall continue to belong to the intermediary'. Accordingly, the existing right was held to be extinguished and the right created by Section 18 of the U. P. Act would be a new right. The principles laid down by the Supreme Court on the said similar statute are equally applicable here.

(4) Alternatively, the expression 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4 of the Rules cannot be equated with the expression 'incidents' which flow from the statute or the status of a person whereas "terms and conditions" are dependent on the acts of the parties such as contracts. There is a broad distinction between the two sets of expressions. Reference to Sections 18, 48-F and 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act might be made in this connection.

(5) Sections 8 and 10 of the Land Reforms Act, 1955, have come into force on October 12, 1963 (notification No. 17998/L-Ref. of the same date). It is difficult to imagine as to how after the enforcement of the said sections, the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act would still be operative in the same field.

(6) The right of pre-emption is a personal one resting with the claimant. It is not transferable apart from the ownership in the land.

(7) The whole of the Bengal Tenancy Act including Section 26-F thereof for pre-emption, has been expressly repealed (vide notification No. 14810-L-Ref. dated 25th September, 1965, published in the "Calcutta Gazette, Extraordinary", dated September 27, 1965). By the said notification Cls. (1) to (6) of Section 59 of the Land Reforms Act, along with other provisions came into force from November 1, 1965. This section repeals several statutes. Clause (5) thereof repeals the whole of Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885".

12. In ground No. 3 Laik, J. refers to deliberate omission of 26-F from sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 as one of the grounds for the aforesaid conclusion, but the effect of the inclusion of 26-F in that sub-rule by the notification dated September 7, 1962 has not been considered.

12-A. Mr. Lala, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner in Civil Revision Case No. 674 of 1958 supported the order of reference. Mr. Lala submitted that in view of sub-section (2) of S. 6 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, there cannot be any scope for the argument that the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F was allowed to continue. In order to appreciate the said contention of Mr. Lala on sub-section (2) of S. 6, it is necessary to refer to sub-section (2) which runs as follows:—

"(2) An intermediary who is entitled to retain possession of any land under sub-s. (1) shall be deemed to hold such land directly under the State from the date of vesting as a tenant, subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed and subject to payment of such rent as may be determined under the provisions of this Act, and as entered in the record-of-rights finally published under Chapter V except that no rent shall be payable for land referred to in clause (h) or (i):

Provided that if any tank fishery or any land comprised in tea-garden, orchard, mill, factory or workshop was held immediately before the date of vesting under a lease, such lease shall be deemed to have been given by the State Government on the same terms and conditions as immediately before such date, subject to such modification therein as the State Government may think fit to make".

13. By virtue of Section 52, each raiyat becomes under sub-section (2) a direct tenant under the State with effect from the date of vesting in respect of the land which he is entitled to retain, no such terms and conditions as may be prescribed and subject to payment of such rent as may be determined under the provisions of the Act. The proviso to Section 52 contains provisions as to the amount of rent that would be payable by the raiyat or the under raiyat in respect of the land of the holding retained by him. Sub-clause (ii) of clause (a) to the proviso lays down that the raiyat or the under-raiyat shall pay, if the land retained by him forms part of the holding lands, such rent as bears the same proportion to the rent which he was paying for the holding lands immediately before the date of vesting as the area of the land retained by him bears to the area of all the holding lands. Under clause (b) where the raiyat or the under-raiyat though liable to pay rent, was not paying any rent, the rent will be assessed under Section 42. Clause (i) of sub-section (1) of S. 42 provides that if the land which the intermediary is entitled to retain under sub-section (1) of S. 6, be agricultural land, the Revenue Officer shall determine the rent payable by the intermediary on the basis of the rate of rent paid by raiyats or other persons holding land of similar description, and with similar advantages in the vicinity. It is, therefore, clear that exhaustive provisions have been made for the amount of rent payable by a raiyat or an under-raiyat in respect of the land of the holding retained by him. Land retained by a raiyat of holding becomes the subject-matter of a separate tenancy and the raiyats who were his co-sharers immediately before the date of vesting, will have no interest in the land retained by him. We may take a hypothetical case where, immediately before the date of vesting, there were four raiyats of a holding. On the date of vesting each raiyat will be entitled to retain a portion of the land comprised in the holding and in respect of the respective portions each becomes a direct tenant under the State on payment of such rent as indicated in the proviso to Section 52 read with S. 42 of the Act. By virtue of sub-section (2) of S. 6 four tenancies are created in respect of the land comprised in the holding which was the subject-matter of the joint tenancy before the vesting. After the vesting, one raiyat cannot claim to have any interest in the land of the holding which the other is entitled to retain or has retained. Before vesting each of the raiyats of the holding had an interest or share in every part of the land comprised in the holding and each was a co-sharer of the other, but this is not the position after the vesting when each of the raiyats of the holding becomes a direct tenant under the State in respect of the land of the holding which he is entitled to retain under the provisions of sub-s. (1) of S. 6. There is, therefore, considerable substance in the argument of Mr. Lala that on the date of vesting, the raiyats of a holding ceased to be co-sharers and the holding is split up into different holdings.

14. Mr. Burman, learned Advocate appearing for the pre-emptor petitioner in C. R. 2275 of 1961, however, submitted that the raiyats of the holding who were co-sharers in respect of that holding before vesting, remained co-sharers even after vesting. It was contended by him that the words "an intermediary" in sub-sections (1), (2) and (5) of S. 6 should be read in the plural, that is, should be read as "intermediaries" and so read, all the raiyats of a holding jointly become tenants under the State under sub-section (2) of S. 6. Mr. Burman relied on Section 14 of the Bengal General Clauses Act which says:—

"Gender and number— In all Bengal Acts, and West Bengal Acts unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context.—

(2) words in the singular shall include the plural and vice versa". This contention of Mr. Burman cannot be accepted. Section 14 would be given effect to unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context. Sub-sections (2) and (5) of Sec. 6 refer to sub-section (1) under which an intermediary is entitled to retain possession of certain lands. Unless it is possible to read 'intermediaries' in place of the words 'an intermediary' in sub-section (1) of S. 6, the contention of Mr. Burman cannot be accepted. We are, however, unable to read 'intermediaries' in place of the words 'an intermediary' in sub-section (1) without doing violence to the sub-section. Under clause (d) of sub-section (1), an intermediary shall be entitled to retain agricultural land in his khas possession not exceeding 25 acres in area, as may be chosen by him. If we read the word 'intermediaries' in place of the words 'an intermediary', in that case, all the intermediaries, namely, the raiyats, shall be jointly entitled to retain 25 acres. But, under clause (d) each intermediary is entitled to retain 25 acres of agricultural land in his khas possession. Under sub-section (5) of S. 6 an intermediary shall exercise his choice of retention of land under sub-section (1) within such time and in such manner as may be prescribed. The choice has to be exercised by filing a return in Form 'B'. Schedule 'B' framed under Rule 25 of the Rules prescribes Form 'B' in which the return has to be filed. The Form contains certain foot notes which are as follows—

(i) The statement relates to all interests which an intermediary has in the whole of West Bengal.

(ii) This statement shall be filed before the Settlement Officer in whose jurisdiction the major portion of the lands which the intermediary wishes to retain is situated or before a Revenue Officer authorised by the Settlement Officer in this behalf.

(iii) Each of the co-sharers of the same interest shall submit the statement separately for his own share.

(iv) Total area of lands shown in column 7 shall not exceed 15 acres in the whole of West Bengal. If this total area is found to be in excess of 15 acres, the excess will be excluded by the Revenue Officer from any of the Khatians shown in column 2.

(vii) The statement shall be prepared in two parts. In the first part, detailed description of lands in the whole of West Bengal which will be retained by the intermediary are to be shown in one consolidated statement in this form. In the second part, the lands retained in each mouza are to be shown in separate statement for each mouza also in this form.

The foot notes (i), (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) lead to the irresistible conclusion that each intermediary separately and not intermediaries jointly, will have to exercise their choice of retention. It is, therefore, difficult to uphold the contention of Mr. Burman that the words 'an intermediary' should be read as 'intermediaries' in the provisions of sub-sections (1), (2) and (5) of S. 6.

15. Mr. Burman strenuously urged that in view of the foot note (iii) in the Form 'B' which says that each of the co-sharers of the same interest shall submit the statement separately for his own share, it should be held that the raiyats of a holding remained co-sharers of each other even after vesting. Mr. Burman laid emphasis on the word 'co-sharers' in foot note (iii). It is true that foot note (iii) has used the word 'co-sharers', but in our view, the term has been used with reference to the position before vesting for the sake of convenience. The other provisions which have been referred to above, clearly show that each intermediary, that is, each raiyat becomes a direct tenant under the State in respect of the land which he is entitled to retain. It does not follow from any of the provisions of the Act that the raiyats of the holding will continue to hold the land comprised in the holding as co-sharers.

16. Again, this proposition may be scrutinised from another point of view. The quantity of land which an intermediary is entitled to retain under Section 6 (1) is the maximum quantity that can be retained by the intermediary out of the total area of land belonging to him in the whole of West Bengal. The foot notes under Form 'B' clearly lay down the same in unequivocal term. Before vesting, a co-sharer raiyat of a holding may own and possess other lands, apart from the land comprised in the holding in respect of which he is a co-sharer. Suppose a holding consists of 25 acres belonging to two co-sharer raiyats. One of the co-sharer raiyats may possess other lands. Such a co-sharer has to exercise his choice in respect of the land to be retained by him in accordance with the ceiling prescribed by the Act. He may choose to retain half share which comes to $12\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land in the holding of which he is a co-sharer and also retain his other lands provided the total quantity of the land does not exceed 25 acres. In case the total area of the land exceeds 25 acres, in that case, he may not retain $12\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land in the holding of which he is a raiyat. But he may retain a lesser quantity of land out of that holding and the balance quantity out of other lands. The other co-sharer may not possess other lands and he may choose to retain the whole of $12\frac{1}{2}$ acres. Two different amounts of rent will be fixed for the land respectively retained by the two co-sharer raiyats under the proviso to Section 52 read with Section 42 of the Act. In such circumstances, it cannot be said that one remained a co-sharer of the other even after the date of vesting.

17. Sub-paragraph (2) of paragraph 7 of Sch. 'B' to the Rules provides, that in preparing or revising the record-of-rights under Chapter V the Revenue Officer shall take into consideration any statement furnished by an intermediary having regard to the provisions of Section 6 of the Act. Sub-paragraph (2) refers to the statement of the intermediary in the 'B' Form return whereby he exercises his choice of retention under Section 6. Sub-paragraph (4) of paragraph 7 provides, that the Revenue Officer shall, wherever necessary, partition the lands for the purpose of making allotment under sub-section (5) of S. 6 of the Act and demarcate the lands so partitioned by assigning such separate plot numbers as may be needed for the purpose. Under sub-paragraph (4), the Revenue Officer, therefore, partitions and demarcates the land retained by an intermediary from the rest of the holding. The land so partitioned and demarcated, belongs to the intermediary or the raiyat as the tenant holding directly under the State. The erstwhile co-sharer raiyats will have no interest whatsoever in the land retained by one of them and partitioned and demarcated by the Revenue Officer. This also clearly indicates that the intermediaries or raiyats who were co-sharers in respect of the land before vesting ceased to be so after vesting. To hold otherwise, will be contrary to the different provisions of the Act and the clear intention of the legislature in this regard.

18. Mr. Burman next argued that at least so long such a partition is not effected by the Revenue Officer and separate khatians showing separate rents in respect of the lands so partitioned and demarcated are not made, it cannot be said that one raiyat ceased to be the co-sharer of the other in respect of the holding. Mr. Burman submitted that on the date of vesting it is not possible for any intermediary to say which portion of the land he will retain and that so long as the land comprised in the holding is not actually partitioned by metes and bounds, it cannot be said that the holding is split up and the jointness of the tenancy has come to an end. Further, it was contended by him that under sub-section (2) of S. 6 an intermediary may become a direct tenant in respect of the land he is entitled to retain, but he does not exercise his choice of retention on the date of vesting and he may wait till the last date fixed for the exercise of such choice of retention. During this period the holding would remain undivided and there could be no question of any separate tenancy coming into being on the date of vesting. Attractive though the argument is, we regret, we are unable to accept the same. Sub-section (2) of Section 6 lays down that the intermediary becomes a direct tenant in respect of the land which he is entitled to retain under sub-section (1) with effect from the date of vesting. On the date of vesting an intermediary is entitled to retain an undivided share in the holding where the holding was held by more than one intermediary. In exercising his choice of retention by the submission of a return in Form 'B', the intermediary does not specify by boundaries the land which he is entitled to retain. He is only required to retain the quantity of land proportionate to his share in the land. It is the Revenue Officer who partitions and demarcates the land retained by the intermediary. It is true that so far as the holding is concerned it remains undivided for the time being. The question necessarily arises whether a separate tenancy can be created in respect of an undivided share of the holding. The term 'holding' has not been defined in the Act, but clause (p) of Section 2 inter alia provides that expression used in the Act and not otherwise defined have in relation to the areas to which the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, applies, the same meaning as in that Act. Under sub-section (5) of S. 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 'holding' means a parcel or parcels of land or an undivided share thereof, held by a raiyat or an under raiyat and forming the subject of a separate tenancy whether the raiyat or under raiyat has held the land before or after the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act 1928. The definition of 'holding' in the Bengal Tenancy Act, as stated above, clearly indicates that an undivided share in land can be the subject-matter of a separate tenancy and can constitute a holding of a raiyat or an under raiyat. It comes to this, therefore, that even though the land remains undivided till it is demarcated by metes and bounds by the Revenue Officer under sub-paragraph (4) of paragraph 7 of Sch. 'B' to the Rules, the undivided share of the raiyat in the land which he is entitled to retain as an intermediary, becomes the subject-matter of a separate tenancy directly under the State on and from the date of vesting.

19. Lastly, it has been contended by Mr. Burman that in many cases and, at least in the case in which he appears, the Revisional record-of-rights shows the same holding and records the names of all the raiyats of the holding. The entry as regards rent is also the same which the co-sharers were liable to pay for the holding before vesting. Mr. Burman submits that in view of sub-section (4) of S. 44 of the Act the entries raise a presumption that the holding is a joint holding held by the raiyats jointly. This contention of Mr. Burman is highly fallacious. The presumption which arises under sub-section (4) of S. 44 cannot be held to have the effect of nullifying the provisions of the Act. In this connection we may refer to the provisions of Section 47 of the Act and Rule 31-A of the Rules. Section 47 is as follows:—

"47. Modification of the finally published record-of-rights. — The record-of-rights prepared and finally published under the provisions of this Chapter or deemed to have been so prepared and finally published, for any district or part of a district in respect of which a notification under Section 4 has been duly published, shall as soon as may be after the date of vesting be modified by eliminating therefrom all the interests of the intermediaries which have vested in the State and showing therein only the tenants who hold directly under the State as a result of vesting of such interest in the State. One or more numbers to be borne on the revenue roll of the district shall be assigned by the Collector in respect of the areas to which such record-of-rights relates in accordance with such rules as the State Government may make in this behalf and the Revenue Officer shall make a certificate that the record-of-rights has been so modified and shall date and subscribe the same under his name and official designation; Provided that entries in record-of-rights eliminated under the foregoing paragraph shall be deemed to be in force for the purpose of the preparation of the Compensation Assessment Roll and for all proceedings connected therewith or arising therefrom".

Section 47 provides for modification of the finally published record-of-rights. The proviso to Section 47 lays down that the finally published record-of-rights before it is modified, shall be deemed to be in force for the purpose of the preparation of the Compensation Assessment Roll and for all proceedings connected therewith or arising therefrom. It is therefore, clear that the record-of-rights has to be prepared with reference to the incidents before vesting and has to be finally published as such. After the final publication it has to be modified in accordance with Section 47 and Rule 31-A of the Rules. Rule 31-A is as follows:

"31-A. Modification of the finally published record-of-rights under S. 47.—

(1) The record-of-rights, finally published under sub-rule (3) of R. 30, shall then be modified in accordance with the provisions of Section 47 and paragraph 7 of Sch. B appended to these rules.

(2) Such modification shall be made by—

(i) eliminating from the record-of-rights as finally published, all entries relating to the interests of the intermediaries which have vested in the State and the revenue or rent payable by them and recording in their stead the State as entitled to receive the rent payable by the raiyats and the non-agricultural tenants;

(ia) eliminating from the record-of-rights, as finally published, all entries relating to the interests of the raiyats and under-raiyats which have since the enforcement of Chapter VI of the Act, vested in the State and the rent payable by them, and recording in their stead the 'State' as entitled to receive the rents from the persons holding under such raiyats or under-raiyats;

(ii) recording the names of the intermediaries who have been allowed to retain lands as tenants or lessees holding directly under the State, together with the particulars of the lands they have been allowed to so retain and the rents payable therefor to the State, being rents determined under Section 42 or otherwise;

(iia) recording the names of the raiyats and under-raiyats who have been, since the enforcement of Chapter VI of the Act, allowed to retain lands as tenants or lessees holding directly under the State, together with the particulars of the lands they have been allowed to so retain and the rents payable therefor to the State, being rents determined under Section 42 or otherwise;

(iii) recording in respect of each mouza, the particulars of the Khas lands of the intermediaries which have vested in the State excluding the lands which such intermediaries have been allowed to retain under sub-section (1) of Section 6; and (iiia) recording in respect of each mouza, the particulars of the Khas lands of the raiyats and under-raiyats which have, since the enforcement of Chapter VI of the Act, vested in the State excluding

Clause (iia) of sub-rule (2) shows the modifications to be made in the finally published record-of-rights in respect of the holdings of raiyats and under-raiyats. It is apparent from Rule 31-A, particularly clause (iia) of sub-rule (2), that by way of modifications a separate khatian which is usually known as 'Khanda Khatian' has to be prepared relating to the land retained by each raiyat or under raiyat, containing the particulars mentioned therein. It may be that in some cases modifications have not been made, but that fact cannot be taken into consideration in interpreting the provisions of the Act. We are, therefore, unable to accept the contention of Mr. Burman that because the finally published record-of-rights have not yet been modified in accordance with Section 47 read with Rule 31-A of the Rules, the holding continued to be joint holding and the raiyats continued to be co-sharers of each other.

20. It has been argued by Mr. Lala that the right of pre-emption as conferred by Section 26-F on co-sharer raiyats of an occupancy holding, has been altogether abrogated by the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act. It has been already stated that the Division Bench consisting of Banerjee and D. Basu, JJ., in 68 Cal WN 574 = (AIR 1964 Cal 460) and in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1055 repelled the contention that the words 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4 did not include the rights of pre-emption under S. 26-F. Although the same argument as was made before the Division Bench was also repeated before us by Mr. Lala and other learned Advocates appearing on behalf of the transferees, we do not see any reason to differ with the decisions of the Division Bench in so far as it was held therein that the words 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4 also included the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. It has been earlier stated that the Rule 4 was substituted on September 7, 1962. In sub-rule (3) of R. 4, Section 26-F was included as one of the terms and conditions on which an intermediary shall hold the land retained by him. This removes any doubt as to whether the words 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4 included the right of pre-emption under S. 26-F.

21. It is argued that in view of the definite inclusion of Section 26-F in sub-rule (3) of R. 4 by the amendment effected on September 7, 1962, it cannot be said that by the enforcement of Chapter VI relating to raiyats and under-raiyats, the right of pre-emption has been totally abrogated by the legislature. It has been contended that to hold that each raiyat has become a direct tenant:

under the State in respect of the land which he is entitled to retain or which has been retained by him, will lead to an irreconcilable position between such an interpretation of the Act and the provisions of sub-rule (3) of Rule 4. Further it has been submitted that in view of sub-rule (3) which was inserted in Rule 4, it should be held that the right of pre-emption is kept alive even after the enforcement of Chapter VI. This argument cannot be accepted for the reasons stated hereafter.

22. Anybody making an application before the Court in exercise of his right of pre-emption under Section 26-F must show that he is a co-sharer tenant of the holding a portion or share of which has been transferred to a non-co-sharer. If he fails to prove that he is a co-sharer tenant of the holding in question, he cannot claim to have any right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. The primary question which has to be decided in connection with an application for pre-emption under Section 26-F is, whether the applicant is a co-sharer in the tenancy or not. In case it is found that he is a co-sharer his application will be held maintainable and he will be entitled to exercise his right of pre-emption, but if he fails to prove the same his application will be dismissed on the ground that he has no such right under Section 26-F. After the date of vesting, each raiyat of a holding ceases to be a co-sharer in respect of that holding, as found by us on an interpretation of the different provisions of the Act and the Rules. A raiyat who was a co-sharer in respect of the holding in question cannot, after the date of vesting, claim to be a co-sharer of another raiyat in respect of the land which he is entitled to retain or retained by him under sub-section (1) of S. 6. Such a raiyat is not entitled to make an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F in respect of a transfer made by another raiyat out of the land which he is entitled to retain or which has been retained by him under sub-section (1) of S. 6. As the raiyat is not a co-sharer and as the holding prior to vesting is no longer in existence, since in its place and stead separate holdings or tenancies have come into existence by virtue of sub-sec. (2) of S. 6, there will be no scope for an application under Section 26-F.

23. At the same time, it cannot be said that co-sharership of a raiyati holding has been altogether abolished by the legislature particularly in view of sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 wherein Section 26-F had been specifically included. On the date of vesting there may not be any co-sharer of the raiyati holding but after the date of vesting co-sharers may come into being by devolution of interest of a raiyat relating to the land retained by him. Only in such cases, Section 26-F will apply. To take a concrete illustration, a raiyat who was a co-sharer of a particular holding retains land of the holding under sub-section (1) of S. 6 of the Act. He becomes a direct tenant in respect of the land retained by him and ceases to be a co-sharer in respect of the remaining land of the holding not retained by him or retained by other raiyats. The land which he is entitled to retain or retained by him, forms a separate holding or a separate tenancy directly under the State. If the raiyat dies after the date of vesting leaving a number of heirs, the heirs will be co-sharer-raiyats of each other. One heir being a co-sharer of the other will be entitled to invoke the provisions of S. 26-F and exercise his right of pre-emption in case any other co-sharer transfers a portion of such separate holding to any other person who is not a co-sharer. Similarly a raiyat of a separate holding created after the date of vesting, may transfer a portion of the holding to another person. That person becomes a co-sharer of the holding along with his vendor. If one of these two co-sharers transfers a portion of the holding to another person, Section 26-F will apply. On the happening of such events, namely, the death of the raiyat leaving more than one heir and transfer by the raiyat of a portion of the separate holding after the date of vesting and in similar such cases, Section 26-F will apply. It is thus found that there is no force in the argument that sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 cannot be reconciled in case it is held that on the date of vesting each raiyat becomes a direct tenant of the land which he is entitled to retain under sub-section (1) of S. 6 of the Act. But in the absence of any such events taking place, Section 26-F will not apply between the erstwhile co-sharers.

24. Sub-rule (3) of R. 4 was further amended on August 1, 1964, whereby Section 26-F was deleted from sub-rule (3). This deletion of Section 26-F from sub-rule (3) does not mean that the right of pre-emption has been taken away, but it has some other objective in view which will be stated presently. After the enactment of the Act, West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955, was enacted. By Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, a right of pre-emption similar to the right conferred by S. 26-F has been provided for. Section 8 came into force on October 22, 1963. Under Section 26-F the forum for making the application for pre-emption was the Court, but under Section 8 the application has to be made to the Revenue Officer. After the enforcement of Section 8 it became wholly unnecessary to allow Section 26-F to remain in sub-rule (3) of R. 4. The amendment of sub-rule (3) was made on August 1, 1964, that is, a considerable time after the enforcement of Section 8, but in our view that does not make any difference for the right of pre-emption will have to be exercised in accordance with Section 8 regarding transfers taking place after the enforcement of Section 8. As regards transfers made before Section 8 had been enforced, Section 26-F and not Section 8 will apply. In this connection it may be stated that on the enforcement of clause (5) of Section 59 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955, on November 1, 1965, Bengal Tenancy Act stands repealed with effect from that date. Section 26-F was, therefore, deleted from sub-rule (3) of Rule 4 in view of the enforcement of Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955, although it should have been deleted simultaneously with the enforcement of Section 8.

25. We may now consider some other decisions of this Court cited at the Bar during the hearing. These decisions are (I) Ganesh Chandra v. Sudarshan Dey, (1958) 62 Cal WN 360; (II) Panchu Sundari Dasi v. Haripada Biswas, (1961) 65 Cal WN 354; (III) Shiba Prosad Gerua v. Manmatha Nath Gupta, (1961) 65 Cal WN 811; (IV) Nitai Chandra Das v. Sisir Kumar Das, (1964) 67 Cal WN 633 and (V) Dhananjay Senapati v. Debendra Nath Senapati, (1964) 67 Cal WN 848. These are all Single Bench decisions of this Court. Apart from these decisions, reference was made to one unreported Bench decision in Sudhir Kumar Ghosh v. Sarat Chandra Ghosh, Civil Revn. Case No. 3366 of 1961 disposed of on 21-9-1962 (Cal). All these decisions proceeded on the footing that on and from the date of vesting the raiyats of a holding continued to be co-sharers by retaining the land comprised in the holding. In (1964) 67 Cal WN 648 referred to above, Chatterjee, J. has taken the view that as a result of vesting persons who were deemed to be intermediaries, would still be entitled to retain the land and if they retained, they would become tenants of a new tenancy under the State on such terms as the State may prescribe. So according to Chatterjee, J. a single tenancy comes into being and not separate tenancies. Chatterjee, J. concluded that if the former co-sharers retained their interests in the holding, they became co-sharers by virtue of the Act and the Rules and that they would be entitled to the right of pre-emption. For the reasons which we have already set out in detail, we are unable to subscribe to the view expressed by Chatterjee, J. We also disagree with the view expressed in the other decisions referred to above including the unreported Bench decision.

26. Now we are to consider the position of under-raiyats before and after vesting. Section 26-F does not in terms apply to under-raiyati holdings, though an under-raiyat may have occupancy right by local customs under Section 48-G of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Mr. Sudhir Kumar Acharjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite parties including the purchaser in C. R. No. 2275 of 1961 urged that the holding being an under-raiyati holding, the petitioner had no right of pre-emption under S. 26-F and that the application for pre-emption should also fail on that ground. Mr. Acharjee submitted that although under-raiyats were elevated to the position of raiyats having occupancy right, such elevation was for certain specific purposes. Our attention was drawn to Section 52 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, particularly to the words 'and a person holding under a raiyat or an under-raiyat were a raiyat for the purposes of clauses (c) and (d) of Section 5'. Clauses (c) and (d) of sub-section (1) of S. 5 are as follows:—

5. Effect of Notification.— (1) Upon the due publication of a notification under Section 4, on and from the date of vesting—

(c) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3) of S. 6, every non-agricultural tenant holding any land under an intermediary, and until the provisions of Chapter VI are given effect to, every raiyat holding any land under an intermediary, shall hold the same directly under the State, as if the State had been the intermediary and on the same terms and conditions as immediately before the date of vesting.

(d) every non-agricultural tenant holding under an intermediary and until the provisions of Chapter VI are given effect to, every raiyat holding under an intermediary, shall be bound to pay to the State his rent and other dues in respect of his land, accruing on and from the date of vesting, and every payment made in contravention of this clause shall be void and of no effect.

27. After Chapter VI came into force, the interests of raiyats and under-raiyats vested in the State as if they were intermediaries and the land held by them were estates. Clauses (c) and (d) of Section 5 (1) read with Section 52 and its proviso imply that the purposes referred to in the first part of Section 52 as quoted above are that the under-raiyats will hold the land under the State and pay rent to the State in accordance with the proviso to Section 52, the amount of rent depending on the land retained by the under-raiyats. In our view, the underraiylats having been elevated to the position of raiylats, there is no difference between a raiyat and an under-raiyat so far as the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F is concerned, and our decision on the question as to the effect of the enforcement of Chapter VI on the right of pre-emption of raiylats having occupancy rights under Section 26-F, will equally apply to under-raiyats.

28. For the reasons aforesaid, we hold as follows—

(1) After the enforcement of Chapter VI of the Act and the vesting of interest of raiylats and under-raiyats on and from April 14, 1956 corresponding to Baisakh 1, 1363 B. S. the co-sharer raiylats of a holding ceased to be co-sharers and each raiyat of the holding became a direct tenant under the State in respect of the land of that holding which he is entitled to retain under sub-section (1) of S. 6. As the co-sharer raiylats ceased to be co-sharers on and from the date of vesting, the question of exercise of the right of pre-emption under S. 26-F cannot arise, for, the condition precedent to the exercise of the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F being that the person exercising that right must be a co-sharer of the person making the transfer.

(2) When a raiyat having a separate holding or tenancy created by virtue of sub-section (2) of S. 6 relating to the land retained by him under sub-section (1) of S. 6, dies leaving more than one heir, such heirs will become co-sharers of such holding and will be entitled to the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. Similarly, when the raiyat of such a holding transfers a portion of the holding to another person, that person will become a co-sharer of the raiyat and the right of pre-emption will also be available in such a case.

(3) A transfer made by a co-sharer raiyat as contemplated by Cl. (2) above before the enforcement of Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, 1955, may be pre-empted by another co-sharer in the tenancy in accordance with Section 26-F, but a transfer made after the enforcement of Section 8, the right of pre-emption by a co-sharer can only be exercised in the manner laid down in Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act.

(4) The under-raiyats have been elevated to the status of raiylats on the enforcement of Chapter VI. There is no difference between the position of raiylats and that of under-raiyats and our decision on the question as to the effect of the enforcement of Chapter VI on the right of pre-emption of raiylats will also apply to under-raiyats.

(5) The decisions in 68 Cal WN 574 = (AIR 1964 Cal 460) and Jyotish Chandra Das v. Dhananjay Bag. (1964) 68

Cal WN 1055 in so far as they proceeded on the footing that the raiylats of a holding continued to be co-sharers even after vesting, are erroneous but they have correctly interpreted the expression 'terms and conditions' in Rule 4.

29. We have disposed of the main point referred to the Full Bench and all points ancillary thereto, but as some other points arising out of the respective facts and circumstances of some of these revision cases have been argued, we propose to consider the same. In C. R. 674 of 1958, the impugned transfer was made on January 22, 1955 and the application for pre-emption was made on June 11, 1955, that is, both took place before the enforcement of Chapter VI. It was during the pendency of the proceeding in the trial Court that Chapter VI was enforced by the issue of the notification under Section 49 and the interests of raiylats vested in the State. It has been contended by Mr. Nirmal Kumar Ganguly, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the pre-emptors opposite parties that in view of sub-section (7) of S. 26-F, the enforcement of Chapter VI during the pendency of the pre-emption proceeding will not affect the proceeding. Under sub-section (5) of S. 26-F, the Court makes an order allowing an application and under sub-section (6), the Court making an order in favour of more than one co-sharer tenant apportions the property comprised in the portion or share transferred among the applicants in accordance with the manner provided in that sub-section. Sub-section (7) is as follows:

(7) From the date of the making of the order under sub-section (5)—

(a) the right, title and interest in the portion or share of the holding, accruing to the transferee from the transfer shall, subject to the provisions of Section 22 and to any orders passed under sub-section (6), be deemed to have vested, jointly and free from all incumbrances which have been annulled or created after the date of transfer, in the co-sharer tenants, whose applications to purchase have been allowed under this section.

(b) the liability of the transferee for the rent due from him on account of the transfer shall cease, and

(c) the Court on further application of such applicant or applicants may place him or them, as the case may be, in possession of the property vested in them.

30. It is manifestly clear from the opening words of sub-section (7) that the consequences of an order passed under sub-section (5) as contained in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (7), will take effect from the date of the order. In the instant case, before any order was passed by the trial Court, Chapter VI had come into force. In view of our decision that the raiyats of an occupancy holding who were co-sharers before the vesting ceased to be co-sharers, the application was no longer maintainable and the proceeding for pre-emption became infructuous. The contention of Mr. Ganguly is accordingly, rejected.

31. In connection with this case, we may dispose of two other points raised by Mr. Lala, namely, (1) that occupancy right as contemplated by the un-amended Rule 4 (a) is not the same occupancy right under the Bengal Tenancy Act and (2) that Rule 4 (a) having used the term 'occupancy raiyat', not mentioned in any of the provisions of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, Rule 4 (a) is ultra vires the Act.

32. So far as the first point is concerned, in view of the clear language of Rule 4 (a) entitling the intermediary who has retained possession of agricultural land, to hold the same on the same terms and conditions as an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act, it cannot but be held that the contention of Mr. Lala is without any substance. The second point raised by Mr. Lala cannot be entertained, for the simple reason that no notice has been given to the Advocate-General as required under O. 27-A of the Code of Civil Procedure.

32-A. The next point that we have to consider is about the period of limitation for filing an application under Section 26-F. That point has been raised in C. R. No. 3465 of 1965 and C. R. No. 2097 of 1967. Section 26-F prescribes a period of four months from the service of notice under Section 26-C. The question is when the notice is not served, what should be the period of limitation for filing an application by a non-notified co-sharer. The question has been decided by a Special Bench of this Court presided over by Mukherjea, J. (as his Lordship then was) in Asmatiali v. Mujaharali, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48) (SB). It has been held by Mukherjea, J., Ormond and Dass JJ. concurring with him, that Art. 181 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 applies to the case of an application under Section 26-F by a co-sharer tenant who has not been served with a notice under Section 26-C and his application would be in time if made within three years of the sale. In applying Art. 181, it has been held by his Lordship that an application under sec. 26F is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure.

33. In C. R. No. 3465 of 1965, the date of the impugned sale is March 20, 1960 and the application for pre-emption was made on June 18, 1962, that is, within three years of the date of sale. In view of the aforesaid Special Bench decision, the application was filed quite within the period of limitation.

34. In the other case, the date of the impugned transfer is January 29, 1963 and the application for pre-emption was filed on August 13, 1966, that is beyond three years of the sale. The application is, therefore, barred by limitation. Mr. Bhunia, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the pre-emptor-opposite party has strenuously urged that in view of the decisions of the Supreme Court which will be referred to presently, the finding of the Special Bench in Asmatiali's case, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48) (SB) that an application under Section 26-F is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure which is the basis of the Special Bench decision in applying Article 181, is erroneous. In Sha Mulchand & Co. Ltd. v. Jawahar Mills Ltd., 1953 SCR 351 = (AIR 1953 SC 98); Bombay Gas Co. v. Gopal Biva, AIR 1964 SC 752 and Smt. Prativa Bose v. Rupendra Deb, AIR 1965 SC 540, the Supreme Court has held that Art. 181 applies only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure and the Article is inapplicable to applications under other enactments.

35. In our view, the aforesaid Supreme Court decisions do not at all help Mr. Bhunia. The Special Bench in Asmatiali's case, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48 SB) also noticed that Article 181 would only apply to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, but it held that an application under S. 26-F was an application under the Code of Civil Procedure. The question whether an application under Section 26-F is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure, was not involved in any of the Supreme Court decisions referred to above and no other decision of the Supreme Court has been cited at the Bar in which the question has been decided by the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the law laid down by the Special Bench in Asmatiali's case, 52 Cal WN 64 = (AIR 1948 Cal 48 SB) still stands as good law. The contention of Mr. Bhunia that the decision of the Special Bench, that an application under Section 26-F is an application under the Code of Civil Procedure, is erroneous, is rejected.

36. Mr. Bhunia, however, contended that as the pre-emptor-opposite party was, by means of the fraud of the petitioner, kept from the knowledge of his right under Section 26-F, the opposite party was entitled to the benefit of Section 18 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. It appears that the trial Court found that the petitioner fraudulently suppressed the notice under Sec. 26-C. Applying the provisions of Section 18, the trial Court held that the application having been filed on August 13, 1966, that is, within three years after the opposite party came to know of the transfer for the first time on August 8, 1965, the application was not barred by limitation. The lower appellate Court has affirmed the said findings of the trial Court and the findings of the Courts below have not been challenged before us by Mr. Ghosal, learned Advocate for the petitioner. In view of the said findings of the Courts below we do not see any reason why Section 18 would not apply. The application for pre-emption was not, therefore, barred by limitation. But, in spite of our finding that the application was not barred, the Rule must succeed, for, according to the view which we have taken the opposite party ceased to be a co-sharer after Chapter VI came into force and consequently the application for pre-emption became non-maintainable.

37. Before we conclude we may dispose of a short point raised by Mr. Sen Gupta, learned Advocate appearing for the purchaser-petitioner in C. R. No. 3465 of 1965. Mr. Sen Gupta contended that after his purchase the petitioner made certain improvements in the land purchased by him by erecting a building thereon; that the pre-emptor opposite party No. 1 was bound to deposit in Court along with his application for pre-emption the compensation for the building erected by the petitioner and that for non-deposit of such costs the application of the opposite party No. 1 was not maintainable. In our opinion, this contention of Mr. Sen Gupta is without any substance, for the simple reason that the provisions of Section 26-F do not require the applicant to deposit compensation for the improvement made by the transferee. Under sub-section (2) of S. 26-F all that is required is that at the time of making the application, the applicant shall deposit in Court the amount of the consideration money or the value of the transferred portion or share of the holding, as stated in the notice under Section 26-C, together with compensation at the rate of ten per centum of such amount. The contention of Mr. Sen Gupta is accordingly, overruled.

38. In view of the discussions aforesaid, Civil Rules Nos. 674 of 1958, 3410 of 1961, 3624 of 1961, 3465 of 1965, 2029 of 1967 and 2362 of 1967 in which the applications for pre-emption were allowed by the Courts below in favour of raiyats who ceased to be co-sharers after the date of vesting, are made absolute and the orders of the Courts below allowing pre-emption under S. 26-F are set aside. In Civil Rules Nos. 2275 of 1961 and 3764 of 1961, the orders of the Courts below disallowing the applications for pre-emption under Section 26-F are affirmed and these two rules are discharged. In each of these rules, there will be no order for costs in this Court.

Index Note:— (A) West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 10 — Application for standardization of rent by tenant—Application does not cease to be maintainable merely because subsequently, the tenancy is determined by notice of ejectment or that the premises are requisitioned by Government — (Case law discussed) — (X-Ref:— Section 2 (h)).

Brief Note:— (A) There is nothing in the scheme of the Act or in the definition of the tenant, which defeats an application, if it was valid and properly made, at the time when it was made by the subsequent notice of ejectment or by the subsequent dispossession of the tenant. Furthermore, the definition of tenant, if it be relevant, would be relevant only for the determination of the rights of the parties at the time of the institution of the proceeding, a proceeding validly instituted must be determined, in accordance with law, unless there is an indication either express or implied in the Act that such proceedings become infructuous by subsequent events. There is no such indication either express or implied in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (1956).

S. MUKHARJI, J.:— On 7-3-1966 there was an agreement for tenancy between the petitioner and the respondent, herein in respect of suit No. 2 in the ground-floor of premises No. 6, Russel Street regarding four rooms, three baths, one pantry and one verandah at a monthly rental of Rs. 2,000/- according to the English calendar month. It is stated that the petitioner wanted to start a Nursing Home in the said premises in question. The petitioner's case is that the contract rent was fixed high because the landlord had agreed to renovate the rooms and to make certain additions and alterations, which, however, the landlord did not do. Shortly before the tenancy was created, it has been further stated, the premises in question had a monthly rental of Rs. 500/-, the previous tenant being National and Grindlay's Bank Ltd. On the 29th of June, 1966, the petitioner made an application to the Controller for fixation of fair rent. On the 14th October, 1966, notice for ejectment of the petitioner was given by the respondent expiring with the month of November. In the meantime after inspection by the Rent Controller's Inspector and personal inspection by the Rent Controller, evidence was taken on behalf of both sides between 11th May, 1967 to 14th July, 1967. The petitioner's argument in that case was also heard. The respondent argued in part. Thereafter on 7th of June, 1967 an ejectment suit was filed by the respondent against the petitioner being suit No. 1284 of 1967 in the Original Side of this High Court, the grounds being default and subletting. On the 25th November, 1967 written statement was filed by the petitioner and rent deposited in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. On the 23rd October, 1967 the premises in question was requisitioned by the Government under the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947. On the 24th of October, 1967 possession was taken by the Government of the said premises and the petitioner was dispossessed. On the 19th January, 1968 the Rent Controller dismissed the application made by the petitioner for fixation of fair rent as not maintainable.

The said case was numbered as 435B of 1966. On the 6th of June, 1968 the petitioner applied to the Land Acquisition Collector for fixation of rent. On the 13th January, 1969 the appeal preferred by the petitioner against the order of the Controller in case No. 435B of 1966 was dismissed in Rent Appeal No. 15 of 1969 by the Court of Small Causes, Calcutta and the order of the Rent Controller dismissing the application of the petitioner for fixation of the fair rent on the ground that it was not maintainable was affirmed. On the 6th of February, 1969 the Land Acquisition Collector rejected the claim of the petitioner for compensation for requisition of the premises. On the 22nd of April, 1969 the petitioner moved under Article 227 of the Constitution this Civil revision application against the aforesaid order of the Court of Small Causes dated 13th of January, 1969 in Rent Appeal No. 15 of 1968 and the order of the Rent Controller in case No. 435B of 1966 dated 19th January, 1968. This rule originally came up for hearing before a Division Bench consisting of P. N. Mookherjee and Amiya Kumar Mukherjee, JJ., and by order dated 30th of April, 1970 the case has been referred to the Special Bench under Chapter VII, Rule 4 read with Rule 9 of the Appellate Side Rules of this Court. The main question that their Lordships felt arose in this case was whether during the pendency of a proceeding for fixation of fair rent under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, at the instance of a tenant if the tenanted premises was requisitioned and taken possession of by the State Government under the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947, the said proceeding ceased to be maintainable as a matter of law and whether it would fail in limine on that preliminary ground. Their Lordships of the Division Bench felt that the question was an important one and it necessitated reference to the Special Bench and accordingly the whole case has been referred to us.

2. The application for fixation of fair rent in this case had been made under the provisions of West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Therefore, it is necessary to refer to the relevant statutory provisions under the said Act in order to determine the controversy in this case. Section 2 (h) of the said Act provides the definition of "tenant" as follows:—

"(h) "tenant" includes any person by whom or on whose account or behalf, the rent of any premises is, or but for a special contract would be, payable and also any person continuing in possession after the termination of his tenancy but shall not include any person against whom any decree or order for eviction has been made by a Court of competent jurisdiction." Section 4 provides the excess over fair rent to be irrecoverable. It stipulates that the tenant shall pay to the landlord fair rent where it has been fixed for any premises, such rent and in other cases the rent agreed upon until fair rent is fixed. It further provides, inter alia, that any sum in excess of the rent referred to in sub-section (1) shall not be recoverable by the landlord. Section 7 provides that where any sum or any other consideration has been paid, by or on behalf of any tenant to a landlord in contravention of any of the provisions of the Act, the Controller may, on application made to him, within a period of six months from the date of such payment, order the landlord to refund such sum or the value of such consideration against the rent payable by the tenant. Sub-section (2) of the said section further provides that the provisions of sub-section (1) mentioned hereinbefore, shall not apply to any case of decrease of rent to which Section 12 applies. Section 8 provides how fair rent would be determined. Section 10 imposes upon the Controller the obligation of disposing of the applications made to him either by landlord or tenant in the prescribed manner to fix fair rent in respect of any premises. Clause (a) of Section 12 provides that where fair rent has been fixed by the Controller by decreasing the rent agreed, the excess amount paid shall be recoverable under the order of the Controller by instalments or otherwise. Clause (b) of Section 12 provides where rent has been increased it would be recoverable by the landlord by instalments or otherwise as the Controller might order with certain limitations. Section 13 gives protection to the tenant against the eviction in certain cases. Section 21 deals with the deposit of rent. Section 22 deals with the time-limit for making deposit and consequences of incorrect particulars in application for deposit and Section 23 provides for saving as to acceptance of rent in certain cases. The West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act of 1950 provided a slightly different definition of the tenant. It provided—

"11 "tenant" means any person by whom rent is, or but for a special contract would be, payable for any premises, and includes—

(i) any person who is liable to be sued by the landlord for rent; and

(ii) any person whose interest in the premises has been ipso facto determined under sub-section (3) of Section 12 of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act 1948."

In view of the certain decisions it may be mentioned that the definition under the 1950 Act was more or less similar to the definition provided in the Rent Act, 1920.

3. The case of F. D. Bellow v. T. Elke, 29 Cal WN 30 = (AIR 1924 Cal 715) was a case under the Calcutta Rent Act of 1920. There a tenant applied for standardisation of his rent, but before the application came on for hearing he was ejected from the premises in pursuance of a decree of the Calcutta Small Cause Court. Subsequently the Rent Controller dismissed the application for fixation of standard rent on the ground that the applicant was no longer a tenant of the premises. It was held that there was nothing in the Act which provided that the application would become inoperative, although properly made in the first instance, because subsequent to the making of the application but before the rent was standardised a change of tenant took place. The words "tenant, if any" in Section 15, clause (4) indicated that it was possible that when the time came for the Rent Controller to give notice of his intention under the Act one of the parties might have ceased to be either a landlord or a tenant. The case Deoki Prosad v. Dulichand, AIR 1954 Cal 532, the Division Bench of this Court was concerned with the case under West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950. It was held that the definition of "tenant" included ex-tenant in possession, whose tenancy had been determined, by an ejectment decree. An application for standardisation of rent, validly made by a tenant, did not cease to be maintainable, merely because, during the pendency of the said proceedings, a decree for ejectment was passed against him. Reliance was placed before the learned Judges on the case of Sukhdeoas Ram Prosad v. Jaintilal Jamunadas, AIR 1926 Cal 697, a decision upon which reliance was also placed before us at the instant reference. It was held by the Division Bench in the case of AIR 1954 Cal 532 (supra) that in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of Karanani Industrial Bank Ltd. v. Satya Niranjan Shaw, AIR 1928 PC 227 the said decision reported in AIR 1926 Cal 697 must be held to have been overruled. We will refer to this decision later. The case of Srikaur Mohta v. Nripen Bhattacharjee, 61 Cal WN 547, was also a case under the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950. It was held by the Division Bench that where at the time of the application for standardisation of rent there was a subsisting relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, the cessation of tenancy during the pendency of the said application did not make the same incompetent or disentitle the applicant from maintaining or proceeding with the same. It was further held that the standardisation of rent was within the exclusive jurisdiction and competence of the Rent Controller. In the case of Ahamuddin v. Banku Behary Dutt, 31 Cal WN 308 = (AIR 1927 Cal 305) it was held by a Division Bench of this Court that a decision fixing the standard rent attached to the premises and not to the persons or parties to that suit and therefore such a decision was a judgment in rem and not in personam. 32 Cal WN 1093 = (AIR 1928 PC 227) is the decision of the Privy Council which has already been referred to. That was a case under the Calcutta Rent Act of 1920. It was held by the Judicial Committee that the words "landlord" and "tenant" in Section 15 (1) of the Rent Act one must include an ex-landlord and an ex-tenant. The word "tenant" in Section 11 must include a person whose term under the contract of tenancy had come to an end. The Act therefore, applied in appropriate cases to an ex-tenant and it made no difference whether the tenancy came to an end by effluxion of time or act of the landlord or act or default of the tenant. It was held even under the strict words of the definition of "tenant" given in clause 2 (g), persons by whom arrears of rent were payable at the date of their applications to the Controller, would be "tenants". It was further held that the Controller had power to fix the standard rent so as to operate retrospectively. In the case of Tarabai Jivanlal v. Kadamchand, AIR 1950 Bom 89, a learned single Judge of the Bombay High Court held that an order under the Defence of India Rules requisitioning a flat was essentially of a temporary nature and did not create in the government any vested interest in the tenancy. It also did not operate as a surrender so as to terminate the tenancy. It has further held that a monthly tenant, therefore, from whose occupation the flat was requisitioned continued to be a monthly tenant as before. Possession of government of the flat under requisition under the Defence of India Rules, did not amount either to an eviction by title paramount or as frustration of adventure. In the case of State of West Bengal v. Benode Behari Gupta, (1956) 60 Cal WN 253 it was held that an order fixing the standardized rent in respect of a premises governed not only the tenant who was in occupation at the relevant date but also those who might be coming thereafter. Such an order attached to the premises and was a relevant piece of evidence which had to be taken into consideration while fixing the compensation payable by the State to the owner when the premises were requisitioned.

4. Counsel for the respondent, however, contended that after notice for ejectment had been given in this case, the contractual tenancy came to an end, and the petitioner at best became a statutory tenant. It was urged that a statutory tenant had only a right to hold on to the property. But the moment the property was requisitioned and a statutory tenant was dispossessed by the order of the Government the statutory tenant had no further right under the Act. Reliance was placed on the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Calcutta Credit Corporation Ltd. v. Happy Homes (P.) Ltd., AIR 1968 SC 471. Counsel for the respondent further contended that in view of the facts and circumstances of this case the applicant for standardisation of fair rent had lost his rights, if any, to any relief after eviction by the order of requisition. Reliance was also placed on the Division Bench decision in the case of AIR 1926 Cal 697 which was a case under the Calcutta Rent Act of 1920 and wherein it was held that an application for standardization of rent to Rent Controller, after a decree in suit for ejectment had been passed ejecting the tenant, was not competent as there was no tenancy in existence thereafter. We are of the opinion that in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in the case of 32 Cal WN 1093 = (AIR 1928 PC 227) this decision must be held to have been overruled. On this question we are in respectful agreement with the views of the division bench in the case of AIR 1954 Cal 532 (supra). Furthermore, the facts of the instant case are materially different from the facts of the case of AIR 1926 Cal 697 (supra). Our attention was also drawn to the judgment of Chatterjee, J. in the case of Bhutanath Mukherjee v. Pranesh Chandra Gupta, Civil Revn. No. 42 of 1961 (judgment delivered on 18-7-1963 (Cal)). The learned Judge was of the opinion that as according to the definition of a tenant in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, after a decree for ejectment the person who had applied for fixation of rent was not a tenant, the proceeding became infructuous.

5. It appears to us that in view of the statutory position, it is apparent that in this case when the tenant applied for standardisation of rent he was undoubtedly entitled to do so, the tenancy had not been determined then by any notice for ejectment. Furthermore the tenant was at that time in occupation of the premises. As mentioned hereinbefore the application for standardisation of rent was made on the 29th of June, 1966 and the possession of the premises was taken from the tenant on the 24th October, 1967. Therefore from the aforesaid facts, it is apparent that not only was the application, when made, was a proper application, but furthermore the tenant has a valid right to ask for determination of his liability for rent upto 24th October, 1967. In view of the provisions of Section 12 the tenant would be entitled to any sum of money in such a manner as the Controller might order if the rent is decreased. Equally the landlord would be entitled to recover any sum of money pursuant to the order of the Controller under Section 12 of the Act if the fair rent is determined for an amount which is in excess of the amount agreed. There is nothing in the scheme of the Act or in the definition of the tenant, in our opinion, which defeats an application, if it was valid and properly made, at the time when it was made by the subsequent notice of ejectment or by the subsequent dispossession of the tenant. The definition of a tenant in this case excludes any person against whom a decree or order for eviction has been passed by a court of competent jurisdiction, in this case as yet no decree has been passed by any Court of competent jurisdiction. Therefore, the fact that the definition provided in the 1950 Act or in 1920 Act is not material on this aspect of the matter. The alteration of the definition in the facts of this case does not affect the position. Furthermore, the definition of the tenant, if it be relevant, would be relevant only for the determination of the rights of the parties at the time of the institution of the proceeding, a proceeding validly instituted must be determined, in accordance with law, unless there is an indication either express or implied in the Act that such proceeding becomes infructuous by subsequent events. We have not been able to find any such indication either express or implied in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Therefore, we are unable to accept the position that after service of a notice of ejectment a statutory tenant has no right to proceed or prosecute an application for standardization of fair rent. We are also unable to accept the position that if an application for standardization for fair rent had been properly made by a competent person subsequent dispossession of the premises by one of the parties, in any way effects the continuance of the said proceeding. We are not concerned in this application with the questions as what would be the effect of the determination of the fair rent on the future rights of the parties or whether a determination of fair rent is a judgment in rem or a judgment in personam nor are we concerned with the question whether an order for requisition puts an end to the tenancy or not. We, therefore, express no opinion on these questions. For purpose of this application we hold that the application for the standardization of rent in the instant case was validly made at the time when the said application had been made and the same application did not become not maintainable or was liable to be dismissed in limine, in view of the subsequent requisition of the premises by the government. The Controller, will have jurisdiction therefore to determine the fair rent and order the recovery of any increase or decrease of the rent as the case may be, in the manner indicated under Section 12 of the Act.

6. In the aforesaid view of the matter it must be held that the decisions of the Rent Controller in Case No. 435B of 1966 dated 19th January, 1968 and the judgment of the Court of Small Causes in Rent Appeal 15 of 1968, in so far as those held that the application in the instant case by the tenant for fixation of rent was not maintainable any longer were incorrect. We accordingly set aside the said order passed by the Rent Controller dated 19th of January, 1968 in case No. 435B of 1968 as well as the order dated 13th of January, 1969 in Rent Appeal No. 15 of 1968 passed by the 4th Bench of the Court of Small Causes, Calcutta and direct the Rent Controller to hear and determine the said application of the tenant in case of 435B of 1966 in accordance with law. The rule is made absolute to the extent indicated above. In the facts and circumstances of this case, we make no order as to costs of this application.

stranger — However, since vesting of raiyati interest in State by virtue of West Bengal Estate Acquisition Act (1 of 1954) a cosharer ceases to be cosharer and is not entitled to pre-empt under Section 26-F.

Brief Note: (A) When a statute prescribes that occupancy rights could be acquired only in a certain manner laid down in the statute, such rights cannot be created in any manner not contemplated by the statute. When a landlord by a contract of lease confers occupancy rights on his tenant, he is bound by it and the tenant can exercise the same but that does not imply that the tenant becomes an occupancy raiyat so that he can exercise the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. A purchaser who purchases a share from a cosharer will not be bound by the contract of lease, even though occupancy rights including the right of pre-emption were granted under the terms of the contract by the landlord. (Para 8)

However since Chapter VI of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act 1953 (1 of 1954) came into force all raiyati interests in land vested in the State and cosharer raiyats of a holding ceased to be a cosharer under Section 6 (1) of 1954 Act and has lost right of pre-emption under Section 26-F.

S. C. Mitter, for Petitioner; A. D. Mukherjee and Hrishikesh Chatterjee, for Opposite Parties.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This Revision Case is one of the group of Revision Cases numbered as Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1968 referred to the Full Bench by Laik and S. K. Mukherjee, JJ. under Chapter VII, Rules 1, 2 and 4 of the Appellate Side Rules. The point which induced the learned Judges of the Division Bench to refer these cases to the Full Bench is, whether the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F of the Bengal Tenancy Act survived the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953 (West Bengal Act 1 of 1954) after Chapter VI thereof came into force. That point has been decided by us in our judgment delivered to-day in some other Revision Cases included in the Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1968. The present Revision Case with which we are concerned, involves some other points and as such it is being disposed of separately.

2. This Rule has been obtained by the petitioner whose application for pre-emption under Section 26-F was dismissed by the Munsif, First Court, Arambagh by his order dated June 24, 1960. On appeal by the petitioner, the learned Subordinate Judge, Additional Court, Hooghly, affirmed the order of the learned Munsif and dismissed the appeal.

3. One Satish Chandra Singha settled certain land of which the disputed land forms part, by a Patta dated April 13, 1954 in favour of one Ajit Kumar Mondal in occupancy right. Ajit Kumar Mondal sold half share in the land to the petitioner on July 18, 1958. The petitioner, therefore, became a co-sharer of Ajit in respect of the holding. On May 10, 1959 Ajit sold the remaining half share to the opposite parties who are strangers. The petitioner made an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F in respect of the said half share of the holding transferred by Ajit in favour of the opposite parties. The application was opposed by the opposite parties who contended inter alia that neither the petitioner nor the said Ajit Kumar Mondal had any right of occupancy in the holding concerned and as such the application for pre-emption under S. 26-F was not maintainable.

4. Both the courts below have taken the view that the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F is not available in respect of an occupancy holding created by a grant from the landlord.

5. In this case, there is no dispute that the predecessor-in-interest of the petitioner and the opposite parties, namely, the said Ajit Kumar Mondal was not a settled raiyat of the village in which the holding is situate. By the Patta dated April 13, 1954 occupancy right was conferred by the landlord Satish Chandra Singha in favour of Ajit. The question necessarily arises whether right of occupancy can be created by a grant and whether the holder of such a right is entitled to avail of the statutory right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. In Bindeshwari Prasad Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh, 31 Cal WN 74 = (AIR 1926 PC 79), it has been observed by the Privy Council that "a right of occupancy under the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, appears to be a statutory right, and is not conferred by a gift from a proprietor." This observation suggests that a right of occupancy cannot be conferred by a grant from the landlord. The right has to be acquired in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

6. Mr. Mitter, however, strongly relied on a decision of R. C. Mitter, J. in Jogendra Narayan v. Askar Ulla, ILR (1937) 1 Cal 455 = (AIR 1937 Cal 27) which has been affirmed in the Letters Patent Appeal from that decision by Guha and Bartley, JJ. It has been held by Mitter, J. that a right similar to occupancy right under the Bengal Tenancy Act may be conferred by a landlord upon his tenant by an express grant. Mitter, J. observed as follows:—

"Occupancy rights are creatures of statutes, or to be more precise the creatures of custom adopted by statute, which by defining the nature of the evidence, which a person claiming such rights is required to adduce, have extended such rights to a larger class of raiyats. * * *

They are creatures of customs or of statute only in the sense that acquisition of such rights by raiyats does not depend upon the bounty or gift of the landlord, but they can be acquired against his will. This in my judgment does not imply that the landlord cannot by grant confer on his tenant, rights, exactly similar to rights of occupancy. He can in his grant define rights which he is granting to his tenant, by mentioning in detail in the different clauses of the Patta the exact incidents of the rights he is granting. If he does so the raiyat or tenant would get these rights, and I can conceive of no principle of law which would prevent the raiyat or tenant from successfully asserting those rights given to him by his Patta against his landlord. * * *

It, may be that in one respect only there may be a difficulty namely, about the right of pre-emption of the landlord, by virtue of rule against perpetui-ties, but I do not see any difficulty so far as the right of occupation of such a person is concerned."

7. Mitter, J. distinguished the aforesaid Privy Council decision by observing that the Privy Council did not definitely decide the point nor did it decide it finally.

8. The Bengal Tenancy Act lays down the manner whereby occupancy right can be acquired by a raiyat. The right of pre-emption as provided for in Section 26-F is one of the rights which is available to an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act, when a statute prescribes that under certain circumstances a particular right can be acquired by a person, it is difficult to see how that right can be created in a manner not contemplated by the statute. When by a contract of lease a tenancy is created, the landlord may confer certain rights and impose certain obligations on the tenant. Such rights may be similar to the rights of an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act, but it cannot be said that an occupancy raiyat-holding is created. The landlord who confers such rights on the tenant will be bound to recognise the same and the tenant would be entitled to assert those rights against the landlord. This does not, however, imply that the tenant becomes an occupancy raiyat so that he may exercise the right of pre-emption under Section 26-F. The right of pre-emption under Section 26-F is available to an occupancy raiyat against a stranger purchaser of a share or portion of the occupancy holding from the co-sharer of the occupancy raiyat. Such a purchaser, in our opinion, will not be bound by any term in the contract of lease whereby occupancy rights including the right of pre-emption have been granted by the landlord.

9. In Jogendra Narayan's case referred to above, ILR (1937) 1 Cal 455 = (AIR 1937 Cal 27) under the terms of the Patta the tenant was granted the right to remain on the land permanently and he could be ejected on two grounds only, namely, for using the land in a manner which would render it unfit for the purpose of the tenancy, or for breaking a condition in the lease which is consistent with the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It was held that the tenants could not be ejected simply by the service of a notice to quit as the landlord had by the Patta conferred on the tenants a right to remain on the land permanently and had contracted himself out of the right to terminate the tenancy by a six months' notice to quit. As we have already observed that the landlord would be bound by the terms and conditions of the lease, the tenants in Jogendra Narayan's case could not be ejected excepting on either of the two grounds as provided in the Patta. This right of the tenants in that case may be similar to the right of an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act, but simply because the tenants were conferred with that right and other rights similar to occupancy rights under the Bengal Tenancy Act, the tenants, in our opinion, did not acquire the status of an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act. Nowhere in the decision in Jogendra Narayan's case it has been laid down that the person who is conferred with rights similar to occupancy rights, acquired the status of an occupancy raiyat under the Bengal Tenancy Act. All that has been laid down in that decision is that a right similar to occupancy right under the Bengal Tenancy Act may be conferred by a landlord upon his tenant by express grant and that the tenant shall be entitled to assert such a right against the landlord like any other contractual right. The decision in Jogendra Narayan's case does not militate against the view taken by us.

10. Mr. Mitter, however, submitted that the opposite parties were estopped from challenging the status of the petitioner as an occupancy raiyat. The question of estoppel arises in this way. In the notice under Section 26-C which has been served upon the petitioner relating to the transfer made in favour of the opposite parties, the petitioner has been described as an occupancy raiyat and the holding has been described as an occupancy holding. In the Kobala by which the opposite parties purchased the half share of the holding, the holding has been described as an occupancy holding. After the said notice was served, the petitioner made an application for pre-emption by making the requisite deposit. Mr. Mitter contended that in view of the fact that the petitioner was described in the notice under Section 26-C as an occupancy raiyat, the opposite parties were estopped from challenging the nature of the tenancy or the status of the petitioner. In support of his contention Mr. Mitter relied on a number of Bench decisions of this Court of which reference may be made to Malati Bala Deb Gupta v. Narendra Chandra Bhat-tacharjee, AIR 1944 Cal 253 and Nural Hossain Mallik v. Mihlal Sheikh, AIR 1948 Cal 144. In Malati Bala's case B.K. Mukherjee, J. (as his Lordship then was) has held that when a purchaser purchased a property which is specifically described as an occupancy holding and gives notice to the co-sharer tenants under Section 26-C and on the faith of the representation contained in the notice that the property purchased is an occupancy holding, the co-sharer tenants apply for pre-emption under Section 26-F and deposit money which is required to be deposited under that section, a plea of estoppel may be legitimately taken by the pre-emptor against the purchaser and unless it is shown that the applicant for pre-emption had previous knowledge as to the real character of the tenancy, the purchaser would be precluded from alleging or proving that the tenancy was of a nature different from what it was represented to be. The same view has been expressed by Chakravarti, J. (as his Lordship then was) in the aforesaid Bench decision in Nural Hossain's case. In an earlier Bench decision in Surendra Narayan v. Notan Behari, 53 Cal LJ 414 = (AIR 1931 Cal 483) the principle of estoppel was applied in such a case. In a subsequent Bench decision in Sankaracharja Mullick v. Sk. Sademani, AIR 1945 Cal 474, Mukherjee, J. reiterated the same principles as laid down in Malati Bala's case.

11. In a later Bench decision in Shiromani Prasad Bhakat v. Raghu-nandan Prasad Shaw, (1954) 58 Cal WN 612, G. N. Das, J. has agreed with the decisions in Malati Bala's case and Sankaracharja's case referred to above, that the plea of estoppel may be available to a pre-emptor against the purchaser. Das, J. has, however, held that in order to found an estoppel against a purchaser it must be proved that a representation was made by the purchaser sought to be estopped and that the pre-emptor seeking to raise the plea acted on the faith of the representation and did so to his prejudice. Das, J., has taken the view that neither Section 26-C nor Rule 25 of the Rules framed under the Bengal Tenancy Act require that it is the transferee who has to file the notice and that the cases on the point do not lay down the proposition that a plea of estoppel arises if the pre-emptor makes a deposit on receipt of a notice under Section 26-C merely reciting that the property transferred is an occupancy holding. According to Das J. the decision in Malati Bala's case and Sankaracharja's case proceeded on the assumption that it was the purchaser who gave the notice. It therefore, follows from the decision in Shiromani Prasad's case that before the purchaser is held to be estopped from challenging the nature of the tenancy, the pre-emptor must prove that the notice under Section 26-C describing the holding as an occupancy holding, was served by the purchaser and that the pre-emptor acted to his detriment on the representation made in the notice.

12. Relying on the decision in Shiromani Prasad's case, (1954) 58 Cal WN 612 the courts below negatived the plea of estoppel raised by the petitioner.

13. The decision in Shiromani Prasad's case (1954) 58 Cal WN 612 rests mainly on the ground that under S. 26-C and R. 25 of the Rules framed under the Bengal Tenancy Act, there is no indication as to who will serve the notice upon the co-sharer tenants. It is true that there is no specific indication, but at the same time it cannot be lost sight of that the purchaser is vitally interested in getting the document of transfer registered and he will take all steps in that regard. It can, therefore, be reasonably presumed that the notice under Section 26-C is served at the instance of the purchaser. We respectfully agree with the view expressed in the decisions in Malati Bala's case and Sankaracharja's case referred to above and also the decision expressing similar view. In the instant case, the notice under Section 26-C which was served upon the petitioner contains a statement that the holding is an occupancy holding. No explanation has been given by the opposite parties why such a statement has been made and there is no evidence that the petitioner was aware of the true nature of the tenancy. The petitioner relying upon the statement in the notice, made the application and made the requisite deposit under Section 26-F. In our view, therefore, the opposite parties are estopped from challenging the nature of the tenancy of the petitioner.

14. Although the petitioner succeeds on this point, the petitioner cannot ultimately succeed in the Rule in view of our decision in the Full Bench Reference No. 1 of 1968 to the effect that on the date of vesting of raiyati interests in the State under the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, the co-sharer raiyats of a holding ceased to be co-sharers in respect of the land of the holding which each of the raiyats was entitled to retain under sub-sec. (1) of Section 6. The petitioner was no doubt a co-sharer raiyat before vesting, but after vesting he ceased to be a co-sharer and he was not entitled to make an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F.

15. For the reasons aforesaid, the Rule is discharged, but there will be no order for costs in this Rule.

ARUN KUMAR MUKHERJEE, J.:

These appeals make a group of altogether six appeals involving more or less the same questions. They were referred to a Special Division Bench under Rule 1, Sub-rule (ii) of Chapter II of the Appellate Side Rules by a Bench consisting of the late Chief Justice D. N. Sinha and myself on 19th June 1968. The reference was made on the ground that they raise one or two common questions of law which are of great public importance. The Hon'ble the Chief Justice thereafter constituted the present Special Bench to dispose of these appeals. Since we have to dispose of the entire appeals we shall have to deal with them separately resolving the questions of law as they arise. This is what we propose to do as hereunder.—

Appeal No. 550 of 1962

2. The original defendant Satish Chandra Mukherjee was a tenant under the plaintiffs in respect of a shop room on the ground floor of premises No. 8-A, Lal Bazar Street, Calcutta at a monthly rental of Rs. 30.94 np. payable according to the English Calendar Month. The entire premises at 8A, Lal Bazar Street, Calcutta was transferred to the plaintiffs by Srimati Sushila Devi Rampuria and Shri Joychand Lal Rampuria who were the liquidators of Rampuria Properties Ltd., by a registered deed of conveyance dated 13 July 1958. Prior to this transfer, the tenant, namely, Satish Chandra Mukherjee had defaulted in payment of rents since September 1957. He, however, deposited the rents for September 1957 to April 1958 on 29 May 1958. After the transfer, the plaintiffs as the new landlord served through their lawyers a notice of ejectment dated 13 September 1958 on the said tenant-defendant. By the said notice the plaintiffs determined the defendant's tenancy and called upon him to quit and vacate the aforesaid shop-room No. 5 on the expiry of the last day of October 1958. The defendant having failed or neglected to do so the plaintiffs filed a suit against the said defendant-tenant for eviction. In the plaint it is claimed that the defendant would not be entitled to any protection from eviction under the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act of 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act) by reason of the fact that the tenant had defaulted in the payment of rent to his previous landlords as well as to the plaintiffs who were the successors-in-interest of those landlords "since September 1957 and also for four months within a period of 12 months". Before the suit had been filed on 2 January 1958 the tenant had deposited rents for August, September and October 1958 on 1 December 1958. The defendant contested the suit and filed a written statement. Sometime later the original defendant having died, his heirs, namely, Sanjib Mukherjee, Ranjit Mukherjee, Manindra Nath Mukherjee, Samita Mukherjee and Mrs. Satish Chandra Mukherjee were substituted as defendants in lieu and place of the original defendant. I shall hereinafter refer to the substituted defendants merely as defendants. Defendants Manindra Nath Mukherjee and Samita Mukherjee filed a written statement on 12 November 1960 and an additional written statement on 24 March 1961.

3. Certain issues and additional issues were framed for determination at the time of trial upon the pleadings of the parties. They are as follows:

(1) Is there any relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties in respect of the suit premises, i.e. the shop room No. 5 on the ground floor of premises No. 8-A, Lal Bazar Street, Calcutta?

(2) Is the defendant a defaulter in the payment of rent for four months during the period of 12 months before the institution of the suit?

(3) Was the notice of ejectment served on the defendant? If so, is the notice legal, valid and sufficient?

(4) To what relief, if any, are the plaintiffs entitled?

ADDITIONAL ISSUES

(1) Are the defaults in the payment of rent committed by late Satish Chandra Mukherjee, the predecessor-in-interest of the substituted defendants and/or the substituted defendants prior to 13 July 1958, the date of purchase of the suit premises by the plaintiff to be tacked to the defaults committed by the said late Satish Chandra Mukherjee and/or the substituted defendants from 13 July 1958 onwards?

(2) Can the plaintiffs take advantage of the defaults in the payment of rent committed by Satish Chandra Mukherjee and/or the substituted defendants when the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-interest were the landlord and/or the owners of the suit premises?

4. After evidence had been adduced on behalf of both sides the learned trial Judge came to the following decisions:—

(1) There was a relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties.

(2) (a) It is not a fact that there had been non-payment of rent for all months since September 1957 to date of judgment.

(b) Defendants were defaulters in payment of rent for the months of August, September and October 1958 because of paying them after the due date.

(c) Further the defendants having deposited the rents from September 1957 to April 1958 on 29 May were defaulters in the payment of rent within the meaning of the Act for the months of September 1957 to March 1958 and as such the defendants were not entitled to claim any protection from eviction under the Act.

(3) The plaintiffs as transferee-landlords could take advantage of the defaults made by the tenant before the transfer of the property. In short, the defendants were not entitled to protection from eviction under the Act for having made defaults in the payment of rent for four months within a period of 12 months from the commencement of the Act to the date of the suit.

(4) The ejectment notice had been properly served and was proper and valid.

5. On these findings the learned trial Judge decreed the suit against the defendants and ordered that the plaintiffs would get khas possession of the suit premises by removing the defendants therefrom.

6. The defendants came on appeal to this Court. After the appeal had been filed in 1962 the said Act of 1956 was amended. On 26th August 1967, West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967 was promulgated. The hearing of the appeals commenced four days later, i.e. to say on 30 August 1967. During the hearing of the appeal the appellant-tenants made an application on 13 September 1967 praying for orders extending the time for deposit of the amount of rents in arrear together with interests and also for fixation of the number of instalments by which the payments were to be made. The appellants contended that they were entitled to make this application by reason of Section 2 of the West Bengal Ordinance No. VI of 1967 by which a new sub-section (2-A) had been inserted after the original sub-section (2) of S. 17 of the said Act. The Division Bench which was hearing the appeal dismissed the application by an order passed on 7 May 1968. This decision was based mainly on the ground that an application for extension of time under Section (2-A) of Section 17 could not be made without complying with the provisions of sub-section (2-B) which required that an application for extension of time was to be made before the expiry of the time specified in sub-section (1) or sub-s. (2) of S. 17 and since this time had expired long before the application was made, the protection given under sub-section (2-A) was not available to the appellants. A copy of the order of the Division Bench is to be found at page 16 of the Second Part of the Special Paper Book prepared for the Special Bench. After dismissing the application the Division Bench again proceeded to hear the appeal. As I have stated already the Division Bench after hearing the appeal on 19 February 1968 referred it to a Special Division Bench.

7. It will be remembered in this connection that Section 17 had been extensively amended at first by West Bengal Ordinance VI of 1967 and then on the expiry of the Ordinance by Act IV of 1968 the provisions of which in turn were re-enacted by Act XXX of 1969.

8. The principal question of law that induced the Division Bench on 19 February 1968 to make a reference of the case to a Special Bench was the question as to whether the amendment of the proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17 of the Act of 1956 introduced by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967 and later re-enacted in Act IV of 1968 and Act XXX of 1969 were ultra vires the provisions of the Constitution of India and, in particular, Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution of India.

9. When the appeal came up for hearing before the Special Bench Mr.

Chandra appearing for the respondents-landlords challenged the vires of the new proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17 of the said Act. Since for all practical purposes and particularly in the matter of amendment of sub-section (4) of S. 17, Act XXX of 1969 is a re-enactment of Act IV of 1968 it would be enough for us to confine our attention to Act XXX of 1969. In order to appreciate the challenge of the respondents to the vires of the Act of 1969 it is necessary to know the context in which the challenge arises. I am, therefore, indicating below this context.

10. It will be remembered that Section 17 of the Act of 1956 gives an opportunity to defaulting tenants to avoid eviction by paying up all arrears of rent and by making payments of current rents during the pendency of the suit. Sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 17 contain these provisions. Sub-section (3) of the same section provides that if a tenant fails to pay up the arrears or to deposit current rents in terms of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) within the time specified therein, the Court shall have the defence against delivery of possession struck down and shall proceed with the hearing of the suit. In other words all the protection given to the tenant under Section 13 of the Act of 1956 would be withdrawn if the defaulting tenant does not pay rents, arrear and current, in the manner laid down in sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of S. 17. Sub-section (4) as it originally stood, provided, however, that if a defaulting tenant makes those payments required by sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), no decree or order for delivery of possession will be made against the defaulting tenant. This was in the nature of a last minute reprieve for the tenant. But even this reprieve was denied to the tenant under certain circumstances. The circumstances were mentioned in the proviso to sub-sec. (4). The original proviso ran in the following manner:—

"Provided that a tenant shall not be entitled to any relief under this sub-section if he has made default in payment of rent for four months within a period of 12 months".

The net effect of the amended proviso seems to be this that even a tenant who would under the original proviso have been deprived of the benefit of sub-section (4) if he had committed defaults in respect of four months within a period of 12 months would again be entitled to protection from eviction if it appears that he has done this only once. In other words, it is only a tenant who has obtained once before the relief provided for in sub-section (4) and then again commits default for four months within a period of 12 months who would be disentitled to this relief.

11. Taking advantage of this amended proviso the appellants in the instant appeal sought the protection of sub-section (4) of S. 17. On the facts of this case, since the appellants have not admittedly obtained the relief envisaged in sub-section (4) of S. 17 once before in another suit, they would in the view that we take of this amended proviso be automatically entitled to succeed in this appeal. It will be remembered that the original decree of eviction was passed against the appellants by virtue of the proviso to sub-section (4) as it stood before the amendment. Now however, the amended proviso would prevent the passing of any decree or any order for delivery of possession against them. It is this aspect of the amendment introduced by Act XXX of 1969 which the respondents challenge as ultra vires the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution of India.

12. The argument advanced by the respondents was mainly as follows. The right of the landlord to evict a tenant and to recover possession of his property is a fundamental right within the meaning of Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. Therefore, this is a fundamental right which cannot be abrogated, curtailed or restricted unreasonably. Tenants have been given all kinds of protection in the Act of 1956. The amendment Acts of 1968 and 1969 have considerably expanded the protection that had been originally given to the tenants by the Act of 1956. Even so of all the measures of protection given by the latest amendments the protection that is now given to the tenant by the amended proviso to sub-section (4) is so wide and of such a sweeping nature that from the point of view of the landlord it has become extremely unreasonable. A suit against a tenant is usually concluded after quite a number of years. It is not at all unusual for 10 or 12 years to elapse before even a successful landlord can throw out his tenant and recover possession of his premises. That has been the position even without the new amendment introduced by Act XXX of 1969. On top of this, now, as a result of the amendment of the proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17 even a defaulting tenant who would not ordinarily get the protection of sub-section (4) of S. 17 would be entitled to claim the same protection if he can show that he has not on an earlier occasion invoked sub-section (4) and obtained relief under that sub-section. This protection, it was argued, is far beyond reasonable limits: it would only encourage the defaulting tenants to act or make defaults in the assurance that the landlord is bound to fail in his attempt to evict the tenant in the first suit. The contention of the respondents has been formulated in paragraph 4 of the petition in the following words:—

"The impugned provisions of Ss. 2 and 5 of the Amending Act 1969 are also ultra vires the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. The restrictions created and/or imposed on a landlord by the said sections in enjoyment of his right granted under Art. 19 (1) (f) are arbitrary or of an excessive nature beyond what is required in the interest of general public and/or are not in the interest of general public, and amount to unreasonable restrictions of the landlord's rights guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution".

It was argued that the provision that the landlord can succeed against a defaulting tenant only after filing two suits constitutes an unreasonable restriction on the landlord's right to enjoy his property rights. It was urged that these provisions "completely ignore the hardship of landlord of poor financial position" and "do not even attempt to strike a proper balance between the freedom guaranteed in Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution and reasonable restriction in the interest of general public".

13. Mr. Chandra arguing in support of the appellants-tenants sought to make out the following points:—

(1) It is impossible to deny that the amendment to the proviso has added a very substantial measure of protection to the tenants which is far in advance of the protection that had been so far available under sub-section (4). The amendment makes it impossible for a landlord to get rid of defaulting tenants without succeeding in 2 suits. This itself is an unreasonable restriction on the landlord's right to hold and enjoy their right to property.

(2) Even if the prospective operation of the amendment can be justified, the retrospective character given to the amendment makes the amending proviso very unreasonable.

14. We shall deal with these points one by one.

15. We have no doubt in our mind that the protection that has now been given to the tenant is very substantial. The reasonableness of such provisions should, however, be judged with reference to the social philosophy of the time. It may not be out of place in this context to refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons with which Act IV of 1968 was introduced in the legislature. It will be remembered that the amendment was introduced by Act IV of 1968 and continued under Act XXX of 1969. There are various Supreme Court Authorities which justify a reference to the Objects and Reasons for the limited purpose of finding out the conditions which obtained at the time of the introduction of the statutes and which led to the introduction of the legislation and, in particular, for ascertaining the extent and urgency of the evil which is sought to be remedied by a particular statute. The Statement of Reasons for the enactment of Act IV of 1968 contains the following passages—

"Under Section 17 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 as it stood before the amendment by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967 (West Bengal Ordinance No. VI of 1967) a tenant who has defaulted in payment of rent for four months within a period of 12 months was debarred from avoiding ejectment by making a deposit or payment as required by sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of S. 17. The Court had no powers, even in cases of real hardship, of extending the time for making the deposit since the provisions of the Act were causing severe hardship to the tenants in some cases. It was considered necessary by the Government of West Bengal to give the tenants some relief by amendment of the Act. Accordingly, the West Bengal Premises (Amendment) Ordinance, 1967, was promulgated by the Governor of West Bengal. The main provisions of the Ordinance were as follows:—

- (a) * * * * *
- (b) * * * * *

(c) the tenant had the opportunity for once only to avoid ejectment on the ground of default in payment of rent, irrespective of the period of default by making deposit or payment of all arrear dues. On any subsequent occasion, however, default in payment of rent for four months within a period of twelve months debarred him from getting any relief.

The West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Second Ordinance was promulgated by the Governor of West Bengal to continue with certain modifications the provisions of the First Ordinance.

The proposed measure seeks to replace the Ordinance No. II of 1968".

16. It is perfectly clear that the legislature thought that a tenant should be given more than one opportunity for avoiding ejectment on the ground of default in the payment of rent by making deposits or payments in respect of arrear dues as well as by continuing to pay the current dues in terms of sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of S. 17 of the Act. If the sponsors of the statutes think that even a defaulting tenant deserves a second opportunity so long as he is prepared to pay up all arrear dues prescribed by law I do not see why it would be unreasonable to give that opportunity to the defaulting tenant. It is important to remember that the second opportunity is not given to a tenant against whom an ejectment decree is passed or is going to be passed on any other grounds mentioned in Section 13 of the Act. Thus, if a landlord requires it for his own use there is no reprieve provided for the tenant. It is only when the landlord's complaint is based on the tenant's failure to pay the rents that a tenant is given a second opportunity provided, however, that he pays up all the arrear dues. Therefore, the basis for the landlord's complaint is removed by providing for payment of his dues before any relief is given to the tenant. The protection to the tenant is counter-balanced by an equal protection for the landlord. We cannot in such circumstances persuade ourselves to regard this extra protection given to the tenant by the amended proviso to sub-section (4) as an unreasonable restriction on the landlord's right to hold and enjoy the property. It would have been unreasonable only on the assumption that the landlord wanted the house at any costs. But this is not the case where a landlord seeks to evict the tenant on the ground of default in payment of rent. If the defaults are wiped out and the current rents are paid, no reasonable hardship is caused to the landlord. In our opinion, the whole matter would appear in a different light if we remember that tenants do not always default in payment of rent out of sheer wickedness or malice towards the landlord. More often than not tenants default because they have not got the means to make the payment. In the social conditions that obtain in our country it is hardly just and proper to consider poverty as a sin which is beyond redemption. Even if the widest latitude is given to the poor and indigent tenant it would be hard to describe the provision which gives such latitude as unreasonable. This must be specially so when the latitude is not given at the cost of the landlord. The very essence of Section 17 is to protect defaulting tenants by giving them an opportunity to pay up the arrear dues. Under sub-section (4) and the proviso as it originally stood this protection was denied to the tenant who was a habitual defaulter to the extent that he would not pay his dues for four months in a period of 12 months. Under the new proviso this severity has been relaxed further in favour of the tenant. Even such a defaulting tenant is no longer considered beyond the pale of redemption and has been given an extra opportunity, but, in providing for this extra opportunity the landlord's interests have not been overlooked. Looking at the whole matter from this point of view we are not prepared to consider the provisions in Act IV of 1968 or Act XXX of 1969 which have amended the proviso to sub-sec. (4) as unreasonable and consequently unconstitutional.

17. At the time of hearing of this appeal Mr. Chandra referred us to certain observations of the Supreme Court in various decisions. We do not think that those observations have any bearing on the peculiar features of the instant case. The reasonableness of a legislative provision has to be judged on the merits of each individual case separately. We confess we have not found the observations placed before us to be very helpful.

18. We were referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in K. L. Gupta v. Corporation, Greater Bombay, AIR 1968 SC 303 where Mitter, J. delivering the judgment of the Supreme Court observes as follows:—

"In all such cases, where large powers are given to certain authorities the exercise whereof may make serious inroads into the rights of property of private individuals, we have to see whether there is any guidance to be collected from the Act itself, its object and its provisions, in the light of the surrounding circumstances which made the legislation necessary taken in conjunction with well-known facts of which the Court might take judicial notice".

These observations, if we may say with respect, are absolutely unexceptionable and completely binding on us. But the present case is not a case where any large powers have been given to any authority. Therefore, these observations are not, in our opinion, helpful at all.

19. We were next referred to the case of N. S. Gujral v. Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1968 SC 457. In that case Section 12 of the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Act, 1958 was challenged and in dealing with that question the Supreme Court regarded "decree" as a property. Mr. Chandra apparently sought to argue that in the instant case since a landlord is being deprived of a decree which he has already secured or is sure to obtain in the first Court, the legislative provision depriving the landlord of that decree amounts to unreasonable deprivation of property. In our opinion, it is not a correct analogy. What has actually happened here is that the new amendment to the proviso to sub-section (4) has made it impossible for a landlord to get a decree of eviction or an order for possession of his property unless the tenant has been guilty of the default specified in the sub-section (4) on two occasions and the tenant has obtained the relief under sub-section (4) on an earlier occasion. The conditions which will enable a landlord to get a decree for eviction have been made a little more onerous. If Section 13 of the Act of 1956 can be accepted as regulatory and reasonable and if that section is not regarded as taking away of any property right, we do not see how the amended proviso to sub-section (4) can be condemned as unreasonable and as making an inroad on one's property right.

20. Now we come to the second contention of Mr. Chandra who argued that even if the prospective operation of Section 2 (3) of Act XXX of 1969 which amended the proviso is found justified, it is impossible to escape the conclusion that the retrospective character given to the same amendment by Section 5 of Act XXX of 1969 makes it an unreasonable restriction on the right to hold property. We do not think this contention is correct either.

21. It is well known that the Supreme Court has been very cautious in treating the retroactive operation of legislation as an element of unreasonableness while dealing with the question of infringement of fundamental rights. The retrospective character of a statute is only one of the elements which have to be taken into consideration in determining the reasonableness of the restrictions introduced by a statute. In this connection reference may be made to the following Supreme Court decisions: State of West Bengal v. Subodh Gopal, 1954 SCR 587 = (AIR 1954 SC 92); Express Newspapers v. Union of India, 1959 SCR 12 = (AIR 1958 SC 578); Ramkrishna v. State of Bihar, AIR 1963 SC 1667 and Asst. Commr. Urban Land Tax, Madras v. B. & C. Co., AIR 1970 SC 169. Though the question of retrospectivity enters as an element to be considered while dealing with the concept of reasonableness under Art. 19, we must remember that there is no bar against retroactive legislation in our Constitution except in regard to criminal legislation.

22. In our opinion, if the proposition (sic-provision) of giving a double opportunity to defaulting tenant is not by itself unreasonable it should not become unreasonable merely because retrospective effect has been given to the legislative provision introducing this double opportunity. We must make it clear that we say this because of the special considerations involved in the case of defaulting tenants. As we have already indicated, the legislative provision contains a kind of poise and counter-poise protecting the interest of the tenant as well as the reasonable interest of the landlord; it must, therefore, be regarded as reasonable in its impact on the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution. In coming to this decision we remember the important fact that the landlord in such cases is anxious to get his rents and is not anxious to get back possession of the premises. Had it been otherwise we might have come to a different conclusion. In fact, in the case of Kalyani Datta v. Pramila Bala Dassi my learned brother Mr. Justice Dutt gave a judgment to which I was a party and in which he held that sub-section (3-A) of S. 13 in so far as it has been made applicable to pending suits and appeals is ultra vires the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution for having placed unreasonable restrictions on the rights of landlords whose suits or appeals for eviction on the ground of reasonable requirement are pending. I refer to this case to indicate the essential qualitative distinction between a case where a landlord requires a house for his own use and a case where the landlord wants to get rid of a tenant because he does not pay rents regularly.

23. Both the contentions of Mr. Chandra, therefore, fail. In the facts and circumstances aforesaid we must hold that since in the instant case the tenant has admittedly never before obtained relief under sub-section (4) he will be entitled to the protection provided by the amended proviso of that sub-section.

24. It remains for me to mention that there was some argument regarding the exact effect of the amended proviso. We have, however, sitting in the same Special Bench delivered a judgment today in another appeal, namely Jamuna Prasad Chowrasia v. Kishorilal Poddar, (F. A. No. 565 of 1965 (Cal)) in which we have held that under the amended proviso, no decree or order for delivery of possession can be made against a tenant who has not committed a default in payment of rent for four months within a period of 12 months after having once before obtained relief in an earlier suit for a similar default. It is not necessary for us to deal with this aspect of the matter in this case again.

25. In the result since it is nobody's case that the appellant had obtained any relief under sub-section (4) of S. 17 in an earlier suit and since we have found the amended proviso to be perfectly constitutional we must hold that in the facts and circumstances of the case the appellant will be entitled to the protection given by the amended proviso. In the result, we allow the appeal and set aside the decree passed by the learned Subordinate Judge. We order, however, that the respondent will get the costs of both the suit and the appeal.

First Appeals Nos. 136, 137 and 138 of 1962

given in favour of the landlord and against the tenants in the corresponding suits, namely, Suit No. 1877 of 1959, 1874 of 1959 and 1886 of 1959 respectively of the City Civil Court Calcutta. The tenants were found guilty in each case of having committed defaults in the payment of rent for four months in a period of 12 months so that the original proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17 of the Act made it impossible for the tenants in any of these cases to invoke the protective provisions of Section 13 of the Act of 1956. The tenants, however, applied during the pendency of the appeals for relief under the amended proviso to sub-section (4). Confronted with this situation it was argued on behalf of the landlords that the provisions of Sections 2 (3) and 5 of Act XXX of 1969 which introduced the relevant amendments in the proviso and also made it retrospective are ultra vires the Constitution of India.

27. Of these three appeals Appeal No. 137 of 1962 was not pressed before us by the learned Advocate for the appellants on the ground that the landlord has already taken possession of the suit premises. Appeal No. 137 of 1962 is, therefore, dismissed for non-prosecution. No order in respect of costs is made in this appeal.

28. We have just now held that the contention that the amended proviso is invalid on the ground of unconstitutionality cannot be sustained. Therefore, there is no doubt that the tenants in Appeals Nos. 136 and 138 of 1962 will be entitled to get relief under the amended proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17. No other point was urged on behalf of the respondents-landlords. The defence of the tenants-appellants was also confined to the question of getting relief under the amended proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17.

29. In the result, these two appeals viz. Appeal Nos. 136 and 138 of 1962 succeed and the relevant suits in these three appeals are dismissed: the judgments of the trial Judge though correct at the time of delivery cannot be sustained any longer and are, therefore, set aside. We order, however, that in each case, the respective respondent will get the costs of the suit as well as the costs of the appeal.

First Appeal No. 1038 of 1964:

30. This appeal is from a decree of ejectment given on the ground of default in payment of rent for four months within a period of 12 months. The defendant was a tenant in respect of the second floor and one bath room on the ground floor of premises No. 10-A, Krishnaram Bose Street, Calcutta, at a monthly rental of Rs. 40/- per month payable according to the English Calendar month. The landlord complained that the tenant had not paid rent for September to December 1961 and had also sublet a portion of the premises to one Subal Chandra Das without the consent of the landlord. A notice to quit was served on the tenant and the tenant having failed or neglected to quit the premises the landlord filed a suit for ejectment. The tenant contested the suit and filed a written statement. An issue as to valid service of notice though raised in the beginning was abandoned by the tenant at the time of trial. In any event, the learned trial Judge deals with the merits of this point and finds that the notice satisfies the requirements of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, as well as of Section 13 (6) of the Act of 1956. The learned trial Judge dismissed the landlord's contention that the defendant had sublet a portion of the premises in suit. On the question of default, however, the learned trial Judge found that the tenant-defendant was guilty of default in payment of rents for September to December 1961 and had on that ground forfeited his claim to protection under the Act of 1956. Before the filing of the written statement, however, the tenant had filed an application under S. 17 (2) and had made deposits in terms of sub-section (2) of S. 17 in pursuance of an order of the learned trial Judge. The learned trial Judge granted a decree of ejectment in favour of the landlord on the ground of default. At the hearing of the appeal the tenant-appellant took the point that since he had made the deposits required under sub-section (2) of S. 17 and since he had not on any earlier occasion obtained relief in terms of sub-section (4) of S. 17, he was entitled to protection in the present appeal under the amended proviso to sub-section (4). In answer to that, the landlord contended as in the other appeals which we are hearing analogously, that the provisions of Act XXX of 1969 which made the amendment to the proviso are ultra vires the Constitution. We have already held that there is no substance in this argument. We hold, therefore, that the tenant will be entitled to relief in terms of sub-section (4). The appeal is, therefore, allowed and the decree of the learned trial Judge which was correct at the time when it was passed, is set aside. We order, however, that the tenant should pay to the landlord the costs of the suit as well as of the appeal. I should, however, record that as I was delivering this judgment Mr. H. K. Mitra, learned Advocate for the appellant told us that Kamal Kumar Nag, the appellant has died on 1 July 1972. Since however, this death took place between the conclusion of the hearing of the appeal and the delivery of the judgment this makes no difference by reason of the provisions of Order 22, Rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

31. This appeal is also from, an order of ejectment passed against a tenant appellant on the ground of default in payment of rent. It is not necessary for us to recount all the facts for, it is the admitted position that the defendant tenant had neither paid nor deposited rents to the landlord since Pous Badi S. Y. 2017. No attempt was made before us on the part of the tenant to press any point other than the point that the tenant-appellant is entitled to the additional relief granted by the amended proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17. It is nobody's case that the tenant-appellant has obtained relief in an earlier suit under the provisions of sub-section (4) of S. 17. Therefore, it is clear that the tenant-appellant must succeed in his appeal if he can come within the ambit of sub-s. (4) read with the amended proviso.

32. Mr. Ghosh appearing for the landlord-respondent made two contentions. First, he argued that the tenant-appellant has not complied with the provisions of sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 17 of the Act of 1956. Secondly he argued that the provisions of the Act XXX of 1969 which amended the proviso to sub-section (4) are ultra vires Arts. 14 and 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution of India. On this question of ultra vires he adopted Mr. Chandra's argument as advanced in F. A. No. 550 of 1962.

33. We shall deal with these two arguments one by one. As regards the argument regarding non-compliance with the requirement of sub-section (2) of S. 17, the contention of Mr. Ghosh must be rejected. The order passed by the learned trial Judge under sub-section (2) of S. 17 was an order passed by consent. On 25 April 1964 the learned trial Judge dealt with the landlord's written objection to the application under sub-section (2) of S. 17. Issues were framed and lawyers of both parties were heard. The learned trial Judge observes:—

"It is an admitted position that the defendant has been in possession of the suit premises as a tenant on a rental of Rs. 57.19 np. according to Hindi Calendar months and that the defendant has neither paid nor deposited rents accruing due at least since 1st Pous Badi, S. Y. 2017. The defendant has raised contentions to the effect that the plaintiff is not the landlord and that the previous landlords did not accept the rent etc. Be that as it may, both parties agree that without prejudice to the respective contentions of either party as to the subsistence of the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties the defendant will deposit the arrears of rent at the rate of Rs. 57.19 np. according to Hindi Calendar within the 15th of each succeeding month and that the amount will not be withdrawn by the plaintiff without getting further orders from this Court. This agreement is accepted. The amount of arrears of rent due upto 2nd Chitra Sudi 15, 2017 S. Y. from the 1st Pous Badi S. Y. 2017 amounts to Rs. 2401.98 np. The defendant do deposit this sum within one month from date and continue depositing the rents accruing due henceforth at the rate of Rs. 57.19 np. within the 15th of each succeeding month according to Hindi Calendar. In default, the defence against delivery of possession shall be struck out. The amounts if deposited, will not be withdrawn by the plaintiff without getting specific orders from this Court".

34. It is apparent that only a preliminary order had been passed and the final order could not be passed because the question as to whether there was any relationship of landlord and tenant between them had not been decided at that stage. Even if there had been an irregularity, since the order was passed by consent the landlord cannot take exception to it now. It is true that the learned trial Judge did not include within his order any direction as to interests and costs. But the details of calculation of arrear of rents are not available from the order. In any event since both parties had accepted the order it is not now open to the landlord to make a grievance of it. The fact remains that whatever order was passed by the learned trial Judge under sub-section (2) of S. 17 has been complied with by the tenant. Whether the order is final or preliminary, since it is a consent order we must proceed on the basis that the tenant has complied with the provisions of sub-section (2). In these circumstances this objection of the landlord fails. As for the second objection as to the vires of the provisions of Act XXX of 1969 which amended the proviso to sub-section (4) of S. 17 we have already found that this objection cannot be sustained. In this view of the matter both the contentions made out by the learned Advocate for the landlord-respondent are found to be of no substance. The tenant-appellant, therefore, must succeed and we order as follows:

The appeal is allowed. The decree of eviction passed by the learned trial Judge even though it was correct at the time of the passing of the decree can no longer be sustained and is set aside. The tenant, however, must pay to the landlord-respondent the costs of this appeal as well as the costs of the suit.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:—

35. I agree.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— 36. I agree.
Order accordingly.

HAZRA, J.

Satsang and another, Petitioners v. Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhyay and others. Respondents.

Suit No. 160 of 1972, D/- 18-7-1972.

Index Note: Copyright Act (1957), Ss. 2 (o), 13 (1) (a), 14 (1) (a), 45 — 'Literary Work' — Works of a religious preacher or compilations of his discourses or teaching are 'literary work' within Section 2 (o) and are entitled to 'copyright' under the Act — Registration of 'works' not a condition precedent for acquisition of copyright in works.

Brief Note:— The right which a person acquires in a work, which is the result of his intellectual labour is called his copyright. The primary function of copyright law is to protect from annexation by other people the fruits of a man's work, labour, skill or test. It is works that are protected and not ideas; if ideas can be taken without copying a work, the copyright owner cannot interfere. The words 'literary work' cover work which is expressed in print or writing, irrespective of the question whether the quality or style is high, and are used in the sense of written or printed matter.

Having regard to the law on the subject, writings of a religious preacher, or his sermons and sayings which are compiled by Satsang Society on his behalf would prima facie, come within the meaning of 'literary works' and would in any view, be protected under the Copyright Act. In the instant case the works as well the compilations of speeches, discourses etc. in which copyright is claimed are the result of the knowledge, labour, judgment, learning, skill, test, realisation and understanding of the founder of the Satsanga sect and as such they are protected under the Copyright Act. ORDER:— The plaintiffs Satsang, a registered society under the Societies Registration Act and Nani Gopal Chakrabarty, the Secretary, Satsang have made this application for interlocutory injunction restraining the defendants, Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhyaya and Kumud Bandhu Bal and others from making any further reproduction or printing or publication of the works entitled "Satyanusaran" "Chhande-Surey-Sabar-Jibon" and "Path-O-Patheo" or any of them or making any other or further copies or colourable imitation of the publications of the plaintiff No. 1 entitled "Satyanusaran" "Anusruti" and "Alochona Prasangey" and from selling or disposing of by way of trade or offering for sale any copies of the said works or any other copies or colourable imitations of the said publications of the plaintiff No. 1 Satsang till the disposal of this suit and for appointment of a receiver in respect of all manuscripts, proofs, and other originals of the said works in their possession till the disposal of the suit.

2. An interesting question of copyright law has been raised in this application. Are the works of a religious preacher himself in his own handwriting and the compilations of the discussions and sermons of a religious preacher made by the Society founded by him "literary works" within the meaning of the word "work" under the Copyright Act, 1957?

The religious preacher in this case is Anukul Chandra Chakrabarty known by his followers and disciples as "Sri Sri Thakur Anukul". He himself wrote a book "Satyanusaran" in his own hand as early as 1316 B. S. corresponding to 1910 A. D. recording some of his religious teaching and precepts. The said book "Satyanusaran" was printed and published for the first time in the year 1919 and thereafter the same ran into several editions. Sri Sri Thakur Anukul also known as "Sri Sri Thakur" founded a society of religious brotherhood and charitable organisation consisting of his followers and disciples known as Satsang, sometime in the year 1925. This society was originally registered at Pabna but on 4th April 1951 (when Pabna was a part of the then East Pakistan) it was registered at Calcutta under the Societies Registration Act, 1860.

The object of the society is to propagate and to give practical shape to the ideals and activities of Sri Sri Anukul Thakur. It owns and runs a publishing unit known as Satsang Publishing House at Deoghar.

3. During the lifetime of Sri Sri Thakur the discussions with the sermons given by the Thakur were compiled and the said compilations were published by a member of the said society Satsang on its behalf in the year 1949 under the name "Anusruti." Since 1949 the said book Anusruti was printed and published and further volumes of the said compilation Anusruti was published from time to time.

A volume, which was produced before me being the second volume shows that these are poetry or poetical expressions of Sri Sri Thakur. In the preface it is written that Sri Sri Thakur started delivering "Chhara" or "poetry" in the year 1940 and continuously uttered those Charra or poetry or poetical expressions. There are numerous such expressions and some of them had been compiled in the second volume.

Similarly, during the lifetime of Sri Sri Thakur the religious teachings and precepts of the Thakur were recorded by his followers who were members of Satsang. The same was printed and published by the Satsang through its press and publishing house. The name of this magazine is "Alochana". Thereafter, these writings were compiled in a book "Alochona Prosangey". This was printed and published by the Satsang and the last volume was printed and published in the year 1969.

The petitioner's case is that Satsang is the owner and/or the exclusive licensee of the copyright in the said publication viz., "Satyanusaran" "Anusruti" and "Alochona Prosangey". The petitioners state that the respondents are infringing the copyright of the said works.

4. The defendant No. 1 Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhyaya and the defendant No. 2 Kumud Bandhu Bal very recently published the book "Satyanusaran" written by Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra. They also published two other books in the name of "Path-O-Patheo-Prosangey" which are mere quotations from some of the volumes of the books "Alochona Prosangey" and similarly they also published another book "Chhanda Surey Sabar Jiban" reproducing in verbatim a substantial part of the publication "Anusruti".

The petitioners say that the defendants have infringed the copy-right of the petitioner "Satsang" in respect of the said works. There was an exclusive licence given by Sri Sri Thakur to Sri Amarendra Nath Chakrabarty his eldest son to publish his works, viz., all books written by him and all books containing his teachings collected and compiled by his followers and his disciples being members of Satsang for the benefit of the said Satsang.

5. On November 13, 1971 notice was given by Mr. B. K. Sinha, Advocate, on behalf of the petitioners to the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to refrain from infringement of copyright of the books of the plaintiff. On December 4, 1971, Mr. H. P. Ghosh, Advocate, for the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, replied to the said letter denying the statements contained in the said letter, but did not deal with the allegations contained in the said letter. It was further stated in the said letter that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are trying to procure materials on receipt of which they will send a reply dealing with allegations in the said letter of Mr. B. K. Sinha. Thereafter on December 15, 1971 there was another reminder given by Mr. B. K. Sinha to Mr. H. P. Ghosh but on January 6, 1972 Mr. H. P. Ghosh stated that they have already filed a suit in the second Court of Munsif at Sealdah.

6. Mr. Gouri Mitter, Advocate-General of West Bengal, Mr. A. K. Sen and Mr. Dipak Sen appeared before me for the plaintiffs, and, by consent Mr. A. K. Sen argued the matter for the plaintiffs. Mr. Sen submitted that these are literary works and original works of Sri Anukul Thakur. Literary works include also compilations. Copyright subsists in respect of these classes of works. Sri Sri Thakur himself was publishing these works for a long time. Satsang was a society established by Thakur himself. Originally it was a society at Pabna (which subsequently formed part of the then East Pakistan) and since 1951 it is a registered society in India. Sri Sri Thakur himself in writing on November 15, 1957 gave exclusive licence to his son Amarendra Nath Chakrabarty to publish his works for and on behalf of and for the benefit of the Satsang, and Satsang is the exclusive licensee. A photostat copy of the licence by Sri Anukul Chandra Chakrabarty (Sri Sri Thakur) was produced before me.

7. Mr. A. K. Sen placed before me a copy of the plaint in title suit No. 360 of 1971 filed by the defendants Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhyaya and Kumud

Bandhu Bal in the Second Court of Munsif at Sealdah, on December 20, 1971, that is, after receipt of the two letters dated November 13, 1971, and December 4, 1971 on behalf of the plaintiff. The case of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 will appear from the plaint filed in Sealdah Court. In the plaint in the Sealdah Court the defendants stated as follows:

(a) Sri Sri Anukul Thakur was a great religious teacher. He is the founder of the famous religious organisation, known as "Satsang Pabna" which has its branches and offices in different parts of India and in many places of the world. Sri Sri Thakur passed away on January 27, 1967 at the age of 81.

(b) Sri Sri Thakur is worshipped by his millions of disciples as a prophet. Sri Sri Thakur made utterances which sounded like the holy sermons. Sri Thakur always opined that his sayings and the books containing them as also the properties of Satsang Pabna did not belong to any particular group. At the early age of 22 he put into writing in his own hand some of his sayings in a book in Bengali which he himself named as "Satyanusaran". This book, because of the universal nature of the truth contained in it, came to be read by his countless disciples and had undergone several editions.

(c) There was injunction by Sri Sri Thakur against any change in his sayings. But as the book "Satyanusaran" underwent editions, there appeared changes, deviations and even distortions. There is one edition of the book, namely, seventh edition, published by Satsang Publishing House in the year 1345 B. S. This edition was specially characterised by the words "Parishodhita and Paribarjita".

(d) The sayings of Sri Sri Thakur cannot be the personal property or asset of any group or any individual "either by inheritance or by assignments or otherwise."

(e) The defendant No. 1 is the eldest son of Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra. There are other sons and daughters of Sri Sri Thakur. The defendant No. 1 first published the above named book "Satyanusaran" in the year 1352 B. S. and marked it as 8th edition. The defendant No. 1 subsequently published other books where he described himself as publisher. The last edition of "Satyanusaran" was published in the year 1971. In this edition there are certain distortions. It is claimed that the defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 have no right or claim on the book "Satyanusaran" or any other book containing the sermon of Sri Sri Thakur as their own either by inheritance or by assignment or otherwise, nor can they lay any claim on any of the assets or properties left by Sri Sri Thakur or belonging to Satsang, Pabna.

(f) Even if defendants Nos. 1 and 2 produced any document showing assignment or transfer of copyright to him by Sri Sri Thakur or anybody, such document is challenged by the plaintiff as not lawful or real.

(g) The plaintiff No. 1 Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhaya and plaintiff No. 2, Kumud Bandhu Bal were initiated by the Thakur in the prime of their youth and have dedicated their lives to the cause of the Thakur. They are shocked by the acts and conduct of the defendant No. 1. So they have published an edition of "Satyanusarna" in Bengali for the first time in 1378 B. S.

(h) The plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 begged money from the disciples of Sri Sri Thakur for the publication of the afore-said book and defendant No. 3 Messrs. Eastern Printing Press published it at a minimum remuneration. As a result, it has been possible for the plaintiffs to distribute the copies of this book free of cost among the masses and to acquaint themselves with the preachings and sermons of Sri Sri Thakur.

(i) In publishing this edition the plaintiffs solely depended on the seventh edition of "Satyanusaran" because it was the only genuine edition.

(j) The case of the plaintiff is that the defendant No. 1 in publishing a mutilated and distorted edition of the original "Satyanusaran" written by Sri Sri Thakur and in introducing metaphors therein according to his own whims and convenience, has profaned a sacred work of a great prophet and has caused anguish agony to his numberless disciples.

It is stated that for the above reasons the suit was filed and in the suit it is claimed that the editions "Satyanusaran" published by defendant Nos. 1 and 2 including the 20th edition have deviated from the original writing of Sri Sri Thakur.

In the prayers in the said plaint the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 (defendants Nos. 1 and 2 herein) prayed, inter alia,

(i) for declaration that the book named "Satyanusaran" of Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra, now published by the plaintiffs Nos. 1 (Kiron Chandra Mukherjee) and 2 (Kumud Bandhu Bal) and printed by defendant No. 3 (Eastern Publishing House) has been reprinted from the seventh edition of the same book that was published by Satsang Publishing House in 1345 B. S. and this edition by the Plaintiffs has not been copied or reprinted in part or in full from any of the editions published by the defendant No. 1 (Amarendra Nath Chakraborty).

(ii) that the defendant No. 1 (Amarendra Nath Chakraborty) has no right to print and publish an edition of "Satyanusaran" reserving the copyright to himself in the way he has done in the editions published by him and that plaintiffs have right to print and publish the editions referred to above.

(iii) for a declaration that the editions of "Satyanusaran" published by the defendant No. 1 (Amarendra Nath Chakraborty) and/or defendant No. 2 (Satsangha Publishing House) including the 20th edition have deviated from the original written by Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra.

(iv) for an injunction restraining the defendants (Amarendra Nath Chakraborty, Satsangha and Eastern Press) from circulating or selling the copies of the 20th edition of "Satyanusaran" published by the defendant No. 1 (Amarendra Nath Chakraborty).

8. Mr. A. K. Sen cited (1916) 2 Ch 601 at p. 608. (University of London Press Ltd. v. University Tutorial Press Ltd.) and submitted that these works are literary works within the meaning of the words literary works in its Copyright Act 1957.

9. Mr. M. B. Sarkar appearing for the defendant Nos. 1 and 2 Kiron Chandra Mukhopadhyaya and Kumud Bandhu Bal submitted that these works do not come within Section 13 of the Copyright Act. According to him these works are not original literary works. He submitted that Section 13 cannot be read independently of Sections 16 and 17 of the Copyright Act. His case is that these books are religious precepts of a "Guru" and any disciple of the "Guru" can publish these works, and as such Satsang has no right of publication. According to him, the religious teachings and precepts of a religious preacher are not "literary works" and the author has no copyright in respect of such works. He also submitted that there was no exclusive licence. He disputed the genuineness of the writing dated 15-11-1957, the photostat copy of which has been shown to me.

Mr. Sarkar, further submitted that the suit is not maintainable because copyright is not registered and as such no suit lies. In support of this contention he relied upon a decision of the Madhya Pradesh High Court reported in AIR 1970 Madh Pra 261, (M/s. Mishra Bandhu Karyalaya v. Shivratanlal Koshal). He relied upon an observation by the learned Judge in this case, at page 267 which is as follows:

"The Indian Copyright Act 1914 had nowhere made any provision for the registration of the copyrights. Under the Copyright Act, 1957, it appears that under Sections 13 and 45 the registration of book with the Registrar of Copyrights is a condition for acquiring copyright with respect to it. A plain reading of several provisions of the Act leaves no doubt in my mind that copyright in book now is only secured if it is an original compilation and has been duly registered according to the provisions of the 1957 Act. Once it is so registered the author is deemed to acquire the property rights in the book. The right arising from the registration of the book can be the subject-matter of civil or criminal remedy so that without it the author can have no rights nor remedies in spite of the fact that the work is an original one".

Mr. Sarkar next cited another decision reported in AIR 1960 Andh Pra 415, (V. Errabhadrarao v. B. N. Sarma). This is a suit under Hyderabad Copyright Act (2 of 1334 F). In the Hyderabad Act there is a clear provision that copyright in a book or drawing is only secured if it is an original compilation and has been duly registered according to the provisions of the Act.

Lastly, Mr. Sarkar contended that the nature of the document dated November 15, 1957 is not a licence because it is not addressed to anybody. In any event, it grants to Shri Amarendra Nath Chakraborty, the exclusive right by way of licence to print and publish the books and compilations thereof for the benefit of Satsang and, therefore, Amarendra Nath Chakravarty should have been made a party.

10. The question is whether these works come within the meaning of "original literary works" under Section 13 of the Copyright Act, 1957? Under Section 2 (y) of the said Act "work" means any of the following works, namely: (i) a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work. The word "literary" has not been defined, but under Section 2 (c) 'literary work' includes tables and compilations.

In (1916) 2 Ch 601, (University of London Press Ltd. v. University Tutorial Press Ltd.) it was held that papers set by examiners are 'literary works' within the meaning of Copyright Act, 1911. At page 608 of the judgment, Paterson, J. says "in my view, the words 'literary work' cover work which is expressed in print or writing, irrespective of the question whether the quality or style is high. The word 'literary' seems to be used in a sense somewhat similar to the use of the word 'literature' in political or electioneering literature and refers to written or printed matter. Papers set by examiners are, in my opinion, 'literary work' within the meaning of the present Act".

This judgment has been followed by Romer, J. in 1925 Ch 383 (British Oxygen Co. v. Liquid Air Ltd.). In this case a letter written by manufacturers to a trade-customer offering their goods at a low price if the customer agrees to take such goods exclusively from them, is an 'original literary work' within the meaning of Section 1, sub-section (1) of the Copyright Act, 1911 and the writers are entitled to copyright therein.

11. In Halsbury's Laws of England Third Edition Volume VIII, Art. 690, page 376 it appears as follows: "Whereas the Copyright Act, 1842 gave protection to 'books' an expression which was defined as including a volume, part of a volume, pamphlet, sheet of letter-press, sheet of music, map, chart, or plan, separately published, copyright under the Copyright Act, 1911, extends to all literary works, and the words 'literary work' cover work which is expressed in print or writing, irrespective of the question whether the quality or style is high, and are used in the sense of written or printed matter. The expression 'literary work' also includes maps, charts, plans, tables, and compilations. The change of description of the works to be protected brought about by the Copyright Act, 1911, from 'books' to 'literary works' has not cut down, or altered to his detriment, the rights of a person claiming copyright.

The right which a person acquires in a work, which is the result of his intellectual labours is called his copyright. The primary function of copyright law is to protect from annexation by other people the fruits of a man's work, labour, skill or taste. It is works that are protected and not ideas; if ideas can be taken without copying a work, the copyright owner cannot interfere. The Copyright Act mentions as among the subjects of copyright, novels and other 'literary works' maps, charts, plans, tables and compilations, all of which count as 'literary works', lectures, including addresses, speeches and sermons, plays, cinema films, pieces for recitation and so forth. Novels, plays, poems, paintings are absolutely protected. They must be original in the sense not being entirely copies of another similar works. In other words, they must originate from their authors. They must also be substantial enough to deserve the name of "works".

12. Mr. Sen cited (1872) 14 Eq 431, (Mack v. Pether). In this case, the plaintiff, the publisher of a work which he claimed to have originated, called "The Birthday Scripture Text Book", consisting of a printed diary interleaved, with a blank space opposite each day with a text of scripture appended, and which was designed as a record of the birthdays of friends".

"I am of opinion that the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction. The defendants would be at liberty to publish a daily text book and so far to adopt the scheme of the plaintiff's work; but it was the plaintiff's own idea to have a text book associated with a birthday, and so to adopt it to those sentiments of religion with which most persons regard a day which marks the completion of another year of their lives. The plaintiff is entitled to a copyright in the use of the title, "Birth-day Text Book". whatever other words may be associated with it, and the defendants must be restrained from the publication of their work, and they are not entitled to publish a work with such a title, or in such a form as to binding or general appearances, as to be a colourable imitation of that of the plaintiff".

13. Having regard to the law on the subject, writings of a religious preacher, Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra, or his sermons and sayings which are compiled by Satsang on his behalf would prima facie, come within the meaning of 'literary works' and would in my view, be protected under the Copyright Act.

In the instant case, before me, the defendants did not claim to have any right as licensee. Admittedly these works are original works of Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra. It is the result of the knowledge, labour, judgment, learning, skill, test, realisation and understanding of Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra. The compilations are also compilations of his teachings and his works. From the year 1910, these works were either published by Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra himself or by Satsang at the wishes of Sri Sri Thakur Anukul Chandra. Before me, a writing from the Thakur was produced by which he gave exclusive licence to publish these books for the benefit of the society founded by him. The eldest son of Sri Sri Thakur, Shri Amarendra Nath Chakravorty is the Prodhana Acharya and ex-officio President of the Society and the copies of the books which are shown to me are published by Shri Amarendra Nath Chakravorty and Satsang Publishing House, P. O. Satsang, Deoghar.

Although the rights of the parties would be decided finally in the suit, but I think that a prima facie case has been made out by the petitioners. The defendants do not claim to have any independent right but their case is that plaintiffs have no right, indeed nobody has any right and, therefore, the defendants can make publications as disciple of their Guru.

Admittedly, the publications of the works of Sri Sri Anukul Thakur have been made very recently by the defendants. The letters placed before me written on behalf of the plaintiff which is annexed to the petition show that sometimes in 1971 the plaintiffs came to know that the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are infringing the copyright of the plaintiff

14. Now, I shall deal with the case reported in AIR 1970 Madh Pra 261 at p. 267, relied on by Mr. M. B. Sarkar.

With regard to the case reported in AIR 1970 Madh Pra 261 at p. 267, Mr. A. K. Sen pointed out that neither Section 13 nor Section 45 of the Copyright Act mentions that registration is compulsory, nor there is any section in 1957 Act, which provides, that unless there is registration the author of any works cannot bring an action for infringement of copyright. A plain reading of several sections of the Copyright Act, 1957 leaves no doubt in my mind that the contention of Mr. Sen is correct. Under the Copyright Act 1957 registration is not compulsory. There is no section in the Copyright Act 1957, to the effect that the author can have no right or remedy unless the work is registered. Section 13 of the Copyright Act provides that copyright shall subsist throughout India in certain classes of works which are enumerated in the section. Section 45 of the Act provides that the author or publisher of, or the owner of or other person interested in the copyright in any work may make an application in the prescribed form accompanied by the prescribed fee to the Registrar of Copyrights for entering particulars of the work in the Register of Copyrights. This section does not say that registration is compulsory. The learned Judges of Madhya Pradesh High Court at p. 267 stated as follows: "We are, however, concerned with the state of law prevalent under the Imperial Copyright Act 1911 enacted by the British Parliament, subject to such modifications as stated in the Indian Copyright Act, 1914. It is necessary for us to deal with this aspect because the learned counsel for the appellant, during the course of his arguments obliquely suggested that the copyright of the book in question 'Saral Middle School Ank Ganeet' not being registered, neither the author nor his assignee had any kind of right or remedy. The whole object of this discussion is to remove that misconception". The learned Judges further stated: "under the law relating to copyright, then prevalent to which we have already referred, namely, Imperial Copyright Act, 1911 as adopted and modified under the Indian conditions by the Indian Copyright Act, 1914 a person had an inherent copyright in an original composition or compilation without the necessity of its registration".

15. Mr. A. K. Sen also pointed out that the learned Judges of the Madhya Pradesh High Court referred to and accepted principles in (1914) 2 Ch 566 (567), (E. W. Savory Ltd. v. The World of Golf Ltd.). The head note of that case is:

"In the case of a picture assigned with all copyrights, but not registered under the Fine Arts Copyright Act 1911; the owner of the picture has such a 'copyright' as will enable him to receive the substituted and enlarged copyright given to owners of copyright in substitution for their existing rights by S. 5 and Sched. I of the Copyright Act, 1911".

It was argued in that case that the copyright in a picture was first created by the Act of 1862 and Section 4 of that Act provides that no proprietor of any copyright shall be entitled to the benefit of the Act until his copyright is registered. Artistic copyright was one of the benefits given by the Act of 1862 (25 and 26 Vict. C. 68). Until registration the plaintiffs had no copyright, but only an inchoate right to acquire it by registration. They could not therefore take the larger rights given by the Act of 1911.

"Therefore we have to ascertain whether the plaintiffs at the date of the passing of that Act were entitled to copyright. That throws us back upon consideration of the Act of 1862. The Act of 1862 gives copyright to the author or the vendee or assignee of any original painting and so on, and by Section 4 it is provided that no proprietor of any such copyright shall be entitled to the benefit of the Act until registration — that is a reference to registration under the Act of 1862, which is there provided for and no action shall be sustainable or any penalty be recovered in respect of anything done before registration. It is argued that the result of that provision is that at the date of passing of the Act of 1911 the plaintiffs had no copyright in the picture, because undoubtedly they had not registered, and I have to consider whether they had copyright. In my opinion they had. I think it would be strange to hold otherwise, because if I did I should be holding that the Act of 1911 was taking away from them a right which at that time they possessed, because had they chosen at that date to have registered their copyright they could have immediately afterwards sued anybody who infringed it, whereas by the Act of 1911 the whole machinery of registration was swept away and it is impossible to register, and consequently, unless the Act of 1911 took something away from them they are entitled to something, and that something I take to be copyright".

16. Mr. A. K. Sen submitted that under Section 4 of the English Statute 25 and 26 Vic. C. A. P. LXVIII which was an Act amending the law relating to copyrights in works of the fine arts and for repressing the commission of fraud in the production and sale of such works, there was a provision (mentioned in the said Act) that no proprietor of any such copyright shall be entitled to the benefit of this Act until such registration and no action shall be sustainable nor any penalty be recoverable in respect of anything done before registration. Mr. Sen submitted that there is no such provision in the Copyright Act 1957 and Section 45 of the Copyright Act 1957 merely makes registration of copyright optional.

17. In my view, the observations of the learned Judges in the Madhya Pradesh case to the effect; "under Copyright Act, 1957, unless copyright is registered the author will not acquire property right in the book and without it the author can have no rights and remedies are observations in the nature of 'obiter dictum'. I have already expressed my view in the matter. With respect to the learned Judges, I do not find any such provision in the Copyright Act, 1957.

The other case cited by Mr. Sarkar which is reported in AIR 1960 Andh Pra 415 can have no application under the facts of this case because, the Andhra Pradesh case deals with Hyderabad Copyright Act (2 of 1334F). In the Hyderabad Act, which is a different statute, there is clear provision that a copyright in a book or drawing is only secured if it is an original compilation and has been duly registered according to the provisions of the Act.

There is no such provision in the Copyright Act, 1957 (Act XIV of 1957), which is similar to Hyderabad Copyright Act, and, therefore, this decision cited by Mr. Sarkar has no application under the facts of this case.

18. With regard to the point taken by Mr. Sarkar that Shri Amarendra Nath Chakraborty should have been made a party, Mr. A. K. Sen has rightly pointed out that Shri Amarendra Nath Chakraborty is the Prodhán Acharya or the ex-officio President of Satsang. In any event, no suit shall be defeated by reason of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties. Parties may be added at any point of time if necessary or the plaint amended.

In the instant case, admittedly, 'Satyanusaran' is the work of Sri Sri Anukul Thakur. It was published by Satsang Publishing House. The other works are compilations made by Satsang or by a member of Satsang and, admittedly, the works were published by Satsang for a long time. Satsang claims to be the owner and/or exclusive licensee. If Satsang is the owner or exclusive licensee the matter ends. If Satsang is not the owner or exclusive licensee then the copyright of the author devolves on his death upon his heirs. These are matters which would be decided in the suit. In any event, the defendants who are two of the disciples of Sri Sri Anukul Thakur did not prove that they have any right in respect of the aforesaid works. Their grievance is that there were distortions in the works and they were mentally shocked. Prima facie, I do not think that there is any right of the defendants to make separate publications and I cannot allow continuation of publications of the said works by the defendants.

19. In the premises, I shall grant interlocutory injunction as prayed in the petition. There will be order in terms of prayer (a) of the petition. I shall also appoint the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 receivers in terms of prayer (b) of the petition without remuneration and without security. They will hold all unpublished copies, keep an account of the same and produce all accounts relating to the same at the time of the trial.

20. Costs of this application will be the costs in the cause.

Rule made absolute.

Matter No. 509 of 1969, D/- 4-2-1972.

Customs Act (1962), S. 131 — Revision by Central Government — Duty of revisional authority to give opportunity of personal hearing to petitioner.

The revisional proceeding before the Central Government is a quasi-judicial proceeding. The Commissioner (Revision Application) Govt. of India therefore, should have certainly given an opportunity of personal hearing to the petitioner, who had prayed for such hearing, specially when the grounds on which he rejected the revision were not identical as found by the appellate authority. v. Collector of Customs, Calcutta 8
M. Banerji for Petitioner; D. Sen for the Govt. of India.

ORDER:— This is an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution taken out by the petitioner against the order passed by the Commissioner (Revision Application), Government of India and for issuance of appropriate writ.

2. The matter arises out of 'drawback of duties of customs' on the imported material, namely, copper used in the manufacture of super synthetic enamelled copper wire and subsequently exported. Mr. M. Banerji, appearing on behalf of the petitioner, contends that the Customs authorities have arbitrarily and illegally rejected his client's petition for the said drawback as contemplated under Section 75 of the New Customs Act. Mr. Banerji contends that he first claimed for the drawback before the Assistant Collector of Customs. But by the order dated the 31st December, 1965, the said Assistant Collector rejected the claim for drawback as inadmissible. From that order his client appealed to the Appellate Collector of Customs, Calcutta, for the said drawback of duties on 92 cases of super synthetic enamelled copper wire. But by an order dated the 29th September, 1966, the said Appellate Collector of Customs after giving personal hearing rejected the claim of the petitioner. From that order of the Appellate Collector, Mr. Banerji's client went up to the Central Government in revision and asked for personal hearing, but the said Commissioner of Revision Application without giving a hearing to the appellants rejected their application.

3. Mr. Banerji submits that firstly the reasons given by the Commissioner in his order, copy of which is annexure 'E' to the petition the Commissioner has rejected the appeal on different grounds and not on the grounds by which the said appeal was rejected by the Lower Appellate Collector of Customs as would be found in the order, being annexures 'C' and 'D' to the petition.

4. Mr. Banerji also submits that the revision applications being of quasi judicial nature, rule of natural justice should have been followed and the revision petition should not have been dismissed without giving a hearing to the appellant.

5. Mr. D. Sen appearing for the Central Government on the other hand, contends that the appellant cannot have a personal hearing as a matter of right and secondly the contention of Mr. Banerji that his revision applications were rejected on different ground than the ground set forth by the Appellate Collector of Customs is not correct and he refers to the order of the Appellate Collector in annexure 'D' to the petition. Then he submits that there is not much difference in reasonings between annexure 'D' i.e. the order of the Appellate Collector and annexure 'E', i.e. the order of the Commissioner in revision.

6. But Mr. Banerji points out that annexure 'C' which is also an order of the Appellate Collector is entirely different from annexure 'E' which is the order of the Commissioner. Mr. Banerji contends that if proper hearing was given to his clients or his lawyers they could have satisfied the Commissioner.

7. I have myself considered both the orders in annexures 'C' and 'D' as also 'E' and I cannot say that the Commissioner has rejected the appeal on identical grounds as held by the Appellate Collector and there is some substance in Mr. Banerji's submissions.

8. Various cases were cited from the bar on the point of natural justice and personal hearing. Mr. Sen drew my attention to a case in 1957 SCA p. 764 = (AIR 1957 SC 648), (F. N. Roy v. Collector of Customs, Calcutta), where Sarkar, J. as he then was at page 771 held:—

"It was then stated that the petitioner had not been given personal hearing of the appeal that he preferred to the Central Board of Revenue and the application in revision to the Government. But there is no rule of natural justice that at every stage a person is entitled to a personal hearing. Furthermore, the appeal was out of time".

9. Similarly another case was cited by Mr. Sen, (1966) 1 SCR 466 = (AIR 1966 SC 671), (M. P. Industries v. Union of India). In the judgment Subba Rao, J., as he then was, stated:

"As regards the second contention, I do not think that the appellant is entitled as of right to a personal hearing. It is no doubt a principle of natural justice that quasi-judicial tribunal cannot make any decision adverse to a party without giving him an effective opportunity of meeting any relevant allegations against him. * * * The said opportunity need not necessarily be by personal hearing. It can be by written representation. Whether the said opportunity should be by written representation or by personal hearing depends upon the facts of each case and ordinarily it is in the discretion of the tribunal".

10. Mr. Banerji, on the other hand, cites several cases in support of his contentions. The latest case on the subject is in AIR 1971 SC 862 in (Travancore Rayons Ltd. v. Union of India). By delivering judgment Shah, J., as he then was, said:

"It is true that the rules do not require that personal hearing shall be given, but, if in appropriate cases where complex and difficult questions requiring familiarity with technical problems are raised, personal hearing is given, it would conduce to better administration and more satisfactory disposal of the grievances of citizens".

11. Similarly in the case reported in AIR 1970 SC 1302, (Mahabir Prasad Santosh Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh), the Supreme Court laid down:

"Opportunity to a party interested in the dispute to present his case on questions of law as well as fact, ascertainment of facts from materials before the Tribunal after disclosing the materials to the party against whom it is intended to use them and adjudication by a reasoned judgment upon a finding of the facts in controversy and application of the law to the facts found are attributes of even a quasi-judicial determination".

12. Similarly in another case in AIR 1970 SC 1310, (Jethmal v. Union of India) G. K. Mitter, J. said:

"Our attention was also drawn to a recent decision of this Court in A. K. Kraipak v. Union of India, AIR 1970 SC 150 where some of the rules of natural justice were formulated in paragraph 20 of the judgment. One of these is the well known principle of audi alteram partem and it was argued that an ex parte hearing without notice violated this rule".

13. Mr. Banerji also cited a case reported in 75 Cal WN 102 where 'reasonable opportunity' has been discussed by their Lordships in the case of University of Calcutta v. Rabindra Nath Adhikari and it has been said,

"reasonable opportunity means that a person should be told all that have been found against him and should be given a reasonable opportunity to adduce any evidence either to contradict or to challenge that has been found against him".

14. In a case reported in AIR 1966 Pat 248 at p. 254, Para. 14, it has been stated:

"I have already held that even the assessing officer has to act quasi-judicially, and it necessarily follows that the appellate authority exercising powers under Section 35 and the Central Government exercising powers of revision under Section 36 must also act quasi-judicially and given the petitioner a reasonable opportunity of being heard".

15. In paragraph 9 of the petition the petitioner has stated:

"The petitioner prays that it should be granted a personal hearing and allowed to place such other evidence either oral or documentary as may be relevant to the subject-matter of the case".

16. Needless to say, that in spite of this prayer, no opportunity was given to the petitioner appellant to appear before the Commissioner to place his case and the appeal was disposed of ex parte.

17. There is no doubt that this was a quasi-judicial proceeding. I have considered the facts and circumstances of this case and, in my opinion, the Commissioner should have certainly given an opportunity to the petitioner to appear before him specially as I find that the grounds on which he rejected the appeal are not identical as found by the Appellate Collector of Customs.

18. In that event of the matter I make the rule absolute. The matter will be re-heard by the Commissioner of Revision Government of India, after giving a reasonable opportunity to the appellant to appear personally and/or through lawyer before him.

19. There will be no order as to costs.

RANENDRA NATH DUTT, J.

Abdul Rahim and others, Appellants v. Kamalapati Mukherjee, Respondent.

A. F. A. D. No. 1277 of 1967, D/- 18-5-1972.

Index Note:— (A) Bengal Money Lenders Act (10 of 1940), S. 37-A as inserted by Bengal Money Lenders (Amendment) Act (21 of 1965)—S. 37-A applies to transactions entered into even prior to Amending Act of 1965.

Brief Note:— (A) Section 37-A is attracted to a transaction of sale and agreement to reconvey effected by two separate documents even previous to the Amendment Act, 1965. Where the defendants contested a suit on the ground that they had secured a loan and executed separate documents of sale and an agreement to reconvey and took the plea that the transaction in substance was loan transaction and not an out and out sale, the Court deciding the question as to the nature of the transaction, must consider the effect of Section 37-A which overrides the proviso to Section 58 (c) of T. P. Act (1882). It is therefore wrong to hold that in view of Section 58 (c) proviso T. P. Act the defendants are incompetent to take such plea. S. A. No. 1550 of 1960, D/- 10-6-1966 (Cal), Followed.

Ganga Narayan Chandra, for Appellants; Nilmani Goswami, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— This appeal arises out of a suit filed by the plaintiff-respondent against the defendants-appellants for declaration of title and confirmation of possession or, in the alternative, recovery of possession in respect of plots Nos. 1636, 1757 and 1758 of Mouza Maglampur.

2. The plaintiff's case was as follows:—

The defendants were the owners of the plots, but the defendants sold the plots to Gobordhan Sadhu Khan, Nirepada Sadhu Khan and Joygopal Sadhu Khan by three different kobalas in 1364-65 B. S. Since their purchase the Sadhu Khans were in possession of the lands. But in Bhadra 1370 B. S. they sold the lands to the plaintiff for Rs. 3,900/- and since his purchase the plaintiff has been in possession. The defendants threatened the plaintiff with dispossession and hence, this suit. The defendants contested the suit. Their defence was that they never sold the lands to the Sadhu Khans. They took loans from the Sadhu Khans, but the Sadhu Khans advanced the loans after obtaining out and out Kobalas from them. There were separate agreements to the effect that if the defendants paid certain sums within certain dates, the Sadhu Khans would re-transfer the properties to them. So, the defence in substance was that the transactions were not out and out sales but loan transactions.

3. The Subordinate Judge found that the transactions were not loan transactions but out and out sale. He, therefore, decreed the suit. The Additional District Judge, who heard the appeal, does not appear to have made any independent finding about the nature of the transactions on a consideration of the materials on record but he has said that in view of the proviso to Section 58 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act the defendants were not competent to take the plea that the transactions were not out and out sales but loan transactions. When the learned Judge made this finding, he did not consider the effect of S. 37-A of the Bengal Money Lenders Act as amended in 1965. True, the instant transactions took place earlier than that, that is, in 1958. But I have held in Ram Charan Sau v. Tarak Nath Coomar, (S. A. No. 1550 of 1960 (unreported) decided on 10-6-1966 (Cal)) that Section 37-A of the Bengal Money Lenders Act is attracted to transactions entered into even previous to the amendment Act of 1965. So, Section 37-A will be attracted to the instant case also and in view of S. 37-A of the Bengal Money Lenders Act it must be said that the learned Judge was wrong when he said that because of the proviso to Section 58 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act, the defendants were not competent to take the plea that the transactions were not out and out sales but loan transactions. The learned Judge should, therefore, have made his own finding about the nature of the transactions on a consideration of the materials on record adduced by the parties. Mr. Goswami submits that the judgment of the learned Judge read as a whole would indicate that the learned Judge was also of the view that the transactions were not loan transactions. It is true that the learned Judge made some incidental findings about repayment and all that. But that is besides the point. Even if there is no repayment, unless it is out and out sale, title does not pass. Moreover, the most important question for decision of the final Court of fact was if the transactions were, in fact, out and out sales or loan transactions and, as I have said, the learned Judge has not made any clear finding in that respect on the evidence on record. The judgment and decree of the learned Judge should, therefore, be set aside.

4. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree of the learned Additional District Judge are set aside and the appeal sent back to him for re-hearing on merits in the light of the observations made above.

5. No order is made as to costs in this appeal in this Court.

Appeal allowed.

ORDER:— This is an application for determination of the existence or validity of 16 several contracts mentioned in paragraph 1 of the petition whereby and whereunder the petitioner agreed to sell to diverse persons various quantities of jute goods described in the said several contracts on the terms and conditions mentioned in the said contracts.

2. The said contracts were non-transferable specific delivery contracts within the meaning of the Forward Contract (Regulations) Act, 1952. Each of the said contracts contained an arbitration clause to the following effect to wit:

"15. All disputes between the parties shall be referred to the arbitration of Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, under the Arbitration Act, 1940, and Courts situated within the area of original side of Calcutta High Court shall have jurisdiction".

The buyers under the said contracts purported to assign the rights under the said contracts in favour of the respondents. The petitioner failed and neglected to deliver goods under the said contracts notwithstanding application therefor by the buyers and/or the respondents. Thus disputes and differences arose under the said contracts between the parties.

3. The respondents in terms of the arbitration clauses contained in the said contracts referred the said disputes to the arbitration of the Indian Chamber of Commerce, the named arbitrator. Hence the application under Section 33 of the Indian Arbitration Act has been made by the petitioner for the reliefs mentioned above.

The petitioner challenges the right of the respondent to refer the disputes between the parties to arbitration on two grounds:—

First, according to the petitioner, the contracts are non-transferable specific delivery contracts within the meaning of Forward Contract (Regulations) Act, 1952. Thus, the rights liabilities under the said contracts, under the express terms of the contracts, could not be transferred to the respondents.

Secondly, the petitioner submits that if the said contracts are held to be transferable specific delivery contracts, then, the same were and are void and illegal inasmuch as the said contracts had not been entered into by or between or through any member of a recognised Association. The said contracts also were not on the forms prescribed by any recognised Association and no permission of the Central Government was obtained to enter into the said contracts. Thus the said contracts were entered into in contravention of the provisions of the Forward Contract (Regulations) Act, 1952 and/or the notifications issued thereunder.

The same, therefore, were and/or illegal and void.

4. The respondent in paragraphs 6 and 9 of the affidavit of Jupudy Lakshmi Narasimha Rao affirmed on January 20, 1970, and filed in opposition to the petition herein has admitted that all the said contracts were non-transferable specific delivery contracts for jute goods. The respondents, however, has denied in the said affidavit that the said contracts were and are illegal or void.

5. Mr. Vyas appearing on behalf of the petitioner submitted that all the contracts in the instant case are admittedly non-transferable specific delivery contracts. By the very terms of the contracts, they were not transferable as the express terms thereof, prohibited the transfer of the said contracts. Mr. Vyas next submitted that there was no evidence or proof of assignment in the instant case. Lastly, Mr. Vyas contended that in any event, the arbitration agreement contained in the said contracts were and are not transferable. Mr. Vyas relied on the case of Khardah Co. Ltd. v. Raymon & Co. (Pvt.) Ltd., AIR 1962 SC 1810. Mr. Vyas submitted that in the case of Lotus Oil Co. v. Calcutta Soap Works, AIR 1962 Cal 441, it was held on the facts that the contract in that case was a transferable specific delivery contract.

6. Mr. Gautam Chakrabarty appearing on behalf of the respondent on the other hand contended that in an application under Section 33 of the Indian Arbitration Act challenging the legality of the contract, all the parties to the contract must be made parties to the proceedings. In the instant case the original parties to the contract i.e. the buyers have not been made parties and the application should be dismissed on the said ground. The petitioner cannot be allowed to claim any relief as prayed for in prayers (a), (b) and (c) to the petition in the absence of original purchasers. Then Mr. Chakrabarty submitted that the right of the purchaser under the contract has been stated in paragraph 7 in the affidavit-in-opposition. Monies according to Mr. Chakrabarty were advanced under the contracts and became refundable to the purchasers on the petitioner's default in delivering the goods under the contracts. The buyer's right to the said monies under the said contracts could be and have been assigned. The factum of assignment of the contract has not been challenged and so need not be proved.

7. Mr. Chakrabarty also relied on the case of AIR 1962 SC 1810 and specially on the observations of the Court in paragraph 24 of the said judgment appearing at page 1818 of the report. The Counsel relied on the case of AIR 1962

Cal 441, and submitted that the buyer's right to the price advanced could be assigned. According to Mr. Chakrabarty this application has no merit and should be dismissed.

8. In the case of AIR 1962 Cal 441, the contract, as appears from the Report, had no express term to the effect that the contract was a non-transferable specific delivery contract. On an analysis of the said contract it was found that although the buyer could not assign his rights under the contract, there was nothing in the said contract preventing the seller from transferring his right to the price of goods after effecting delivery thereof. Thus the contract involved in the said case was held to be a transferable specific delivery contract.

9. In AIR 1962 SC 1810 there was no express term prohibiting transfer by the parties of rights under the contract. It was held by the Supreme Court that absence of express words forbidding transfer in the contract itself was not conclusive. A contract might be non-transferable by necessary implication in view of the fact that the benefits conferred upon the parties by the contract were burdened with liabilities. On that ground the contract which was subject-matter of the proceedings in AIR 1962 SC 1810 was held to be non-transferable even in the absence to that effect.

10. In the instant case the contract is admittedly a non-transferable specific delivery contract. Clause 16 of the said contract, as appears from a sample form of the said contracts annexed to the petition contains a condition to the following effect, to wit:—

"16. This is a non-transferable specific delivery contract, within the meaning of the Forward Contracts (Regulations) Act, 1952, and as such the rights or liabilities under this contract or under any delivery order, Railway Receipt, Bill of

Thus the buyers and the seller in the instant case expressly agreed that their rights under the contract were incapable of assignment.

11. Section 2 (f) of the Forward Contract (Regulations) Act, 1952, defines a non-transferable Specific Delivery Contract to be absolutely unassignable. In the instant case the parties have agreed that the contracts which are the subject-matter of the instant application would be non-transferable specific delivery contracts as defined by Section 2 (f) of the said Act.

The mere fact that a contract contains an arbitration clause does not by itself make the contract unassignable (See Shayler v. Woolfe, 1946 Ch 320. Mr. Vya's contention on this point cannot be accepted.

12. In the instant case it appears, therefore, that the rights of the parties under the contract were incapable of being assigned and the respondents acquired no right either under the contracts or under the arbitration clause contained therein. There was or is therefore, no arbitration agreement between the parties.

13. The assignors of the said contracts are not necessary parties to this application. They have not asserted any right under the contract.

14. For all the aforesaid reasons this application must succeed. There shall be orders in terms of prayers (d), (e) and (f) of the petition.

15. The respondents shall pay the costs of this application.

Application allowed.
